D.R. WEAVER DEAD

He Succumbs to Bright's Disease at the Age of Seventy-One Years.

VETERAN OF THE CIVIL WAR.

Belonged to Many Lodges and Was a Member of Trinity Reformed Church—He is Survived by Two Brothers.

David R. Weaver, aged seventy-one years, one of the best known citizens of the borough, and a brother of Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, of this city, died at 7:30 o'clock this morning at his home on Manning avenue, following a three weeks' illness with Bright's disease. During the past two weeks he was confined to his bed. His death was a severe shock to his many friends who did not know of his serious condition.

Mr. Weaver was born at Whitehouse and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weaver, of that place. There were four brothers, David R., Peter V., George and John Weaver. George Weaver died about a year ago. Mr. Weaver lived at Whitehouse until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he and his brother, Peter V. Weaver enlisted in Co. A, 30th N. J. Vols., a nine months regiment. At the end of their service they returned and then re-enlisted in the Fourth N. J. Light Artillery, being mustered in at Elizabth.

Going to the front, they were transferred at Petersburg to the Third U. S. Light Artillery, Battery E., serving until the close of the war, being at Raleigh, N. C., when peace was declared. During the war Mr. Weaver saw service at Petersburg, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and engaged in the battle at Fort Fisher. He had an honorable record throughout his entire service. When he served with Co. A 30th N. J. Vols., he was a corporal.

At the close of the war, Mr. Weaver, with his brother, Peter V. Weaver came to Plainfield. That was in 1870. They were both painters and for a time were employed by Martin Giles. Twenty-one years ago the former took a position with Woolston & Buckle, the North avenuepainters, and he remained with that firm until the time of his illness, three weeks ago. He possessed a kindly disposition and he made a great many friends by his courteous manner.

Mr. Weaver was a member of Trinity Reformed church and a sincere Christian. He was a regular attendant at the church services and with his wife was a familiar figure, occupying the same pew for many years. He will be greatly missed. Mr. Weaver was also a member of Jerusalem Ladge, No. 26, F. & A. M., Plainfild Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., Miantonomo Tribe, I. O. R. M., and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. The Odd Fellows will have charge of the service, the time for which will be announced later.

Mr. Weaver was married to Miss Mary J. Naylor, of Whitehouse, and she with two brothers, Peter V. Weaver and John Weaver, the latter of Bloomfield and Somerville, survive.

The funeral will be held at the late residence on Manning avenue, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The burial will be at Whitehouse.

Wilson Home Saturday.

Governor Wilson is due back at Trenton from his Western and Southern trip next Saturday. Word to that effect has been received by Joseph P. Tumulty, the Governor's private secretary.

REV. MR. DUERSCHNER TO GO TO TROY, N. Y.

Rev. John E. Duerschner, of Stone street, who has been the faithful pastor of the German Lutheran church, Grove street, of the borough, for several years, has accepted a call to the pastorate of Trinity Lutheran church at Troy, N. Y., and will enter upon his new duties July 1. In the meantime he will preach there occasionally, occupying his pulpit here at other times. Mr. Deurschner will have a German and English congregation at Troy, and will preach in the morning in German and in the evening in English.

This is the second call extended to Mr. Duerschner, the first one being declined a few months ago. The second call was so urgent and the field seemed to be so promising, that Mr. Duerschner finally decided to accepted it. His people here regret deeply his decision, but at the same time feel that their pastor is answering a call of God.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT IN BARRY OF BALLYMORE

Chauncey Olcott, in his new play, "Barry of Ballymore," at the Plainfield theatre tonight, will present a delightful picture of that most picturesque period in Ireland when the young Irish gentlemen were accounted to be the most dashing blades in Europe, when fox-hunting, steeplechasing and field sports in general made the West of Ireland, and all of it for the matter, famous throughout the world.

The play is from the pen of Rida Johnson Young, who, in collaboration with Rita Olcott, wrote "Ragged Robin," in which Mr. Olcott has had so much success. Mrs. Young has caught the spirit of the time in a manner that is worthy of Charles Lever and has infused more excellent characteristic atmosphere into it than has been sen in any play of the sort in many years. "Barry" furnishes a role for Mr. Olcott that must be a delight for him to portray, as it is splendidly fitted to his personality. It gives him an excellent chance to introduce some fine Irish songs, an opportunity of which he has taken full advantage and it is said that among the numbers are some of the best he has ever writen.

PATRONIZE CARNIVAL DESPITE THE WEATHER

Notwithstanding the rain last night a crowd of people attended the carnival being held by Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus at the Grant avenue grounds on West Front street. It was said last night that the animal show in which Ferrari's wild animals give a wonderful exhibition, is one of the greatest entertainments that has ever been brought to Plainfield. The applause of the crowds shows evident appreciation of the exhibtion.

Another interesting feature of the show is an educated horse whose intelligence is marvellous. The arithmetical problems it solves mystifies not only the children, but their parents as well. Another attraction which might seem to be a joke to many who read it, is the troup of trained fleas. These little but industrious insects are attracting hundreds to their show and amusing all those who get to see them. It takes two years to train a pair of the little jumpers.

A Ferris wheel is attracting crowds every evening while the circle wave is giving some people the sensations of a sea trip or a trip on a Netherwood trolley car.

The Knights of Columbus are using every precaution to make the combined shows absolutely interesting and eliminating everything that might appear to be objectionable. No child need fear to visit any of the shows with a fear of being shocked, because there is nothing objectionable in any of the attractions. The shows will close on Saturday night and Ferrari will remove his animal show to Dreamland, Coney Island.

Funeral of Mrs. E. B. Ware.

The funeral of Mrs. Ella B. Ware, widow of R. Willard Ware, was held at the late home on Third place yesterday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church. There was a large attendance of friends and neighbors, and many floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Chamber Meets Tonight.

The monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held this evening and as this will probably be the last meeting until fall, a full attendance of members is desired.

JOIN BALL LEAGUE

Westfield and High Bridge are in the Six Team Organization.

SEASON BEGINS SATURDAY.

Plainfield at Somerville; Bound Brook at Scotch Plains and High Bridge at Westfield—To Engage Umpires

The executive committee including the directors of the Central New Jersey Baseball League met at the Queen City Hotel, last night, and elected the Westfield and High Bridge baseball teams to membership, making a six-club league, as originally planned. This will insure more rivalry and the fans are promised some fine baseball during the league season. All of the towns in the league were represented last night, comprising Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Bound Brook, Westfield, Somerville and High Bridge.

The fact that Westfield and High Bridge were admitted will necessitate a new schedule and this will be announced within a short time. There was some discussion relative to limiting the class of players allowed, but no difinite action was taken at this time. The games scheduled for Saturday are Plainfield at Somerville, Bound Brook at Scotch Plains and High Bridge at Westfield. The teams will all be evenly matched. There was also a discussion regarding umpires, and it was decided to employ competent men for the positions.

When Plainfield meets Somerville on Saturday at the latter place, there will be some changes in the local lineup. One thing is sure and that is there will be a new twirler, and it was rumored today that "Jack" Dorscher, the former Brooklyn pitcher, would occupy the box for Plainfield. Nelson will be at the receiving end.

It is known that there is a lot of good material in all six teams but doubtless in forming a league, the managers will find it necessary to strengthen some of the weak spots so that no one team will have a runaway race of it. Somerville is known to have one of the strongest teams in the league, and for this reason the other teams will have to strengthen up for the contests.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS' STRENGTH TESTS.

Following out the program of strength tests begun by the High School yesterday afternoon the following qualified in the 46 yards swim—Alfred Manley, who made the distance in 27 1-5 seconds; Raymond Manley, 31 4-5 seconds; Jack Zerega, 32 seconds. Others who qualified in the first class were: Walter Harrington, Gordon Moy, Walter Scribner, and William Davenport.

In the second class these qualified: Verdi Goldsmith, Bric VanNorden, Andrew McDowell, Abraham Sachar, Craig Blair, Walter Dennison, Arthur VanZandt and John Dunning. Rufus Tildon qualified in the third class.

The jumps and discus throw tests have been postponed until next fall as the time for closing the school will not admit of continuing the tests.

Plainfielders Among Graduates.

Among the students who will be graudated from Cornell University on June 23, will be John Jacob Sewell, and George Manning Rittenhouse, Jr., both of this city, as mechanical engineers. Harold Franklin Welch, of Westfield, will also be graduated as a mechanical engineer. At Stevens Institute Raymond Whitall, of this city, will be among the graduates. He also won the $25 for efficiency in chemistry.

Removes His Office.

Walter L. Hetfield, who for the past twenty-five years has occupied offices at 145 Park avenue, today removed to his old offices, second floor, in the City National Band building on East Front street, where he started his law offices thirty years ago. Mr. Hetfield's daughter, Miss Ouida E. L. Hetfield, accompanies her father to his new address. Miss Hetfield is studying law.

No Cause for Action.

The suit brought by William R. Way, through Robert Newton Crane, for commission in a real estate transaction, was successfully defended this morning by Walter L. Hetfield, who was retained by Augustus Frumerei, formerly of Leland avenue, in the District Court. Judge William Newcorn decided that there was no cause for action.

IN FEAR OF WRECK PASSENGERS IN PANIC

Panic reigned on train No. 13 last evening as it was approaching Westfield and in the tumult created by a woman's scream several persons were slightly hurt while a number of others were scratched about the face and hands when they jumped from the moving train.

According to the best information obtainable train 13 was approaching the Westfield station having taken the usual siding expecting No. 227 to pass. Instead it appeared to the woman who first screamed that No. 227 was going to run into the rear car of 13. Emily Banks, 22 years old, a stenographer, of Fanwood, and several other young women, jumped from the train and were scratched by the cinders.

The young womah who did the first screaming evidently had in mind the fatal wreck at Westfield, January 27, 1903, when twenty-three persons were killed and over fifty injured.

It was discovered at that time that an engineer had run by a signal set against him and the loss of life which followed has always been in the minds of the survivors of that wreck. Evidently fear caused the young woman to scream and she jumped from her seat running to the back end of the car. Others followed and in a moment the people in the rear car of train 13 were in an uproar. The three young women mentioned lost their heads and finding the rear door of the car locked rushed to the front and without hesitation jumped off the moving train.

BUNK HOUSE FIRE CAUSES $1000 LOSS

A large frame bunk house, located on Monroe avenue near Sherman, and occupied by Italian laborers employed on the sanitary sewer extension in that section of the city was completely destroyed by a fire, late last night. The origin of the blaze is not known as one end was in flames before the sleeping inmates discovered it. They began hauling out their effects with no thought of turning in an alarm. The fire spread rapidly and the building was half destroyed when someone nearby noticed the reeflction and pulled box 79.

No. 3 company from the West End house was quickly on the scene, but there was practically nothing left of the place when water was turned on. The building was about sixty by thirty feet in dimensions and burned like tinder. It spread a bright glare over the entire western section of the city and despite the heavy rain falling at the time and the lateness of the hour a large crowd was attracted to the scene. The alarm was sounded at 11:15.

The structure was owned by the sewer contractor, James A. Chrystie, and he said this morning that his loss would be fully $1,000 with no insurance. A large quantity of tools were stored in the place and also a quantity of doors, window sashes for use on the new pumping station being built on Monroe avenue below Eighth street. It will mean a serious loss of time to him as well as special piping was ruined by the flames. The laborers lost various belongings and several of them claim to have had money and valuables burned up.

The inquiries of Chief Doane and Mr. Chrystie as to what started the fire met with no satisfactory response. All the men in the place declared they were asleep and knew nothing about it until roused by the smoke and flames. It may be that one of them dropped a lighted match somewhere or a lamp was knocked over.

PLAINFIELDERS IN SLIGHT RAILROAD MISHAP.

The Washington express train which leaves this city at 12:42 noon, met with a slight mishap near Baltimore, yesterday. A passing freight train jumped a switch and struck the rear parlor car, smashing windows and causing a mild panic. Several women fainted and one was so severely cut by flying glass a physician had to be summoned.

The Misses Ray and Anna Warnock, of Craig place, were passengers on the train but word received from them this morning indicated they had escaped injury. They were on their way to Baltimore to attend the graduation exercises at the University of Maryland.

Winners to be Rewarded.

The prizes to be distributed today by Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, special agent of the S. P. C. A., among the hack drivers consist of the followings sums: Albert Hankinson, first prize of $5; Harry Huff, second prize $3; Edward Martin and Harry Barry will receive $2 each.

TELL OF PHTHYSIS

Physicians Address Men in the Shops on the Great White Plague.

IT'S A CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis League Uses This Method of Enlightening General Public Regarding the Disease.

The first of the series of talks on tuberculosis at the factories and shops throughout the city, under the auspices of the Anti-Tuberculosis League was given yesterday at the Saurer Motor Company plant on West Front street by Dr. W. H. Murray. The physician's remarks aroused so much interest that he was requested to make arrangements for speaking to the office staff.

Addresses were also made at the Rushmore Dynamo Works; the Somerset Mills and the Watchung Shirt Factory. A second talk was requested at the skirt factory and the manager is planning to have extra windows installed for additional light and ventilation and is going to make a study of hygienic factory conditions in order to make his plant as well adapted as possible for preserving the health of the girls who work there.

Thus far the managements of the various shops and factories have, with one exception, allowed time for the tuberculosis talks out of the working hours. The physicians who are speaking on behalf of the league have been much impressed by the willing assistance proffered by the factory authorities, and are much encouraged by the keen interest shown in the subject by the men, women and girls in their audience.

Tomorrow, Dr. F. J. Hughes will speak to the day shift at the Spicer Universal Joint Company plant, and on Monday to the night shift. The league will continue its work through next week, when it hopes to have covered all the manufacturing concerns in the city.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF ALEXANDER JOHNSTON.

The funeral service of Alexander Johnston was held at the late home on Grant avenue, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock and largely attended by relatives and friends, including a number of people from New York, former acquaintances of Mr. Johnston, when he was engaged in business in the city. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, conducted the service, during which a quartet comprising Miss Etta Raybert, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; William Holmes, baritone and William J. Tallamy, tenor, sang the Thirty-ninth Psalm, "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Abide With Me." The remains were taken to Woodlawn cemetery, today for burial.

GAVE FAREWELL PARTY FOR JOHN M. DOYLE.

John M. Doyle, of East Fifth street was tendered a surprise in T. A. B. Hall on Friday night last by about 200 of his friends. Games and dancing helped to pass a pleasant evening and vocal solos by Thomas Connolly and James Moore, together with an exhibition of buck and wing dancing by John Taylor added much to the entertainment of the guests.

The committee having charge of the affair included Misses Kathryn McCauley, Anna and Nora Callahan, Sadie Leahy, Anna Doyle, Helen Lynch, Annabelle and Alice McAfee, Edward Mundy and Harry Forrestel.

Mr. Doyle leaves tomorrow for the Pacific coast and will stop over at Chicago, Kansas City, Denver and Los Angeles en route.

Little People's Party.

Dorothy Krog, of Hickory Grove Farm, aged three years, entertained a number of her friends on Decoration Day at a grove nearly opposite her home. The occasion marked the completion of the third birthday of the little miss and a feature was a large birthday cake made by Mrs. Borrup, the youngster's grndmother. Miss Krog was assisted in receiving by her cousin Leister Weeks. The afternoon was spent in playing games and enjoying refreshments. About fifty children were present.

His Arm Broken.

Robert Thickstun, Jr., who came in second in the canoe race at the carnival held at South Plainfield on Decoration Day, was suffering from the effects of a broken arm from which the splints had only been removed the day before. Under the circumstances Mr. Thickstun's performance was most creditable.

MEADOWVIEW KENNELS CARRIED OFF HONORS

At the Long Island Kennel Cluo show held Tuesday at Brighton Beach Race Track, A. G. Hooley's Meadowview Kennels of English setters were very prominent winners, and as their champion dogs were left at the kennels their success with their other dogs must be most gratifying to Mr. Hooley. Deodora Bobba, one of Mr. Hooley's shooting dogs, was brought out and won first owner bred and reserve winners; and Countess, an orange belton bitch won first owner, bred and winners,also medals for best English setter bitch, and president's cup for best bitch in show, all breeds competing.

Mr. Udo Fleishman, of Millstone showed a magnificent setter of field trial type, known as "Happy Day." This dog was greatly admired by all setter fanciers.

MAYOR MOY FAVORS WIDENING PARK AVE.

General approval appears to be given the suggestion that the city authorities take steps to have Park avenue, between Second and Front streets, widened. That there is urgent need of such an improvement is admitted on all sides. The traffic is congested at almost every hour of the day on that thoroughfare when nearing Front street. Particularly is this the case at the rush hours in the morning when commuters are on their way to the trains and at night when they are returning home.

When Mayor Moy was asked this afternoon what attitude he takes regarding the suggestion of widening he said:

"I heartily favor the idea that the work of widening Park avenue begun some few years ago be continued. The Common Council did a splendid thing when it had that street widened from Second street to the railroad. And now I think the improvement should be carried on further. I am convinced that the scheme will relieve the congested traffic conditions and will meet with the approval of the people. To delay the work only means that it will cost more and we might as well be saving in this as in all municipal matters. You may say hat I will be glad to give my support to the widening idea."

Another Speeder.

Walter Kettenring, of Newark, was arraigned before Mayor Smalley in the borough court, this morning, charged by Chief Weiss with speeding an automobile on Somerset street. Sentence was suspended after he had been warned not to repeat the offense

The commission for extending and improving Kensington avenue and Astor place will hold a public hearing tonight at the Common Council committee rooms in the City Building. The commission consists of J. F. MacDonald, W. A. Garrigues and E. T. Barrows.

ONE MAN GETS HOBBLE SKIRT; ANOTHER FINDS PAREGORIC

The ever-present bargain hunter was in his glory yesterday as he stood in the drizzling rain in the open freight-yard of the Central Railroad near Broad street, Elizabeth, and although his clothes were drenched and his shoes were sunk deep in the mire his ardor was not dampened and he did not flinch. The chance of getting something for nothing fascinated bothe men and women.

It was the annual sale of lost and unclaimed articles that was taking place under the orders of the Central Railroad Company, with Thomas Carey as the auctioneer.

Four freight cars full of miscellaneous articles stood on a siding near the freighthouse. Only one car had been disposed of at 4:20 o'clock, when Auctioneer Carey announced that "it would be continued in our next," which means today.

Most of the stock sold consisted of umbrellas in dozen lots and the weather was most propitious for their disposal. If anyone in Elizabeth went umbrellaless to bed it was his own fault and not Mr. Carey's. They were sold at a very low figure.

The rest of the goods consisted mostly of valises, satchels, trunks and suitcases, some of which contained something and some of which did not.

As the last begrimed suitcase was held aloft and Auctioneer Carey gazed at it with an air of mystery he remarked: "This comes from Chicago, if that makes any difference." It did not, apparently, for a propossessing young man paid $1.25 for it and found that it contained a hobble skirt and a pair of woolen socks. He threw away the socks and the skirt he spread on the fence nearby, as mute evidence of his gullability and as a warning to others. A woman purchased a large grip and found in it a choice assortment of lithographic literature telling of the hair-breadth escapes and adventures of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," whose fate was almost sealed by a Desperate Desmond. A man bought a satchelful of——. He opened it at the request of Mr. Carey, who told him that it evidently contained some good old Scotch. It was filled with bottles of paregoric.

Some of Ben Johnson's books, as well as a few of Shakespeare's and Coleridge's went to James Ellis.

"You all know Ban Johnson," said Mr. Carey. "He's head of one of the big leagues, you know. He's written some swell baseball stuff. Take it home and try it on the piano. It will cure your corns."

Every boy in the crowd wanted some of "Ban Johnson," but Mr. Ellis won out, although Mr. Carey's splendid recommendation brought pretty steep bidding. About $100 was collected.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A farmers' massmeeting is to be held at Hammonton Friday. State Senator Frelinghuysen is to be the chief speaker.

While painting a house, B. Frank Zane, a prominent resident of Glassboro, fell sixteen feet, turning a somersault and landing on his feet, escaping with a sprained ankle.

Rev. P. J. Kain, of Woodbridge, has been selected to deliver the address to the graduates of the Glassboro High School at the commencement exercises on June 7.

It is reported that several Law and Order League agents are in Millville endeavoring to secure evidence against illegal liquor sellers, and important evidence has already been secured.

The Boy Scouts of the English Lutheran Church of Bridgeton formed a relay Tuesday and carried a message from Mayor Hampton, of Bridgeton, to Mayor Ware, of Millville. Mayor Ware sent a reply back by the scouts.

On a charge of attempting to pass a worthless check, William Toy, twenty-five years old, of Ninth and Linden streets, was committed to jail in default of bail from the Camden Police Court Tuesday. The complaint was made by Rosalie Taber, of Eighth and Pear streets.

Found apparently unconscious at Second and Mickle streets, Camden, Tuesday afternoon, John Bodine, seventy-five years old, who refused to give his address, was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital suffering from aconite poisoning. He told the physicians that he was despondent because he had been deserted by his children. He will probably recover.

The large safe of the Germania Fruit Growers' Union Co-operative Society store at Cologne, near Egg Harbor City, was blown open with nitro-glycerin Tuesday, but the yeggmen must have been scared off before they could reach the money chamber. The door of the safe was torn off and the window panes and frames of the office splintered. Merchandise was found scattered about the place, but the only thing that appears to be missing is the coin box attached to the telephone pay-station.

Because Mrs. George Seward was ejected with her seven small children from a house at Eighth and Walnut streets, Camden, and at a time when she was about to become a mother once more, a number of boys began bombarding Hyman Denbo, her landlord, with stones. In the police court Tuesday Denbo was charged with assault and battery on Edward Laricy, ten years old, of 831 Walnut street, who, it was stated, was beaten by the defendant in mistake for the real bombarders. Denbo said he had been annoyed by Mrs. Seward's sympathizers and thought Laricy was one of them. He was held in bail for court.

It became known yesterday that Jeannie Granmer and Tessie Woodward, fifteen-year-old girls, have been missing from their homes in New Egypt since Friday, when they went out for a stroll together. When they failed to return in the evening the parents of each thought their daughter was at the other's home, and no investigation was begun till Saturday night.

Thoroughly exhausted and about to sink beneath the waves, far out under the Steeplechase Pier, Atlantic City, where he had been swept by a strong current, Albert T. Tomlinson, of Lancaster, Pa., was saved from drowning Tuesday only by the prompt aid rendered by two companions, who risked their own lives in bringing the exhausted bather to shore. The incident occurred when the beach was crowded, and thousands witnessed the rescue.

Despite the fact that three deputy sheriffs of Hackensack, two local constables and four young men of the town patroled Oradell Monday night, because of many recent burglaries, the residences of John W. Van Buskirk and James Wannamaker were entered and robbed of jewelry and money. In the former home a wallet containing $700 was overlooked.

A brakeshoe, hurled with terrific force from an express train on the Atlantic City Railroad Tuesday, struck Nicola Scardrith, a track walker, breaking one leg and causing serious internal injuries. Scardrith was removed to his home in Winslow.

A locomotive of the Central Railroad Tuesday struck a horse and wagon belonging to the Public Service Corporation on the Halladay street crossing of the New York and New Jersey branch, Jersey City. The horse was instantly killed and the wagon wrecked.

THE FORUM.

Whither Goest Thou?

Editor, The Daily Press:—

Fly time is here and happy is he who can say "there are no flies on me."

"Flies, morally considered, are like a large share of the rest of human folks, they won't settle on a good healthy spot in a man, not if they can find a spot that is a leetle raw." The fly is a visitor that does not wipe his feet, and, when he chases across your strawberry short cake he leaves his tracks there and, if he had just chased across the strawberry short cake of some neighbor, who is twitching with the hook worm, pallid with the white plague, on fire with the scarlet fever, reeling with the blind staggers, or wild with the glanders, you had better let that short cake alone.

The house-fly is bad enough, and he has put the skull and bones on many a dinner plate; but the heart-fly is worse, for he distills into your immortal soul the choke damp of hell.

When I was a boy at school I read an Eastern fable; Abdella sat at his morning meal, when there alighted on the rim of his goblet a little fly. It sipped an atom of syrup and was gone, but it came next morning, and the next, and the next again, 'till at last the scholar noticed it. Not quite a common fly, it seemed to know that it was beautiful, and it soon grew very bold; and lo! a great wonder, it became daily larger and yet larger, till there could be discerned, in the size, as of a locust, the appearance of a man. From a hand-breadth, it reached the stature of a cubit; and still so winning were its ways that it found more and more favor with this son of infatuation. It frisked like a satyr, and it sang like a peri, and like a moth of the evening it danced on the ceiling, and like the king's gift, whithersoever it turned, if prospered. The eyes of the simple one were blinded, so that he could not, in all this, perceive the subtilty of an evil genius. Wherefore the lying spirit waxed bolder and yet bolder, and whatsoever his soul desired of dainty meats, he freely took; and when the scholar waxed wroth, and said, "This is my daily portion from the table of the mufti, there is not enough for thee and me," the dag-faced deceiver played some pleasant trick, and caused the silly one to smile; until in process of time, the scholar perceived that, as his guest grew stronger and stronger, he himself waxed weaker and weaker. Now, also, there arose frequent strife betwixt the demon and his dupe, and at last the youth smote the friend so sore that he departed for a season, and when he was gone, Abdella, rejoiced and said, "I have triumphed over mine enemy, and whatsoever time it pleaseth me, I shall smite him so that he die. Is he not altogether in mine own power? But after not many days the tempter came back again; and this time he was arayed in goodly garments, and he brought a present in his hand, and he spake of the days of their first friendship, and he looked so mild and feeble, that his smooth words wrought upon this dove without a heart, and saying, "Is he not a little one?" he received him again into his chamber. On the morrow, when Abdella came not into the assembly of studious youth, the mufti said, "wherefore tarriest the son of Abdul? Perchance he sleepeth." Therefore they repaired even to his chamber; but to their knocking he made no answer. Wherefore the mufti opened the door, and, lo! there lay on the divan the dead body of his disciple. His visage was black and swollen, and on his throat was the pressure of a finger broader than the palm of a mighty man. All the tuff, the gold, and the changes of raiment belonging to the hapless one were gone, and in the soft earth of the garden were seen the footprints of a giant. The mufti measured one of the prints, and, behold! it was six cubits long. Reader, canst thou expound the riddle? Is it the bottle or the betting-book? Is it the billiard-table or the theatre? Is it laziness? Is it lust? But know that an evil habit is an elf constantly expanding. It may come in the keyhole, but it will soon grow too big for the house. Know also, that no evil habit can take the life of your soul unless you yourself nourish it and cherish it, and, by feeding it with your own vitality, give it a strength geater than your own.

Citizens of Plainfield, are you climbing up the "great altar-stairs of the world," toward God, or are you skulking down the back alley of iniquity? Are you toiling up to the higher levels of being, where you can look along the slopes to everlasting victory? Or are you pitching down, through moral midnight, toward the world which Dante saw? Plainfielder, which way? Toward the star or the sty?

STEVENS HAS A $76,000 DEFICIT

It was stated yesterday by President Humphreys at the graduation exercises of Stevens Institute, Hoboken, that for the last four years the school had run behind to the extent of $76,000. To help out, he said, a graduation class fund had been established and in the fall an appeal would be made for funds to meet the deficit.

Mr. Humphreys, in addressing the class, announced that the Castle recently given the school by Colonel Stevens would be used as a dormitory for about forty-five students and also as a meeting place for the entire student body. He also stated that there was a tract of land adjoining the Castle, which should be purchased, and which was held at $100,000.

Seventy-three students were graduated. The highest honor man of the class was William E. Blythe, of Glen Ridge. The others were George Armstrong, of Paterson; William J. Beamer, of Jersey City; Walter A. Schaefer, of East Orange, and Roland H. Strader, of Newark.

The Cyrus Lawrence prize was won by James Myers, of Elizabeth. It was $50 for promoting student activity. Raymond Whitall, of this city, won the prize of $25 for efficiency in chemistry.

An address on "Efficiency" was delivered by Colonel Robert M. Thompson a graduate of Annapolis.

INSURANCE CO. INSOLVENT.

Receiver for People's Mutual Fire Company.

The People's Mutual Fire Insurance Company, organized seven years ago, was declared insolvent by Vice Chancellor Stevens, at Newark. The company is said to be without assets. A receiver will be appointed as soon as a suitable person can be found who is willing to take his chances of getting a satisfactory reward for his services.

The court was told the company has fire loss claims aggregating $900 standing against it and $3,3000 of other debts, represented largely by notes. The bill asking for a receiver was filed in behalf of Hyman Iskowitz, a grocer in West Kinney street, who has obtained judgment for $150 against the company for an unpaid fire loss. George Scheider is president of the company and Walter Mcear its secretary and treasurer.

Tired of New Charter.

After three years' trial the East Orange charter has been found too cumbersome, and a movement, headed by Councilman John Lenord Morrill, of that place, for the adoption of the commission form of government yesterday seemed likely to gain headway in the next few months.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

John Wilson, of Grove street, was arraigned before Mayor Sanford Tuesday night, on a charge of assault and battery, preferred by his stepgranddaughter, Miss Mary Peterson, in behalf of her aged grandmother. It is alleged that Wilson struck and severely kicked his wife. He was held in bail to await the action of the grand jury.

The Dunellen schools re-opened this morning after several days of no sessions because of the fumigating following the discovery of a number of diphtheria cases. Miss Ethel Rogers, a teacher in the Lincoln School, who contracted the disease, has practically recovered and the other victims are also reported as doing well. None of the cases have been severe.

The wedding of Miss Edna Coriell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coriell, to Philo Park, will take place at the home of the former's parents next Wednesday night. Mr. Park is at present residing in Bound Brook, but is a native of New York State.

The Misses Julia and Pearl Dodwell, David Smith and Clarence Brokaw enjoyed a delightful outing to West Point, on the Hudson Tuesday.

Mrs. Scribner, who has been housekeeper for John Wagner, has been taken to the Piscataway township farm because of poor health.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Denny, of Rahway, have been visiting friends in the borough.

W. H. Taylor has been entertaining friends from Sussex county.

TELLS OF SLAYING TWENTY MINERS.

Washington, June 1.—Francis Feehan, president of the Mine Workers' Union, startled the House committee on rules yesterday by statements in regard to conditions in the Westmoreland coal fields of Pennsylvania, where a strike has been in progress for a year. Feehan appeared before the committee in support of a bill introduced by Representative Wilson, of Pennsylvania, calling for a Congressional investigation of the situation. Feehan told the committee that twenty miners had been killed by deputies since the strike began.

"Some of the men," he said, "were shot by deputies who followed them to their own homes and killed them on their own property. They were not interfering with the mines in any way."

Representative Madison, of Kansas, asked if the deputies who did the killing had been tried.

"Oh, yes," Mr. Feehan replied, "eighteen deputies were sentenced to jail for from three to six months."

"What," cried Mr. Madison, in astonishment, "sentenced to three months for murder?"

"Precisely," Mr. Feehan replied, "and most of them are out now."

"There were 18,000 men who went out on strike,' he said. "When it began the company used the most oppressive measures in attempting to subdue it, and 10,000 of the men, evicted from the company houses in which they were living, left the field. They were driven out of Pennsylvania. But between 6,000 and 7,000 men are still in the field, who have been driven out of the company houses and are now living in tents and shacks on the hillsides. They lived there all through last winter and suffered all sorts of hardships. They are still living there and no one knows when and where they will own homes again."

Killed in Razor Fight With Wife.

John Peck and his wife, negroes, fought with razors early yesterday in their room in No. 224 South Carolina avenue at Atlantic City, until both fell exhausted from loss of blood. Peck is dead, and the self-made widow is dying in the City Hospital in Atlantic City. They are said to have quarreled about money. A revolver, two razors and a butcher knife appear to have been used by the couple in the fight, but the last and most destructive weapons appear to have been the razors, as one was found beside each of the combatants.

Skipwith, a well known singing evangelist of Philadelphia, was engaged to conduct the services and for nearly fifteen days he has stirred the colored people with his gospel sermons. On Sunday, May 21, he preached a special sermon to 200 men and five united with the church, and last Sunday, Mr. Skipwith addressed a meeting for women only, three hundred women being present. Rev. Mr. Bailey and his people appreciate the good work of the evangelist. Tonight the ordinance of baptism will be administered. Mr. Skipwith will preach the baptismal sermon to which all are invited. LOCUSTS SHUN PARTS OF MONTCLAIR NOW.

The seventeen-year locusts which have made their appearance here are puzzling Montclair entomologists by their apparent aversion to certain parts of that town. In Upper Mountain avenue and other fashionable thoroughfares the insects are so numerous hundreds are crushed by persons walking along. In the central part of Montclair, however, not a locust is to be seen.

Some persons believed the smoke of the railroad locomotives in the lower part of the town kept the locusts from that section, but the insects have made their appearance in great numbers along the Erie, in the north end of the town, where the smoke often is thick enough to cut.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

UP TO DATE—Had no money of my own, so took the other fellows money and went to Lakewood Wednesday and bought the very best piece of ground I could find to build a town or city on. It is situated at a one horse depot called Ridgway, but partly made arrangements yesterday to call it Uptodate. The main macadamized road running from Lakewood to Lakehurst goes right through Uptodate, and there is the making of a nice place there. Did you ever know that I sold Highland Park this city? Sold 500 lots there in 1½ years to outside people, while Plainfield people did nothing but kick about it. These lots are for the poor man. The prices will be $25, $30 and $35 each, and no tin can houses can be built there, for the lots shall be restricted to a $2,000 house. If you want to get in on the ground floor with me and I can tell you more about it, where it will not cost me so much. D. Foster Updike, my time is yours, 159 North avenue. 'Phone 1907. 6 1 tf

Since I commenced business only three weeks ago, I have been compelled to hire three men, and three stenographers. A BUSINESS MAN'S BUSY DAY.

Correspondence, Office Force and Baseball Shorten the Hours.

SIX-THIRTY a. m.—Arose. Sun shining brightly. Saw a blade of green grass from the bathroom window.

7 a. m.—Wife reprimands me for whistling "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," at breakfast. Wife rebukes me again for reading paper and answering "Matty" when she asks who is starring now in "Love Watches."

8 a. m.—Arrive at office. Reprimand office boy for loitering over sporting page of morning paper.

8:15 a. m.—Have to pause in midst of my correspondence to correct office assistant, who has informed stenographer Wagner is greatest living all around ball player.

9:30 a. m.—Resume my correspondence.

10:15 a. m.—Office force seems to be away behind on usual routine. Have just finished correspondence. Office assistant ventures prediction Cubs will win flag.

11:45 a. m.—Must attend to those coal contracts before lunch.

11:50 a. m.—Mr. Squeezem of Squeezem & Getit of Philadelphia drops in. He complains that our last shipment has been unnecessarily delayed. Look it up and find there was positively no excuse for it.

12:01 p. m.—Go to lunch with Mr. Squeezem. Nice chap is Squeezem, but he has a lot of fool ideas. Thinks the Phillies are sure to win, with the Giants in the second division. I explained that the Phillies did not have a chance and nearly lost a good customer.

1:30 p. m.—Back on the job. Work does pile up frightfully. Think I will have to shake up office force.

1:36 p. m.—Fred Melrose phoned me about those coal contracts. Confound the office force. Beastly subway service at fault. Company ought to put on more trains or something, so we busy business men would have seats and a chance to catch up on leading news of the world in our few leisure moments. Doubt whether the Yankees will make good getaway without Lou to pull their young pitchers into shape.

2 p. m.—Called to phone to square kick from old fogy out in Lancaster, Pa. Shipments delayed again. Very irritating to have to be polite to those bush leaguers. Finally squared it.

3 p. m.—Gave the whole shipping department my opinion of them. Raked them all over the coals good and hard. Feel better. Foreman suggested it might be spring fever. Told him they had no right to have spring fever.

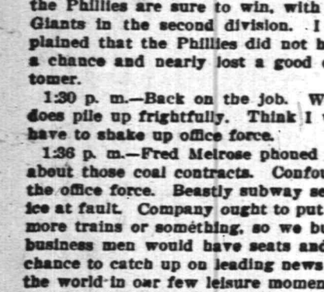
3:30 p. m.—Have finished up my afternoon mail. Did it in a hurry. Takes me to make things fly! Just saw a robin in the tree across the street. Showed Mr. Redbreast to the office force. If I'm one thing more than another it's observant.

4:15 p. m.—Got the office force back at work. They show an incomprehensible disposition to dawdle. I'm never happy unless I'm working.

4:30 p. m.—Evening papers say the Luxatawna company is going to furnish the armor for the new battleships. Our bid should have gone in this morning. Those confounded directors are getting more inquisitive and exacting every day too. Will surely have to shake up office force. By George, I see Chance says at West Baden that his pitching staff will sweep the other clubs off their feet. He must be crazy. Chance never saw the day Three Fingered Brown could beat Matty.

5 p. m.—Office force going home. By hickory, I didn't know it was this late! Well, I'm too tired to tackle them tonight. I'll get up earlier tomorrow and go at them.—Puck.

Solving the Mystery.



Mrs. O'Brady—Oi don't know phat's th' matther wid thot table fallin' t' pieces as 'tis doin'. 'Twas bought f'r seasoned wood.

O'Brady—Seasoned! Begorry, th' wood must 'a' bin seasoned in th' fall, f'r th' leaves do be droppin' aht.

His Changing Calling.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government food expert, was talking of a "new" sort of food preservative. "They are all the same thing under different names," he said. It reminded him of the old caretaker of an Episcopal church of whom he once heard.

This old fellow as he sat on a tomb in the churchyard dismissed as trivial the question of his proper title.

"The good old creed keeps the same for all," he said, "though they may change the words they use. Look at me, here. I used to be the janitor. Then we had a parson who called me the sextant. Dr. Thirdly gave me the name of virgin. And the young man we've got now says I'm the sacrilege."—Youth's companion.

Resourceful Father.

"Cholly, why aren't you calling on Miss Gotrox any more?"

"Her father objected."

"But faint heart never won fair lady."

"I know that, but the heartless wretch got out an injunction."—Washington Herald.

Drawing Inferences.

President Lincoln once told the following story to D. H. Bates, manager of the war department telegraph office:

"I'm like an old colored man I knew. He spent so much of his time preaching to the other slaves it kept him and them from their labors. His master told him he would punish him the next time he was caught preaching.

"'But, marsa,' said the old man, with tears in his eyes, 'I always has to draw infruences from Bible texts when dey comes in ma haid. I jes' cain't help it. Can you, marsa?'

"'Well,' said his master, 'I suspect I do sometimes draw inferences. But there is one text I never could understand, and if you can draw the right inference from it I'll let you preach to your heart's content.'

"'What is de text, marsa?' asked the colored man.

"'The ass snuffeth up the east wind.' Now, what inference do you draw from that?'

"'Well, marsa, I's neber heard dat text befo' nohow, but I 'spects de infruence am she got to snuff a long time befo' she get fat.'"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Trapping a Tiger.

The tiger is possessed at times of an almost supernatural cunning, a wonderful sense of smell and a fine instinct with regard to traps and the like, which make him as difficult an animal to take alive as any existing. Sometimes he can be snared, but not often. On one occasion the writer's native Indian servant ran in in a great state of excitement to say a tiger was trapped in the jungle half a mile away, and the entire camp, of course, at once flocked over to see the prisoner. The trap was exactly on the principle of a humble mouse trap, with a falling door, and built of strong timbers laced together with rattans. The imprisoned tiger was a full grown mate, and it would be difficult to imagine anything wilder than his rage as he roared and stormed and hurled himself in futile fury on each part of the structure in turn. There he was to stay until hunger had rendered him manageable, the incident showing that the tiger can be trapped, although not often.—London Globe.

An Idol With Diamond Eyes.

It is a curious fact and one scarcely known outside of Russia, and there hardly ever mentioned, that the famous Orioff diamond was once the right eye of the great idol Serringham in the temple of Brahma. This precious gem was stolen at about the beginning of the eighteenth century by a French soldier who had made a pretense of being converted to the Hindoo religion in order to gain the confidence of the priests and admission to the temple. The Frenchman first sold the diamond for £2,000. On the next turn it was bought by a banker of Constantinople for £12,000. The banker kept it until 1774 and then sold it to the Russian empress for £90,000 and a life pension. The gem has been in the Russion royal family ever since. As it is now set in the imperial scepter of Russia it presents a flattened, rose cut surface and weighs exactly 194½ carats.

Ancient Iceland.

Iceland was founded A. D. 874 by men from Norway. In the words of John Fiske, "it was such a wholesale colonization of picked men as had not been seen since ancient Greek times and was not to be seen again until Winthrop sailed into Massachusetts bay. It was not long before the population of Iceland was 50,000. Their sheep and cattle flourished, hay crops were heavy, a lively trade—with fish, oil, butter and skins in exchange for meal and malt—was kept up with Norway, Denmark and the British isles. Political freedom was unimpaired, justice was fairly well administered, naval superiority kept all foes at a distance, and under such conditions the growth of the new community in wealth and culture was surprisingly rapid."

His Compliment.

The governor of a western state was making inspection of certain state institutions when he made inquiry as to the progress of a chaplain by him appointed to an insane asylum.

"How is he getting on?" asked the governor, thinking to get an unprejudiced opinion from the official acting as his guide.

"Fine!" exclaimed the man. "His preachin' is very successful, governor. The idiots enjoys it especially."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

No Apology to Offer.

"Why spend three years cultivating your voice if you don't intend to go on the operatic stage?"

"For the same reason, I suppose, that you've spent fifteen or twenty years in cultivating a discriminating taste for alcoholic beverages and yet don't intend to go into the saloon business."—Chicago Tribune.

Assembling Herself.

"Hubby, did you bring home my new switch?"

"Yep."

"And my puffs?"

"I did."

"How about my face powder?"

"Here's your complexion. Now get busy and assemble yourself."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Hard to Deal.

Wigg—How do you get along with old Crusty? Don't you find him hard to deal with? Wagg—As hard as a wornout pack of cards.—Philadelphia Record.

Prejudice squints when it looks and lies when it talks.—Abrantes.

TIZ—For Sore Feet
Tired, Aching, Swollen, Smelly, Sweaty, Feet? Corns Callouses or Bunions? Use TIZ. It's Sure, Quick and Certain.

You Will Enjoy Using TIZ. The Most Pleasant Remedy You Ever Tried and Moreover It Works.

At last here is instant relief and a lasting permanent remedy for sore feet. No more tired feet. No more aching feet. No more swollen, bad smelling, sweaty feet. No more corns. No more bunions. No more callouses, no matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use TIZ.

TIZ is totally unlike anything else for the purpose you ever heard of. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleanses them out and keeps them clean. It works right off. You will feel better the very first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists 25 cents per box or direct if you wish from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Recommended and sold by

Why an Alias?

One afternoon, when the Duke of Edinburgh and Sir Arthur Sullivan, having finished a duet, were sitting down to a homely "dish of tea" provided by Mrs. Sullivan, the composer's mother, it suddenly occurred to her to start the subject of family names and titles, which puzzled the good lady considerably.

"Sir," she said, "your family name is Guelph."

"My dear mother," began Arthur.

"But it is, isn't it?" she persisted.

"Certainly," replied the duke, much amused. "What's the matter with it, Mrs. Sullivan?"

"Oh, nothing," returned the excellent old lady musingly. "Only I can't understand why you don't call yourself by your proper name."

Arthur wanted to explain to her, but the duke would not allow him to.

"There's nothing to be ashamed of in the name of Guelph, Mrs. Sullivan," he said gravely.

"That's exactly what I say," persisted Arthur's mother; "nothing whatever as far as I know, and, that being so, why you should not call yourself by it I can't understand."—F. C. Burnand's "Records and Reminiscences."

A Great Relief.

An old organ blower lay on his deathbed. He was a good old fellow, and everybody liked him. He had always been ready to do anything and everything connected with the church without complaining, but had evidently had his own troubles which he had kept locked in his breast.

The curate was with the old man, soothing and comforting him as best he could.

"Would you mind, sir," said the sick man, "asking the organist to play the dead march over me? Lor', but I just love that dead march!"

"Certainly, with pleasure, Mr. Jones," replied the curate.

"Thank'ee, sir; none o' that there tweedledum Beethoven, you know, but Handel's."

"I can promise that much, my good man," said the curate.

The old man lay placidly for awhile and then exclaimed with fervor, "How thankful I am that I shan't have to blow for him when he plays the loud part at the end!"

The Englishman In a Groove.

In England nine-tenths of the lads of the middle classes look forward to nothing more than a seat at an office desk with a certain number of shillings a week for a certain number of years. To attempt to do anything else would be to run the risk of social ostracism. A young man may loaf respectably on his family, but he must on no account start a business if it involves selling anything or producing anything with his hands. That would be bad form. It would be getting outside the groove. Thus for the great mass of the people England holds no romance. The lad who thinks he could do something is discouraged. Everything is so cut and dried. Every class distinction is so definitely marked. The whole weight of public opinion is against the smallest divergence from the ordinary rule.—Manchester (England) Mail.

Next Door to It.

An acquaintance of the late Josh Billings was one day talking with him about the remarkable increase of imitations and substitutes for original articles, as "oleomargarine" for "butter," "celluloid" for "ivory," and so forth, "and," said he, "many of the substitutes go ahead of the real thing. I guess in time there will be a substitute for everything, though I don't know about 'wisdom.'"

"No;" replied the humorist, "up to the present time at least there is no really good substitute for wisdom. But silence is the best that has so far been discovered."

No Criterion.

Once during the progress of a certain case Sir Charles Darling remonstrated with a barrister for the way in which he was arguing a point.

"You will pardon me, my lord," said the latter, "but perhaps I may remind you that you argued a case in a similar way yourself when you were at the bar."

"Yes, I admit it," replied his lordship, with a quiet smile, "but that was the fault of the judge who allowed it."—London Tit-Bits.

Killed by Fear.

Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keeper and, dabbing her clothes with blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dosing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the "white lady" whose ghost was believed to invariably appear whenever the death of a member of the royal family was to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

Hedgehogs and Eggs.

Some years ago, not being able to account for the disappearance of eggs, a wire cage trap was set in a fowl run. After a little time this was occupied—not by a rat, but a fine hedgehog filled to its utmost capacity the trap. It was reset, to be filled in a few days by Mrs. Hedgehog. No more eggs were missed.—London Times.

Not Funny For the Nephew.

"A little change of heir," remarked the old man as he altered his will, cutting off his nephew in favor of a distant relative.

Enthusiasm gives life to what is invisible and interest to what has no immediate action on our comfort in this world.—Mme. de Staël.

READY TO FIGHT AGAIN.

William Durst, One of Two Survivors of the Monitor, Would Enlist if Trouble Arose.

New York.—No man would respond more promptly to a call to arms in defense of his country than William Durst of this city, the only survivor but one of the crew of the Monitor that gave the Merrimac a severe thrashing forty-nine years ago in Hampton Roads.

The fighting blood of the old naval hero was at its zenith while he quietly celebrated the anniversary of the memorable battle in which he played a brave part. He was with Lieutenant Worden in the pilothouse while cannon balls were whistling on all sides.

"Would I fight again?" asked the veteran after a Grand Army comrade had referred to the mobilization of soldiers on the Mexican frontier and the preparations being made by the navy. "I guess I would. I feel in excellent health and spirits. But," and he paused in his talk, "there's a chance I would not be accepted. I am getting old. We can trounce any nation in the world on the sea and send her vessels to the scrap heap in quick order. We beat Great Britain in two naval fights to a finish, and we whipped her Alabama during the civil war. We trimmed Spain so quickly that the powers of the world were compelled to recognize us as a great naval force."

Comrade Durst, who is now seventy-six years of age, is an engineer and is one of the most interesting members of Naval post 400. The other surviving member of the crew of the Monitor is John Mooney of San Francisco, who corresponds frequently with Comrade Durst.

Indian Princess Shows Sacred Dance.

New York.—A genuine Hindu temple dance, interpreted by a real princess of India, the Princess Sita Devi, daughter of a rajah, was given at the New Amsterdam theater recently.

The princess told of how she came to leave India and brave the tortures and punishments—death itself—that would come to her if ever the Buddhist priests at Deoghur heard of her profaning their religion by the exhibition which she gave here.

The princess is a very beautiful woman and speaks French and English as easily as she speaks her own language.

In a basket beside her was a huge boa constrictor, twelve feet long. This is only one of five snakes which she has brought over with her from India as pets. Two of them are cobras, which at the present time are being cared for in the park zoo.

Escaped Convict Grew Rich.

Lexington, Ky.—Betrayed by an old friend, B. Whitson, also known as Sam Jones, who escaped sixteen years ago from a North Carolina prison, where he was serving a thirty year sentence for murder, was arrested here by Brown, chief of detectives.

The greater part of the sixteen years of liberty Whitson has passed in Letcher county, Ky., becoming rich and doing business under a new name. When taken into custody he admitted his identity, and the North Carolina authorities were at once instructed to come and get the fugitive. Whitson, who is fifty-four years old, was convicted in Bakersville, N. C., for killing C. C. Byrd.

Whitson says that an old friend of his, who knew his record and who became an enemy of his a short time ago, gave the police the information that led to his arrest.

Onium Smuggled in Barrel Staves.

Manila.—Through some clever work on the part of the customs secret service men 199 cans of opium hidden in the staves of barrels containing lamp blacking have been seized and the would be importer arrested.

As the staves of the barrels were rather thick just in the center instead of being hollowed, the smugglers had carved out a small sort of pocket large enough to contain a narrow can of opium in each stave. When the staves were set together it was impossible to see these openings.

A Defeated Conscience.

The secretary of the Kansas State Historical society tells a story about an early day Kansas justice of the peace who will be nameless here:

"This J. P.," said the secretary, "would marry a couple one day as justice of the peace and divorce them the next as notary public."

One time, as the story ran, a man surrendered himself to this J. P.

"An' phwat's the matter?" asked the judge.

"I killed a man out here on the prairie in a fight," was the reply. "I want to give myself up."

"You did kill him, sor?" asked the J. P.

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Who saw you?" asked the J. P.

"Nobody."

"An' nobody saw you kill 'im?"

"No, sir. Just we two were there."

"An' you're shure nobody saw you?" reiterated the J. P.

"Of course I'm sure," was the reply.

"Thin you're discharged," said the J. P., bringing his fist down on the table. "You're discharged. You can't 'criminate yourself. Fifty dollars, please!"—Kansas City Journal.

Trouble For Hubby.

At a recent tea party where the fare provided could not by any means be termed palatable a guessing game was instituted, and the lady who won it was asked to say what she would have as a prize. She greatly flattered her young hostess by requesting a slice of the cake with which some of them had desperately struggled at tea time.

"Why did you ask for that stuff?" a disappointed and still hungry youth asked her. "You know very well it isn't fit to eat."

"I have a definite purpose in view," answered the young lady, carefully placing the piece of cake where there would be no possibility of her forgetting it. "I mean to make my husband eat it—if necessary, to force it down his throat crumb by crumb—and thus convince him that somewhere in the wide, wide world there is an even worse cook than he imagines his inexperienced young wife to be."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Tipless Curse.

"Talk about the tip evil," said the traveled girl. "Now, last summer, just before I left London, I got cursed awfully. It was like this: I had tipped everybody on the place—the manservants, the maidservants, the slavey, the bootblack. Then just before I got in a cab a man up and threw an old soiled cloth over the wheel to protect my skirts as I got in. Nobody asked him. It didn't protect my skirts, because it was worse than the wheel, so I didn't think it was necessary to tip him.

"I wish you could have seen his face. It scared me. He swore an awful oath. Then he said, 'I honly 'opes the boat goes down wid ye, that's what I 'opes!'

"I was pretty wabbly all the way over, thinking it might, but the boat didn't go down."—New York Press.

Too Soon For Her.

Apropos of those who never enjoy the luxury of a carriage save when the death of some one makes for a free ride to the cemetery a clergyman told of a little girl standing at Fifth avenue and Thirtieth street, New York. She was a ragged little thing, and she was watching the carriages rolling past with the most wistful blue eyes.

"Well, little one," he said, "would you like to own one of those carriages?"

The blue eyes turned up, and there were tears in their corners.

"I never rode in a kerridge," she said softly. "Me little brudder died afore I was born."

The Midnight Sun.

The midnight sun is not visible south of the polar circle. It is above the horizon throughout the twenty-four hours at Bodo from June 3 to July 7, at Tromso from the 19th of May to the 22d of July and at the North cape from the 12th of May to the 29th of July. There are corresponding periods during December, January and November when the sun is not seen, but the darkness of the winter is by no means so great as might be imagined. The whiteness of the snow and the glimmer of the northern lights make a sort of perpetual twilight.

The Makings In Church.

"I never knew," said the nervous man, "what an inveterate smoker I am until recently in church, my first visit for a long while. I found myself mechanically rolling a cigarette. In fact, I had it rolled and was reaching for a match when I suddenly came to. Suppose I hadn't waked up? Rather awful, what?"—New York Press.

One of Our Pet Phrases.

"Did any of the inhabitants escape with his life?" inquired the man who wants harrowing details.

"I didn't stop to ascertain," answered the man who is harrowingly exact. "It struck me that if anybody escaped without his life there wasn't much use in his escaping anyhow."—Washington Star.

A Frank Answer.

"John Jones," said the magistrate, with severity, "you are charged with habitual drunkenness. What have you to offer in excuse for your offense?"

"Habitual thirst, your honor."

FEMALE FIRE FIGHTER.

Daughter of Former Russian Minister of Agriculture Is Regular Member of St. Petersburg Department.

St. Petersburg.—The last place in the world where one would expect to find a young woman employed is in a city fire department, for, not taking into consideration the eminent perils connected with the combat of flames and the saving of men, women and children, most women lack that agility and athletic prowess necessary for the successful fire laddie.

In St. Petersburg there is at least one young woman—she is only eighteen—who seems resolved to spend her life in this hazardous vocation. She is Miss Marie Alexandrowna Yermoloff, a woman of perfect build and refined features, who is here shown in the winter outfit of the St. Petersburg firemen, boots, fur cap and all. Nor does she hail from the laboring class.

Miss Marie's father was some years ago Russian minister of agriculture, and she has been reared in an atmosphere of high culture and refinement. Her choice of calling, however, is due to the wild, roaming nature she has displayed from her infancy. She always selected boys for playmates and was seen to participate in their wildest games and often indulged with them in their boldest daredevilries. At sixteen she is seen to cast her books to the winds and spend most of her time in a fire department engine house near the parental residence. At first the firemen poked fun at her desire to accompany them to fires, but when they saw how earnestly she interested herself in the work and the strength and courage she displayed they consented one day to let her don a fireman's outfit and help fight the flames. That very day she rescued two children from the third story of a burning house, and since then she has never left the service, having finally obtained the consent of her parents to be enrolled as an active member of the municipal fire department with full pay.

A Country With Only One Bank.

Porto Plata, San Domingo.—There are no public banking institutions in the Dominican Republic, and but one private bank, with agencies in the more important towns, which buys and sells drafts, makes loans and is the repository of the government funds.

Buying and selling drafts is an important source of revenue to this bank and also to many private individuals.

Money is easily placed at almost any time at 1½ per cent a month and sometimes at 2 and 2½ per cent, with first class real estate or personal security. Long time loans of large amounts are placed at 12 per cent per annum. Municipalities borrowing money for improvements and other purposes pay 1 per cent a month.

There are very few depositors in the local bank. Most of the well to do people, both among the merchants and farmers, never think of depositing their money, but have small private safes or secrete their hoardings in some other manner.

A Hundred Birds Sing at Funeral.

Middletown, Conn.—As the mourners gathered in the parlors of the Hubbard homestead for the funeral of Edwin N. Hubbard a few days ago there was a sudden burst of song from fifty varieties of birds. The chorus filled every room in the house, and for the time the mourners forgot their grief. As soon as the clergyman arose to read the service the birds ceased and silence prevailed. The beautiful chorus came from an immense aviary containing 100 birds of rare plumage and song.

Hubbard had been an ardent lover and collector of birds. His feathered friends seemed to realize that he was dead and apparently desired to voice their praise of him at the funeral.

Twelve-year-old a Crack Shot.

Washington, Pa.—George Cook, a twelve-year-old Washington boy, has the distinction of being the youngest qualified marksman in the United States. Young Cook on a regular military range with a regulation army rifle set up a record at target shooting that many a national guardsman or United States regular might be proud to make.

George Cook is a son of Captain R. M. Cook of Washington, inspector of small arms practice for the Tenth regiment, N. G. P. Captain Cook's son has taken naturally to shooting and astonished local guardsmen by his recent work on the range.

To Cross Continent In Truck.

Denver.—Dr. A. L. Westgard of New York, a special agent of the United States department of agriculture, has left here for the Pacific coast in a five ton automobile truck. Following his arrival at San Francisco Dr. Westgard will start on a return trip to New York. He expects to finish his trip across the continent by August.

KILLING A MUTINY

Dramatic Incident In the Early History of Our Navy.

THE PLOT ON THE OLD ESSEX

Commodore Porter Got Wind of the Conspiracy Just as It Was Ripe, and His Prompt and Drastic Action Cowed the Crew and Saved the Ship.

There has never been a fleet mutiny or a squadron mutiny in the United States navy. The most notorious case in the naval history of this country was the conspiracy to mutiny on the brig of war Somers, which was discovered before it came to a head and resulted in the execution at sea of Philip Spencer, midshipman, son of the then secretary of war, and one petty officer and one seaman.

Another famous case was the one in which Commodore Porter acted with such vigor and promptitude that he completely crushed the rebellious spirit that had manifested itself and saved his ship.

When Commodore Porter was in command of the Essex in the early history of our navy there was an attempted mutiny on board. Here is an account of how it was suppressed which is vouched for as authentic: "While the Essex was lying at the Marquesas islands, recruiting and refreshing her crew from one of the long and arduous cruises in the Pacific, Commodore Porter was informed through a servant of one of the officers that a mutiny had been planned and was on the eve of consummation; that it was the intention of the mutineers to rise upon the officers, take possession of the ship and after having remained as long as they found agreeable at the island to hoist the black flag and 'cruise on their own account.'

"Having satisfied himself of the truth of the information, Commodore Porter ascended to the quarterdeck and ordered all the crew to be summoned aft. Waiting until the last man had come from below, he informed them that he understood that a mutiny was on foot and that he had summoned them for the purpose of inquiring into its truth. 'Those men who are in favor of standing by the ship and her officers,' said the commodore, 'will go over to the starboard side; those who are against them will remain where they are.' The crew to a man moved over to the starboard side. The ship was still as the grave. Fixing his eyes on them steadily and sternly for a few moments, the commodore said, 'Robert White, step out.' The man obeyed, standing pale and agitated, guilt stamped on every lineament of his countenance, in front of his comrades.

"The commodore looked at him a moment, then, seizing a cutless from the nearest rack, said in a suppressed voice, but in tones so deep that they rang like a knell upon the ears of the guilty among the crew: 'Villain! You are the ringleader of this mutiny! Jump overboard!' The man dropped on his knees, imploring for mercy, saying that he could not swim. 'Then drown, you scoundrel!' said the commodore, springing toward him to cut him down. 'Overboard instantly!' And the man jumped over the side of the ship. He then turned to the trembling crew and addressed them with much feeling, the tears standing upon his bronzed cheek as he spoke. He asked them what he had done that his ship should be disgraced by a mutiny. He asked whether he had ever dishonored the flag, whether he had ever treated them with other than kindness, whether they had ever been wanting for anything to their comfort that discipline and the rules of the service would allow and that it was in his power to give.

"At the close of his address he said: 'Men, before I came on deck I laid a train to the magazine, and I would have blown all on board into eternity before my ship should have been disgraced by a successful mutiny. I never would have survived the dishonor of my ship. Go to your duty.' The men were much affected by the commodore's address and immediately returned to their duty, showing every sign of contrition.

"But mark the sequel of this mutiny and let those who, in the calm security of their firesides, are so severe upon the course of conduct pursued by officers in such critical situations see how much innocent blood would have been saved if White had been cut down instantly or hanged at the yardarm. As he went overboard he succeeded in reaching a canoe floating at a little distance and paddled ashore. Some few months afterward, when Lieutenant Gamble of the marines was at the islands, in charge of one of the large prizes, short handed and in distress, this same White, at the head of a party of natives, attacked the ship, killed two of the officers and a number of men, and it was with great difficulty that she was prevented from falling into their hands."—New York Post.

Nora Was Wise.

"Nora," censured the house butler, "if you must break the missus' vases, why don't you break the cheap ones instead of those expensive imported ones?"

"Oh, no," laughed Nora, with a gay flourish of her feather duster. "If I broke the cheap ones she would take them out of my wages."—Chicago News.

Be wiser than other people if you can, but do not tell them so.—Chesterfield.

DUNELLEN TAKES TWO FROM WESTFIELD NINE

The Dunellen baseball team won both of its games on Decoration Day by large scores. The opposing nine was Westfield, and the visitors were not in good form. Dunellen took the morning game by a score of 10 to 0, and the afternoon by the score of 11 to 3. Harney pitched for the home team in the morning, while Wendt occupied the box in the afternoon. Both twirlers worked well, Westfield getting three hits in the morning contest and seven bingles in the afternoon. The scores follow:

HARRIMAN'S NALA GETS CUP TODAY

DeWitt C. Flanagan's Prince Charming Second for the $250 Trophy.

The announcement that military classes would be shown proved a strong attraction at the second day's exhibition of the horse show, today, and the attendance was much larger than that of yesterday. A counter attraction, the Hegeman-Podmaniesky wedding had the tendency to take a number away from the show. The hour for the wedding, 4 o'clock, prevented those who would like to from attending both the show and the wedding.

J. W. Harriman's Nala won the Dr. Selwonk challenge cup this afternoon. As Harriman also got the blue in this class in 1909, the prize trophy becomes his permanent possession. DeWitt C. Flanagan's Prince Charming was second. The son of Harriman's manager, John Donnelly, rode out before the judges and received the cup, amid the plaudits of the crowd.

The officials of the club arranged with the New Jersey Central to have the 1 o'clock express out of New York, as well as the 12 o'clock, with dining car attached, stop here for the accomodation of those who cannot leave the city earlier.

Besides the military classes on for today, there will be the competition for the "Dr. Selwonk" cup, offered by Reginald C. Vanderbilt. Avondale Farm's "Nala," will be a contender for this trophy. This entry won the cup in 1909 and last year Paul A. Sorg's "Lady Tuck" got the blue. Six horses are entered in today's events. Today's card follows:

Class 55-4 pairs harness horses (local) 1:15; Class 16-3 single harness horses (novice) 1:30; Class 39-8 saddle horses (novice) 1:50; Class 14-8 single harness (novice) 2:05; Class 4-3 pairs harness horses, 2:20; Class 41-2 ponies under saddle, 2:30;Class 41-6 single harness horses (Dr. Selwonk cup) 2:35; Class 35-9 saddle horses (up to 200 pounds) 2:55; Class 18-5 tandems, 3:10; Class 60-5 officers charges, 3:25; Class 11-7 horses shown to runabouts 3:40; Class 37-8 saddle horses (ladies' to ride) 4:00; Class 47-13 ladies' hunters (ladies to ride) 4:15; Class 3-6 single harness horses 4:30; Class 27-3 combination ponies, 4:50; Class 6-4 pairs harness horses, 5:00; Class 43-13 qualified hunters (light weight) 5:10; Class 44-5 qualified hunters (heavy and middle weight) 5:30.

Lovers of fine horses could not have been favored with a more perfect day for the opening of the eighth annual exhibition of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, at the horse show grounds yesterday, and with a full list of entries in the sixteen classes shown, nothing was left to be desired to make the affair complete. The attendance was not as large as hoped for, but doubtless the international polo match at Westbury kept a great many away, and those at the polo game will probably be found among today's spectators.

Probably, the event of chief interest during the afternoon was the competition for the Thomas W. Lawson challenge cup, valued at $250. This was won last year by DeWitt C. Flanagan's fine pair of horses, Prince Charming and Rataplan, and the owner came back yesterday and won the handsome trophy for the second time which gives him permanent possession. When he was presented with the cup, hearty applause was given by the crowd, showing its approval.

Mr. Flanagan's pair defeated worthy competitors in Mrs. J. S. Walsh's pair, Honor Bright and Honor Boy, and George Gustav Rohlig's entries, Dignity and Manhattan, but the winning pair was in prime condition and was easily entitled to the blue. Mr. Flanagan handled the reins in fine style over his entries being frequently applauded.

The award in Class 38, the first one judged, for novice horses, caused considerable comment, for it was said that B. Lambert Sackett's entry, Moving Picture, the winner, had received a reserve at the Newark show; also that Mrs. J. Carleton Semple's entry, Miss Easter, had won a blue at Washington. There were no protests and the decisions were allowed to stand. There is some doubt as to the objections raised for the matter was brought to the attention of the judges and no change was made in the awards.

One of the best classes of the afternoon was that for breeding classes. In the first of these classes, Reginald

TOWNSHIP HAS NO POLICE OR JUSTICE

Scotch Plains is at present without a police officer or a Recorder. Justice Joseph G. Clark failed to qualify for the latter office, and so far the township committee have had to send for Judge Tousey, of Westfield. However the necessities of the municipality have required his sercises but once.

Officer George Rabig resigned two weeks ago to accept a position in Elizabeth. Therefore, presents itself the anomalous condition of a whole community without police officer or Justice. So far, fortunately, there has been no ocular outbreak of crime. But the lid is wabbling, although still on.

Disorder has been rampant on the streets, but Township Committeeman Henry Meyer, Sr., has been active in curbing it.

Last week he made two arrests and cautioned a lot of loafers, which cautioning had the desired effect.

Scotch Plains has always had both police officer and Justice and just why the township have failed to get busy in the matter of getting new ones is at present an unknown quantity.

HOME DEPARTMENT SOCIABLE AT HOPE

The Hope Chapel home department held another of its socials at Hope Chapel last night. Over sixty members were present to enjoy a program of unusual excellence. Mrs. George H. Campbell recited several Southern anecdotes and was obliged to respond to the hearty applause. Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor sang superbly Scotch and Irish Ballads and folk songs. Mrs. G. Herbert Condict accompanied on the piano. A quartet from the church choir rendered several selections. It was composed of Mrs. Robert Baillie, Miss Alice Brown, Donald MacPherson and Thomas Hendry. Donald MacPherson also entertained with violin selections.

Rev. Frederic L. Greene, the pastor, delighted the gathering with several tenor solos. Refresments were at the conclusion.

The committee in charge was the following: Mrs. Frederic L. Greene, chairman; Mrs. W. S. Terry, Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. W. H. Cook, Mrs. James Heron, Mrs. Harry Keen, Mrs. James Busby, Mrs. Donald MacInness and Mrs. Thomas Hendry.

Walter Sherman at Proctor's.

Walter M. Sherman, of this city, who has achieved great success in his interpretations of an important role in "Ben Hur," will appear at Proctor's theatre three days next week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with a company of four in a tabloid version of Goethe's immortal dreme, "Faust." He will doubtless be greeted by a capacity audiences during his stay here.

GIRLS GRADUATED

Four Receive Diplomas at the Hartridge School Commencement Exercises.

The Hartridge auditorium was filled this morning when the annual commencement exercises began. Prayer was offered by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church. Rev. Dr. Josiah Strong, of New York, delivered the address. Charles W. McCutchen introduced the speaker. The graduates were Miss Ruth Stanley-Brown, of Cold Spring Harbor, president of the class of 1911; and the Misses Helen Harrington, Edith Foster, and Margaret Buttfield, all of this city. Misses Buttfield, Harrington and Foster will go to Smith College and Miss Stanley-Brown will go to Vassar.

In introducing Dr. Strong, Mr. McCutchen said that everything looked beautiful to him this morning because he was awakened by the thrushes singing in the trees near his open bedroom window, "but we must thank God," he said, "that such a perfect day is possible." Referring to the school, Mr. McCutchen said that the Hartridge School had made a distinct impression on the people of this city and it behooves everyone to listen to the voice of education, as well as to the prophet Josian who is to speak to you. "Listen to his own prophecy," said Mr. McCutchen.

Rev. Dr. Strong made a most impressive address on social conditions. He said it depended greatly whether we were looking backward or forward whether we could see life in its proper aspect, but above all the times in which we live are vibrant with problems of capital and labor, but they may all be solved by service. "We are living in a new civilzation in these days," he said, "and things are moving in and on a different plane. Suppose we were to make changes such as putting Moses, Washington, Lincoln, Shakespeare and Theodore Roosevelt in the places of Frant, Isiah, Micah and other Biblical heroes, do you not think they would prove failures under our present civilization?

"I do not think that Mr. Roosevelt could have withstood the experiences of Milton's hero, of 'Paradise Lost,' and if all those I have mentioned were transposed they would find out the difficulties of living in the present age. The whole secret of coming success in life lies in service. That is the keynote of the situation and will eventually solve the questions existing between the greatest factors in our civilization, capital and labor."

"The greatest problem for us to consider is 'how to adjust ourselves to new conditions,' but knowing how to serve will solve every question."

The hall and stage were beautifully decorated with flowers, the principal color being white. Armfuls of American Beauty roses and orchids were presented to the four graduates. This was the program:

Miss Hartridge's address to her graduates was a fine definition of the duties and responsibilities of life. She presented the diplomas to the four graduates and complimented them upon their splendid work.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS JESSIE REYNOLDS.

A large number of friends and relatives of Miss Jessie K. Reynolds attended the funeral services yesterday afternoon at her late home on Church street. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Miss Reynolds had been a member, officiated assisted by Rev. G. C. Reynolds, of Lumberton, N. J., an uncle of the young woman. Following a hymn sung by a quartet, Rev. Mr. Broek made an address in which he referred to the splendid character of the young woman, taking a text from Thesalonnians, 4, 18, "Wherefore Comfort one another with these words."

Pastor Broek said there was a four fold comfort in his text, first, God is our Father, second, there is a continuity of life, third, a continuity of love, and last their spirits are not far away from us. At the conclusion of his remarks Rev. Mr. Broek read the poem, "Christus Consolator."

There was a profusion of floral gifts and the bearers were Louis Van Ness, Harold Gloak, Ira DeCamp, Harry Hann, Charles Wendel and Edward Reed, the interment was in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

New Baseball League Starts.

The Central New Jersey Baseball League starts its games tomorrow when Scotch Plains and Bound Brook cross bats at Scotch Plains. High Bridge plays Westfield and Plainfield goes to Somerville. Much interest has been manifested in the new league and a big bunch of rooters is expected to be on hand for the three contests.

NARROW ESCAPE

Autos Collide, One Machine Turning Turtle, Pinning Three Under Car.

A locomobile car driven by Harry M. Myers, of Newark, in whose company were William T. Bernhard, of Newark, and two young women who gave their names as "Elizabeth and Evelyn Harrision," and a man who gave his name as "Charles Johnson," turned turtle shortly after colliding with an E. M. F. car driven by Hyman Adelberg, near the Mountainside Children's Home shortly after midnight this morning and fortunately no one was seriously injured. The only serious result of the collision was the breaking of one rib of Alonzo Brokaw and the smashing of both machines.

The passengers in Mr. Adelberg's car were returning from a visit to Mecca Temple, Newark, where hundreds of Shriners were in attendance, and were attempting to pass the Newark automobile when the steering gear of the latter machine gave way. Sergeant Herbert Overbaugh, who was in the party coming from Newark said he made an investigation immediately after the accident and could not find that any criminal negligence was apparent.

It is known that the names given by the young women are fictitious as was that of "Johnson." Those in the car with Mr. Adelberg were Alonzo Brokaw, Fred Hand, Sergeant Overbaugh, Charles Lee and another whose name could not be ascertained. There is a possibility that the Newark man will have to pay the bill of damages.

When the Newark car struck Mr. Adelberg's machine the former turned turtle pinning the two women and "Mr. Johnson"' underneath. The men in the other car jumped to the assistance of the imprisoned passengers and lifted the overturned machine from their bodies. Only a few bruises were found on them which were attended to by first aid remedies at a nearby farmhouse.

FAMILY REUNION ON HER 84TH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Sarah E. Kline, of Sandford avenue, celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday anniversary yesterday at her home on Sandford avenue. It was a particularly happy occasion for she had grouped about her for most of the day her two daughters, Miss Endor F. Kline and Mrs. William VanDeventer, and her granddaughter, all of this city, and her nieces, the Mrs. R. V. Correll, of Pen Argyl, Pa.; Mrs. J. S. Van Sickel and Mrs. Robert Moore, of High Bridge; Mrs. George L. Ramsey, Mrs. L. Hoyt, Mrs. J. N. Ramsey and Mrs. L. Voorhees, all of Lebanon; Mrs. Daniel Downs, Mrs. D. Cox, Mrs. Albert Canfield, and Miss Mary Canfield, of Newark, and Mrs. Edwin W. Davis, of this city. A luncheon was served the dining room being beautifully decorated with June roses.

Four years ago Mrs. Kline suffered a stroke of paralysis which confined her to her bed for two months, but beyond that illness her health has been good. Her eyesight, however, troubles her a bit at present. She was born in Sussex county, near Newton and was the daughter of James and Katherine Van Sickle. She had four brothers and two sisters and she is the only surviving member of the Van Sickle family, her brothers and sister averaging the age of seventy years or more before passing away.

On July 23, 1844, Mrs. Kline was married to A. B. Kline, at the Reformed church of Lebanon. Her husband has been dead over thirty years and since then she has resided in Plainfield with her children.

Her four children are living, they being Miss Endora F. Kline, who is at home with her mother, and Mrs. William Van Deventer, of East Fifth street, Aaron B. Kline, of New York, and J. Barton Kline, of Newark.

Mrs. Kline also has five grandchildren, they being Clarence VanDeventer and Miss Marguerite VanDeventer, of this city; Miss Mildred Kline, of Newark, and Harold B. Kline and J. Ernest Kline, of New York.

Husband Severely Rebuked.

Fred Allen, of Harrison avenue, was arraigned before Justice Snape in the borough court last night, charged by his wife with infidelity, threats to kill her and non-support. The defendant was found guilty on all counts and received a scathing lecture from the court. He was afterward put under $200 bonds to pay his wife $6 a week.

WEDS A NEWARKER

Miss Laura E. Woolston the the Bride of William DeWitt Arbuckle.

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, Miss Laura Estella Woolston, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. Lemuel B. Woolston, of Fairview avenue, was made the bride, last night, of William DeWitt Arbuckle, of Newark. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of All Souls' church, officiated. The guests numbered 150 in all and were from New York, Newark, the Oranges, Somerville and other places as well as the city and borough. The parlor, dining room and hall were prettily decorated for the occasion.

Miss Woolston was attended by Miss Ethel O. Fowler, of Fairview avenue, as bridesmaid, while Charles Leonard, of Newark, was best man. William Woodland, of Belmar, and Howard Woolston, of the borough, brother of the bride, acted as ushers. There were also four ribbon bearers: Edith Shotwell and Charlotte Fowler, Lemuel and Norman Woolston, the latter twin nephews of the bride. Miss Woolston was given in marriage by her father. As the bridal party entered the Lohengrin wedding march was played by Miss Myra Emmons and afterward Mendelssohn's march was rendered.

The bride's gown was a charming embroidered lace robe over cream satin. She wore a tulle veil caught up with lilies of the valley. Her bouquet was of the same flower and maiden hair ferns. The gown was an imported affair and was the gift of the bride's mother, the latter having secured it in Paris while on a recent trip abroad. Mrs. Woolston wore a gown of similar effect only in pale blue. The bridesmaid wore pale blue messaline and crepe de chine over silk. The waist was draped with crystal pearls. She carried a bouquet of pink roses tied with a bow of tulle. The ribbon bearers were in white.

The ceremony was followed by a reception and Mr. and Mrs. Arbuckle left later for a wedding trip. At its conclusion they will reside at Roseville. The groom is a New York broker. His bride has a large number of friends in the city and borough as was attested by the large number of presents they received. The array included silverware, cut glass, bric-a-brac and furniture.

WALTER CRAIG WEDS MISS AMY M. SAMSON

Miss Amy Marion Samson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Samson, of Dunellen, and Walter Simpson Craig, son of former Councilman and Mrs. James H. Craig, of West Front street, were married at the home of the former's parents on New Market road last night. The ceremony was performed at 7:30 by Rev. Ernest R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, and was witnessed by fifty relatives and friends. The library, the scene of the nuptials, was tastefully decorated with palms, plants and cut flowers.

Miss Samson was gowned in white satin with pearl trimmings and wore a veil. Her bouquet was of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Kathryne Samson, as bridesmaid, who wore green chiffon over pink messaline and carried pink roses. Charles Boice, of Plainfield, was best man.

The bridal party entered the room to a harp and violin accompaniment of the Lohengrin wedding march. Miss Samson was leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage.

The ceremony was followed by a reception during which Mr. and Mrs. Craig were showered with congratulations. At the conclusion of a wedding supper, the young couple took their departure for a two week's trip to be spent at Boston and Atlantic City. On returning they will make their home in a Swiss cottage just erected for them on New Market road, adjoining the Samson residence.

Mr. Craig is an employe of the J. Pierrepont Morgan banking house in New York and the large array of wedding gifts included a case of dining silver from the office force. Both young people are widely known in both Plainfield and Dunellen.

NONE APPEARS AT COMMISSION HEARING

Elliott T. Barrows, William A. Garrigues and J. Fred McDonald, commissioners appointed to treat with property-owners in the matter of the proposed opening of Kensington avenue, met last night in the office of Mayor Moy on North avenue, but as none of the property owners appeared, the session was a short one.

The fact that the protesting property-owners on Kensington avenue, have taken this matter to the Supreme Court on certiorari proceedings, has had a tendency to temporarily hold it up. The writ is returnable at Trenton on Monday. Winfield S. Angleman is associated with Howard H. Williams in representing the property-owners who object to the improvement being made. While no official announcement has been made of the fact, it is believed that the Council will probably retain Judge Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, to represent the city's interest. Just why the commissioners continue to hold meetings is not plain to some people, for the certiorari proceedings act as a stay in this as well as all other matters pertaining of the proceedings.

HEAVENLY REST'S S. S. ENTERTAINMENT

The Sunday-school children of the Church of the Heavenly Rest gave an entertainment last night in the Parish house before a capacity audience. The program pleased the crowd, the work of some of the younger children being commendable, reflecting credit on the Misses Alice and Elizabeth Foster, who directed the entertainment. A sale of ice cream followed the conclusion of the program. A goodly sum was realized for the church treasury.

The program follows: Piano solo, Theodore Martin; recitation, "A Queer Little House," Jessie Stillman, short sketch, "The Quarrel," Mabel Dorflinger and Ida Brooks; recitation, "I'm Papa's Little Darling," Helen Mills; piano solo, Eve Chamberlin; sketch, "The Sick Doll," Ida Brooks, Thelma Cook and Dorothy Wilkins; recitation, "A Secret," Alice Meletskt; drill,"A Dutch Flirtation", eight small girls; recitations, Richard Borden; violin solo, college medley, Hector Desroachers; piano solo, Miss Hawkins; vocal solo, "All That I Ask is Love," Miss Josephine Desroachers. A one act playlet entitled "Gertrude Mason,. M. D.," completed the affair. Those taking part in the playlet were the Misses Anna Hull, Edna Desroachers, Alice Brentnall, Grace Ludgate, Grace Squier, Hazel Hitchcock and Florence Eveland.

TO CIRCULATE PETITION FOR COMMISSION GOV'T

Mayor G. W. V. Moy, together with about a dozen citizens who are interested in the plan to secure the adoption of the commission form of government for this city, met last night to discuss the matter. The movement, which is strictly non-partisan, has already aroused a great deal of interest here. A number of petitions are now being prepared and they will be placed in all the drug stores tomorrow, where citizens may sign then. Other petitions will be in the hands of those who are advancing the interest of the movement.

The law provides that to secure an election, twenty per cent. of the legal voters at the last election must sign the petitions, and it futher provides that the election must be held on the third Tuesday following the date of filing the petition. No date is fixed by law for the filing of petitions.

Mayor Moy, in speaking about the proposition today, said that he has always favored it and is anxious that it shall be given a thorough test. He wants it understood that the local movement is strictly non-partisan and any person who is interested irrespective of party affiliations is invited to lend their support. Another meeting will be held some night next week.

Ran Over a Boy.

William Groves, a hackman, while driving through North avenue yesterday afternoon at about 5 o'clock, ran over Robert Perrine, an eight-year-old boy, who lives at 136 North avenue. According to the police Groves was not to blame as Perrine ran directly in front of his horse while playing in the street. The boy's injuries were slight and he was taken to his home by two comrades.

MISS HEGEMAN BARON'S BRIDE

Charming Daughter of B. Arrowsmith Hegeman Wedded to Tibor Podmanicsky, Hungarian Nobleman.

Miss Virginia Hegeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., formerly of the borough, but now of New York City, and Baron Tibor Podmaniczky, of Hungary, were married this afternoon at the Church of the Holy Cross, in the borough. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, performed the ceremony, in the absence of Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the church, who was called away. Preceding the religious ceremony, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, preformed the civil ceremony at the home of Charles W. McCutchen, on Rockview avenue. The edifice was thronged with distinguished guests from New York, Philadelphia and many other points. Among them was Alexander von-Nuber, Hungarian vice Consul at New York.

The bride entered the church accompanied by her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown, the bodice of which was made of point duchess lace worn by the bride's mother on the occasion of her marriage. The gown itself was of moire antique silk which was worn by her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Matthews, fifty-three years ago on the occasion of her marriage. The court train was of satin to match the gown. She wore a veil of rare old Honitan lace, and carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and white orchids.

The bride was preceded by the four ushers, Peter B. Matthews, Rougier Thorne, Howard L. C. Roome and Clarence S. Roome. The bridesmaids were Miss Jessica S. Marshall, of Duluth, Minn., and Miss Margaret McCutchen, of this city, and the maid-of-honor was Miss Alice B. McCutcheon, of Greenwich, Conn. The matron-of-honor was Mrs. Albert S. Church, formerly Edith C. Fisk, of this city. They were gowned in apple green chiffon over pale green satin. They wore poke bonnets and carried bouquets of Tausendonchon roses. The best man was Harold A. Hegeman, brother of the bride.

The bridal party was met by the groom and best man, at the chancel step, where the betrothal took place, following which the bride and groom proceeded to the chancel rail where the marriage ceremony was performed As the party entered the church, the Lohengrin wedding march was played by W. S. O'Brien, organist of the church, assisted by Udo Gossweiler, 'cellist, and the Mendelssohn wedding march was rendered as the party left the edifice.

The church was artistically decorated by the use of Southern smilax, asparagus ferns, palms and white peonies, forming a most attractive setting for the ceremony. On either side of the chancel palms were banked, the whole scheme being very effective. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. McCutchen, where the reception was held, the decorations consisted chiefly of palms and asparagus ferns, attractively arranged throughout the large and spacious rooms. The arrangement at the house for the guests was such as to eliminate any possible confusion.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Charles W. McCutchen, on Rockview avenue. The bridal party received at the extreme end of the music room, the guests passing out on the terrace surrounding the house, entering the reception hall, where von Barr's orchestra rendered popular music, which lent much to the prevailing happiness of the occasion. The supper was served by Maresi. Between five and six hundred guests attended both the wedding ceremony and reception. The bride was the recipient of a large collection of costly gifts, which were not shown because they had all been sent to the residence of the bride's parents in New York.

The bride is very popular in society. She has spent much time in travel. The couple will leave for Europe tomorrow. They will reside at Freiberg, Germany, where Baron Podmaniczky is pursuing his medical studies at the University of Freiberg.

The bride's father is the wealthy president of the United States Metal and Manufacturing Company, of 165 Broadway, New York, one of the largest railway supply houses in America. He was formerly Mayor of North Plainfield, and while a resident there was a political power for years in Somerset county.

NEW CHAPEAUX.

Prominent among the seasonable novelties is the popular "Napoleon," together with a quaint shape, designated the "Messenger," as the outline follows somewhat that of the hat worn by the Parisian bank messengers. These, fashioned of hemp straw, the turned-up brim of Tagal, or some flexible plait straw, make ideal traveling headgear, and are bound to be in much evidence.

For motor bonnets, the purest Empire modes are affected, and, as may be imagined, are exceedingly becoming, with their quaint pleated straw crowns. But these are just a few picked haphazard out of the wealth of choice that only a personal inspection can enable one to appreciate.

An assured success may be predicted for a new stitched suede hat, which is being brought out in two styles. The colors of the suede are particularly good, and are perhaps most irresistible in emerald, cerise and violet.

Among the more recherche picture shapes a white Tagal recalls itself vividly, veiled with chiffon, and the brim lined with mole velvet, while in lieu of the ubiquitous ostrich plumes comes two beautiful hand-made lace feathers.

Fisher—Cramper.

Miss Abby Cramner, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. William Stockton Cramner, was married at noon yesterday, in the First Reformed church, to Douglas J. Fisher, of Sayreville. The wedding ceremony was performed by the bride's father, the pastor of the church. There were no bridesmaids. Dr. Cramner gave a public invitation to his congregation on Sunday last, to be present at the ceremony yesterday. After the ceremony a dinner was given at the parsonage, on North Bridge street, to the immediate families.

ACKERMAN'S PLANS FOR A JOURNEY IN EUROPE.

When asked regarding a report that he contemplated leaving the State for a protracted trip, Acting Governor Ackerman said Tuesday afternoon that he hoped to start for Europe about the middle of July. Until that time, he added, he would be in New Jersey prepared to act at any time during the absence of Governor Wilson. Should the Governor leave the State after the middle of July, Speaker Kenny of the House will be called upon to serve in his absence.

The Acting Governor signed twelve requisitions on Wednesday afternoon besides disposing of other business connected with the executive office. He has not touched anything but routine matters and will not do so unless some occasion should arise requiring immediate action.

AGED RUBBER MANUFACTURER DIES AT TRENTON.

After an illness of more than a year, Allan Magowen, father of former Mayor Frank A. Magowan, of Trenton, and one of the pioneer rubber manufacturers of the country, died at his home Wednesday. He is survived by six children.

Mr. Magowan was born seventy-six years ago in the north of Ireland and came to this country when a child. His career in the rubber business began in 1850, when he was employed in a factory in New York. Four years later he removed to Trenton, where during his entire business career he was affiliated with the rubber industry.

Fruit Jar Free.

With the issue of the Sunday North American for June 4 there will be published a coupon entitling the holder to go to his nearest grocer and secure a one-quart Atlas E. Z. Seal Jar absolutely free. This proposition interests every reader of this newspaper. The manufacturers of the jar are so confident of the superiority of the easy-seal fruit jar over any other jars now on the market that they believe the best way to convince the people of this fact is to give them one absolutely free. They feel that after one jar gets into the house it will mean the introduction of many more.

BOROUGH SEWER BILL HEARING ON MONDAY

Governor Wilson has arranged for several hearings on important bills at Trenton next Monday, and among those of interest to North Plainfield will be that on Bill No. 301, known as the Frelinghuysen measure, authorizing boroughs to make changes in sewer plants. The purpose is to legalize all past acts of the commission and avoid holding another election. This hearing is set for 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Mayor Newton B. Smalley and W. J. Buttfield will be present to represent the interests of North Plainfield. Bound Brook will have a delegation on hand to oppose the signing of the measure. The bills upon which hearings will be given are scheduled as follows:

10:30 a. m., Frelinghuysen measure authorizing boroughs to make changes in sewer plants.

11 a. m., Griffen measure, providing that the county committee of each party shall be elected for two years at the primary election.

12 a. m., Mylod bill, requiring pawnbrokers to furnish daily to police list of articles pawned.

12:15 p. m., Brown bill permitting East Orange to take water from Livingston and supply it to farmers.

12:30 p. m., Bradley measure, providing for initiative, referendum and recall in the new Camden charter.

2 p. m., Donnelly bill, for first-class cities regarding finance committee.

2:30 p. m., Osborne measure abolishing contract work in state prison and other penal institutions.

3:15 p. m., Streitwolf bill, amending the death act so that personal representatives may sue for damages by reason of the death of the person they represent.

3:30 p. m., Silzer bill, requiring railroads to pay men once every two weeks.

Because neither of the liquor bills in the hands of the Governor was put on the day schedule, it was concluded that they have already been put aside for veto messages. They make it a misdemeanor for a minor to misrepresent his age to a saloonkeeper, and permit the delivery of liquor in "dry" territory.

Woodhull & Martin Co. "The Store of Quality"

HERE AND THERE.

"Made at Ticonderoga" and formerly in the possession of Charles Badgley, (deceased), a life member of the Newark Historical Society, an old powder horn curiously carved, was exhibited today at the Daily Press office.

John Badgley, of a very old New Jersey family, formerly residing a few miles north of the "Deserted Village," Feltville, has had possession since the death of his brother and recently relinquished the relic in an exchange.

The horn is about three inches in diameter tapering to half an inch. Eventually carved by an amateur, yet well and neatly executed with gometrical and floral designs, the horn bears the inscription "John Berdan, his horn, 1776, made at Ticonderoga, No'b'r 23."

According to information received from Charles Badgley, "John Berdan" belonged to Captain Potter's Company, Col. Jonathan Dayton's Regiment, 3rd, N. J.

Berdan lived somewhere between Madison and Chatham. He was a private in the Revolutionary War, his name appearing on the roster. The horn is now the property of Stephen Townsend, of this city.

A crowd of people estimated to number of 5,000 attended the carnival at the Grant avenue and West Front street grounds last night. There is no doubt but that that carnival will prove a success financially and otherwise.

No Child Drowned.

A report was circulated yesterday that a child was drowned in the brook in the rear of 623 East Front street. An investigat ion made by Patrolmen Dobson and McDonald revealed a dead canine in the stream which was immediately interred.

SPRING BLOUSES.

Lingerie waists are not extremely popular in Paris; whatever ones there are are of allover embroidery, of batiste or of plain and fancy lawn. Percale and linen are used for tailored waists.

As to styles, the peasant or kimono sleeves is prevalent, and sleeves are elbow or three-quarter length. The principal trimmings are embroidered designs, linen or valenciennes insertions and bands of embroidery.

The dressy separate blouse is seen in full force, in all the ateliers. Veiled effects are still seen, to complete the color scheme of the two-piece suits and peasant sleeves, short, are seen here also. Of course, the citayenne or peplum blouse is in evidence everywhere finished with a wide, crushed girdle or a three-inch tailored belt.

Jumpers are black, especially for wear over lingerie blouses. They are made to fit snugly at the collar line, the sleeves ending a few inches above the elbow. They are shown in chiffon, voile, marquisette and fancy sheer fabrics and in many cases seem only a modification of he veiled blouse, except that they are cut separate and can be worn over many foundations.

The side frill, by the way, has been largely supplemented by the double frill, one down each side of the blouse. This is frequent in white net, with black net border and tucked or pleated its whole length.

THE REAL ATTRACTION AT THE HORSE SHOW

Dividing the honors with the fine array of thoroughbred equines that are shown in the ring, society is playing an important part in the success of the eighth annual horse show being held this week. The beautiful weather of yesterday had a tendency to attract the women in large numbers and many fine gowns were noticed.

The international polo match kept many out of town women away from the local show, yesterday, but the Plainfield women of prominence were there to lend their interest and help make the affair a brilliant one.

Many praiseworthy comments were heard here and there about the grounds, both as to the attractive surroundings so well-appointed, and the efforts of the club to provide such a fine show. The only regret seemed to be that not more of the Plainfield people were not patronizing the affair, and thus help to encourage the club in its work to maintain this worthy attraction. One officer remarked yesterday that the show is not in any sense a society one, that all the people of Plainfield will be welcomed to attend.

Among the familiar faces noticed in the boxes and the grandstand yesterday were Mrs. Pierre Mali, Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Mrs. H. G. Runkle, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Henry C. Irons, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Reed and the latter's sister, Mrs. Madge Clark-Mack, and Miss Madeline Reed, A. A. Clark, of Somerville; Mrs. William C. Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joel Fisk, Baron Tibor Podmaniczky, of Hungary; Miss Jessica Marshall, of Duluth, Minn.; Mrs. L. E. Waring and daughter, Louise Waring, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Buttfield, Miss Buttfield, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Rowland, the Misses Finch, Miss Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mrs. C. Wesley Holland, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Hooley, Mr and Mrs. A. G. Hooley, Mrs. Morris J Dumont, Miss Alice Hoadley Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McGee, Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Mrs. Augustus V. Heeley, Miss Bessie Flanders, Miss Mary Runkle, Miss Mabel B. Hooley, Miss Helen Ray Hooley, Miss Frederica Bull, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Charles, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Samuel Willetts, of Long Island; Reginald C. Vanderbilt, W. A. McGibbon, Wilfred Jay, J. W. Harriman, George P. Mellick, Charles W. McCutchen.

A feature of the show is the concert given each afternoon by Charles Suhr's Imperial Military Band. Popular programs have been arranged and the music helps to enliven the occasion.

Smoke Causes Scare.

A still alarm was received at Fire headquarters last night at 8:12 for a supposed fire in the Park Avenue Baptist church. When Chief Doane arrived he found the place filled with smoke and believing a bad blaze to be under headway turned in an alarm from box 26. It was afterwards learned that the janitor had been burning old papers in the furnace and a blocked chimney had caused the smoke to pour out in the church.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

UP TO DATE—Had no money of my own, so took the other fellows money and went to Lakewood Wednesday and bought the very best piece of ground I could find to build a town or city on. It is situated at a one horse depot called Ridgway, but partly made arrangements yesterday to call it Uptodate. The main macadamized road running from Lakewood to Lakehurst goes right through Uptodate, and there is the making of a nice place there. Did you ever know that I sold Highland Park this city? Sold 500 lots there in 1½ years to outside people, while Plainfield people did nothing but kick about it. These lots are for the poor man. The prices will be $25, $30 and $35 each, and no tin can houses can be built there, for the lots shall be restricted to a $2,000 house. If you want to get in on the ground floor with me and I can tell you more about it, where it will not cost me so much. D. Foster Updike, my time is yours, 159 North avenue. 'Phone 1907. 6 1 tf

MY SIGNAL—The one signal that will rent any one house in Plainfield. It reads like this: This is not for rent, but to look at. The object of having something different is this. Just read it on any house, and see if you can forget about it. And if you cannot forget it, can you forget me? Since I commenced business only three weeks ago, I have been compelled to hire three men, and three stenographers. It must be because everything is different for they are all not only busy, but doing business.. D. Foster Updike, or my time is yours, 159 North avenue. 'Phone 1907. 5 29 6

The Cotton Exchange expelled two members of the firm of Edward Moyse & Co., and suspended a former partner of the firm for one year.

It was announced at Washington that the Emperor of Russia would personally visit the American battleships during their stay at Cornstadt.

Henry A. Schieb was held fast in the New York police net, a charge of homicide for the death of his wife having been made "on information and belief."

Joseph G. Thorp, testifying at the hearing over the contest of the Bull will, said he believed Mrs. Bull's death was hastened by her taking an Indian tonic.

MOURNING ACCESSORIES.

A woman in mourning often misses it in her accessories. Her gowns and hats may be quite correct but she wears jewelry or carries bags and other belongings that are not suitable.

For the deepest black it is good form to wear nothing but black jewelry. This means a new supply, as none of the old is permissible save one's engagement ring. Some women even dispense with that.

Black enamel, onyx beads and cut onyx dull jet in beads and cabuchons are most used. For cheaper pins there is gun metal, which wears badly and soon looks rusty, and the various compositions made to represent enamel.

Women who can afford it have dog collars, chains, pins and brooches of onyx to match. The first cost of this is offset by the lasting qualities.

Twisted ropes of tiny jet beads make good-looking watch chains, to which is attached a watch of black enamel. Other chains are of detached enamel links on the order of the antique silver ones.

The simpler the lines of mourning jewelry the better form it is. Little more is worn than is necessary, and long bar pins are better liked than fancy brooches, even for the front of a collar.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN AT MT. OLIVE CHURCH

Over 250 members and friends of the Mount Olive Baptist church, on Liberty street, enjoyed the last concert to be held in the present church auditorium, last night. The next entertainment to be given by the members of the Mt. Olive Baptist church will be held in a modern edifice, which will be erected upon the site of the present structure.

The concert given last night was announced as an elaborate affair and it proved to be a. greater success than was anticipated. Following the entertainment supper was served in the Sunday-school roms, ice cream and cake were also on sale. Over $50 was realized.

This was the program: Soprano solo, Mrs. George White; paper on "Education," Miss Daisy Randolph; solo, Miss Patsy Lauder; piano solo, Miss Josephine Stewart; paper, "Women's Duty in the Church," Mrs. C. J. Mackoy; solo, Miss Bertha Hunt; piano solo, Miss Mildred Lane; violin solo, Elmer Venable accompanied by Arthur Venable; recitation, Miss Beatrice Chapman; solo, Mrs. J. C. Anderson; paper, "The Uplift Movement," Mrs. R. H. Carter; song, Seymour VanBlake.

Mrs. L. M. Dempsey, Mrs. Lula Fields and Rev. M. W. Vaughn headed a capable corps of willing workers who provided the good things to eat at the supper which followed the concert.

LAWN FESTIVAL FOR "SILVER BAY FUND."

The Silver Bay Club met at the Y. M. C. A. last night and planned to hold a lawn festival at the association on Thursday night, June 8, at which time the interesting feature will be the burning of the $11,0000 mortgage on the association property. This is made possible by the bequest of $10,000 to the association by Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, and the raising of $1,000 by members of the association. The affair will be made one of great rejoicing.

In connection with the festival, the association has also secured Kenneth Clark, of Princeton, who will present a fine musical program. He is well-known here, having appeared at the Park Club and the Hartridge Auditorium on several occasions Refreshments will also be served.

Lots of Fun at Proctor's.

Edna Mayfair, who is appearing at Proctor's theatre this week is exceedingly clever in her imitation of stage celebrities, including Marie Dressler, Carrie DeMar and Vesta Victoria. Margaret McGill & Co., in "O, You Steve," are good, while Donovan and Arnold, the king of Ireland and the Queen of vaudeville, are one continuous laugh. Rice and Lamont, comedy arcobats, are funny as the "Bumpty-Bumps." Proctor's is one of the most delightful places to spend an hour these days.

Sunday-school Class Social.

Sunday-school Class No. 10, of Trinity Reformed church, of which Ralph O. Martin is the teacher, was entertained last evening at the home of Alfred and Howard Willett, on Craig place. The affair was in the nature of a sociable, with games and refreshments. An amusing feature was the playing of a game called "Initiation," which afforded no end of fun. Several boys were initiated.

For the Heathen Only.

A collection was being taken up in a Scotch church one Sunday on behalf of the heathen. The minister made a stirring appeal, and the warden started his round with the box. One of the first members of the congregation to whom he offered it, says a writer in the Church Family Newspaper, was evidently ill disposed to the cause.

In a stage whisper, heard alike by congregation and pastor, this man said in blank vernacular:

"Tak' it awa', lad. I'm not going to give out."

At that period the collection boxes were taken direct into the vestry. Down came the preacher from the pulpit, went into the vestry, brought out one of the boxes and marched straight toward the gentleman, all the congregation imagining that the minister was going to shame the unbeliever into giving something.

The clergyman offered the box to the heretic with the naive remark:

"Tak' what thou wantest, lad. It has been gathered for the heathen."

Correct Time in Egypt.

The working of the oriental mind was delightfully illustrated in a story which Professor Turner told the Mathematical association. He had been spending the Christmas vacation in Egypt to supervise the erection of a telescope at Helouan. Captain Lyons, who was in charge of the instrument, said that he had found that at noon every day a gun was fired and was anxious to know how the system worked. Accordingly he interviewed the gunner and asked how he knew when to fire the signal. "Oh, I look at my watch," said the official. "And how do you correct your watch?" asked the captain. "I take it to the maker in Cairo and he tells me the error." Forthwith Captain Lyons interviewed the watchmaker and asked him how he checked the error of the watch. "I get the correct time from the gun," said that simple craftsman. And thus time was told in Egypt.—London Standard.

The Chinaman's Will—A Puzzle.

A Chinaman, dying, left eleven sheep and three sons and, making a will, left one-half of his estate to his eldest boy, one-fourth to the next and one-sixth to the third son. They wished to divide without killing a sheep, but could not see how to do it, so they sent for a wise man. Sending to his own fold for a sheep, he put it in with the eleven. Now take your half—six, said he to the eldest, and he did so; the second, take your fourth—three; the younger, take your sixth and begone—two, and they all did so, when the wise man drove his own sheep home.

Was the division according to the will?

Considerate.

"What shall we do, John," said the farmer's wife, who had retained much of her sentiment through twenty-five years of married life—"what shall we do to celebrate our silver wedding?"

"Reckon up where all the silver's gone to in bringing up our family," grumbled he.

"Oh, no, John; it must be something real good and out of the ordinary. I tell you what. Let us kill the fattest pig and give a banquet."

"Maria," said the husband solemnly, "I don't see how the unfortunate animal is to blame for what happened twenty-five years ago."

Manifested the Makings.

Alderman Smith's baby was being christened, and everybody present was complimenting the happy parents.

"I believe," said the proud mother, "that he is going to be a great politician some day."

"Why?" asked the ruddy faced father.

An Old Verb.

To laze is an old verb. In Samuel Rowlands' "Martin Markall," 1610, we are told that "loyterers laze in the streete, lurke in alehouses and range in the highwaies." The word occurs, I believe, in some of Mortimer Collins' lyrics:

But Cupid lazeth 'mongst the faiery lasses,
Whose clere complexion he off sweareth passes.

WHICH WAS MASTER?

By MARY A. BOWERS

It was a month after their marriage. Not a word had been spoken to interrupt that current of romance down which they had been sailing ever since they became conscious that they loved. But there is always a beginning.

"My dear," he said pettishly, "I suppose I must go through another day with a safety pin for a suspender button?"

"Another day, dear! What do you mean?"

"If I remember aright this is the third time I have asked you to replace the button that came off a week ago."

She made no reply, but went to her workbasket, got out what was needed and sewed on the button.

Romance had given place to reality. From that moment she began the duties of a wife. Her day was all for her husband. When she arose in the morning her first duty was to see that he had what pleased him for breakfast. She poured his coffee with her own hand. Then when he had gone for the day she superintended the household affairs, planning that everything might be in order against his return. In the evening she consulted his pleasure. If he wished to go out she went out with him. If he preferred to stay at home she stayed home with him. It seemed to her that there was scarcely an hour in the day that she was not working for him.

And he? He went down to business in the morning and worked hard all day—for her. When his competitors got ahead of him, when wrangling over disputed business transactions fretted him, when he failed to make money or when he met with success it was all for her. She needed expensive clothing, and he bought them for her. Every spring she must have new apparel, and the next spring, though it was not worn or faded, it was no longer in fashion. One season she must have a hat like an umbrella, and the next it must be replaced by one no larger than a dinner plate. Her winter coat must be short, and the next year it must be long. Since the hat could not be shrunken nor the coat lengthened, they must be cast off and new ones purchased. He wondered why garments never grew smaller, so that those purchased the year before might be reduced.

One day she reproached him.

"The day is not long enough," she said, "for me to do all I have to do for my master. I did not know when I married you that I was bringing upon myself slavery. As a girl I could devote all my time to myself. Then I was light hearted because I was free. I had no one's clothes to mend except my own. I had no household duties. I spent my leisure time going to theaters, balls and such other amusements as I preferred. Oh, woe is me that I should have married and become a slave!"

And he replied:

"From morning till night I am downtown making money for you to spend for gowns and hats that won't stay in fashion long enough to get the 'new' off them. I must provide house rent and sustenance for you and the thousand other things that you require. I never go fishing or shooting, as I did before I was married, for now, having your necessities to supply, I have nothing left for indulging in those sports of which I used to be so fond. My fowling piece went into a fur coat for you, and you are wearing my fishing tackle on your head. Oh, woe is me, that I married and became a slave!"

One day a baby came.

The duties of the wife were changed. The husband returned to the use of safety pins in lieu of buttons. She had no longer time to mend his linen. His clothing remained torn.

The baby needed all her attention, requiring more changes of clothing in a day than her husband needed in a week. She spent much time preparing the child's food, and then after she had got it down him he would throw it up. He had cholic most of the time, during which she must dandle him, walk him and give him medicines. Every day he must have the sun and air in his carriage, and his mother, unwilling to trust him to a nurse, trundled him herself. When she was not trundling him she was making or buying clothes for him, and when she was not doing these she was receiving instructions from the doctor as to what she should put into his stomach and what she should put over it.

And the husband. He was now glad to get downtown in the morning to escape the baby's squalls. He passed most of the night walking his son back and forth when the boy had colic and was tired out with loss of sleep. But in his office there was quiet. Besides, in his office he was master, which he was not at home.

One morning the husband, who had taken care of the baby during the night that his wife might get "a little sleep," began the old plaint, "I am your slave." This awakened her own former words. "It is I who am your slave."

This started the wrangle again. Words were getting high when there was a diversion.

There came a sudden yell from the crib. Both rushed to the baby.

"Here is our master," said the father. "We are both his slaves."

A PLUCKY WOMAN

Story of a Press Gang

By EDGAR FALES MOODY

A hundred years ago there was a Connecticut farmer named John Clough living on the shores bordering on Long Island sound. His wife Katherine dearly loved her husband, and their union was blessed with ten children.

One evening when Katherine had prepared John's supper and was waiting for him to come home and eat it a small boy with eyes a-stare came running to the house crying:

"Mistress Clough, your man's carried off!"

"What d'ye mean?" asked the frightened woman.

"Some men came along while he was a seedin' and took him by the arms and run him down to a boat. They put him in and are rowin' him out to a warship."

"Oh, my gracious, the press gang!"

She ran out of the house and on to an eminence in time to see the boat pulling for a ship at anchor bearing the British ensign from her peak.

John Clough had been pressed into the British service. Katherine was so fond of him that she could not bear the idea of waiting for him to come home after a long term of service and resolved to join him if possible. The ship remained at anchor that night, and the next morning, leaving her children in the care of her sister, Mrs. Clough cut off her hair, put on a suit of John's and, taking a boat, rowed out to the man-of-war. There she offered herself for enlistment. She was gladly accepted without a physical examination and donned a sailor's uniform. She was soon recognized by her husband, but she gave him a look of warning, and he did not betray her.

The Britisher sailed about for some time in American waters, her captain here and there impressing a man into his service, desiring to fill up his crew, which was incomplete.

As soon as possible John and Katherine concerted to make their escape. Katherine's plan was to assist John to get away, after which she might declare her sex and get discharged. But they both knew that so long as the ship remained on the American coast a very sharp watch would be kept on those Americans that had been impressed, so this task would not be easy of accomplishment. And if they made an attempt and failed one or both would be put in irons.

They kept a sharp watch for an opportunity, but so strict was the watch that none occurred. Finally preparations making for a voyage warned them that the ship would soon sail away and if they were to put any scheme into execution they must do so without further delay.

One day Katherine left the collar of her sailor jacket open just low enough to betray her sex. A petty officer was the first to discover the fact and reported it to the officer of the deck. Katherine was summoned before the commander and acknowledged her deception. The officer would have put her ashore at once, but she begged to be allowed to remain, for a time at least, as cook. Her request was granted, and she was transferred to the galley. But as there was not a woman's garment of any kind aboard she must needs retain her sailor togs.

One evening when the ship was at anchor off New London John told his wife that he could swim ashore if he could only get away from the ship. But this was impossible, for marines were on watch, and any one jumping overboard would be shot. If he were not shot a boat would be lowered, and he would be captured before he had swum a hundred yards. The sailors had got wind of the intention of the captain to sail the next morning for England, and the Englishmen of the crew were much delighted at the prospect of going home.

Though the night was not dark, the Cloughs determined to make an attempt. About eight bells a great flare of light appeared in the galley, and Katherine, who had secretly collected as much inflammable stuff as she could conceal and had touched a burning brand to it, raised the cry of "Fire!"

A fire on shipboard, especially on a wooden man-of-war, where there are a magazine and more or less ammunition always ready for use, is a danger needing paramount attention. All hands were called either to the galley or to the pumps, and all hands except John Clough obeyed. He was on the forecastle at the time watching the marine nearest him. The man was too good a soldier to leave his post, but was too much interested in the fire that might cost him his life to think of anything else. John Clough scuttled to the bowsprit, got down on to the chains, dropped noiselessly into the water and swam for the shore.

The fire in the galley was soon extinguished, and unfortunately as it at first appeared for Katherine there were evidences that she had been an incendiary. Had she been a man she would have probably been hanged to the yardarm. Even had the ship been in an English port she would have been turned over to the civil authorities. As it was she was considered a fit person to get rid of and was sent ashore.

Meanwhile John had landed safely without even having been shot at. The next evening the pair met at their farm, embraced, hugged their children and enjoyed a good supper.

ELECTIONS COSTLY

Mayor Smalley Refers to Big Expense When Borough is Re-Districted.

AFTER THE TROLLEY COMPANY

North Plainfield Council Instructs Street Commissioner to See that P. S. C. Fixes Up Its Tracks' Roadbed.

The ordinance to divide North Plainfield into five election districts instead of the present three, was passed on its third and final reading at the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council last night. It will now be duly advertised in the manner required by law and goes into immediate effect. The boundaries of the various divisions have already been published in these columns but it is the desire of the officials that every voter acquaint himself with the new lines.

The only comment after the passing of the ordinance was made by Mayor Smalley who again called attention to the fact that elections under the Geran law are going to prove costly to taxpayers. He declared that the Union county freeholders have appropriated for elections this year, $50,000 more than ever before and there would be a correspondingly large increase in Somerset county. He also cited the fact in connection with the re-districting that there is to be no more canvassing previous to elections and the voters will have to see for themselves that they are registered.

It was expected that some action would be taken relative to the Somerset street widening matter but it was stated during the meeting that a proper ordinance is now being prepared and would be ready for introduction at an early date. In this connection Councilman Stahl declared something should be done to compel the street railway people to put its roadbed in shape where its tracks have been raised and the street commissioner was authorized to order it done.

Included in a batch of building applications presented by Mr. Stahl was one from the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company asking permission to erect two small additions to its barn on upper Somerset street opposite Codington avenue. It was specified that one was to be built in the rear and the other in front. Objection was raised to the latter because it added to the fire danger and brought a barn to the residence building line. On a vote taken permission was granted for the rear addition but the other was denied.

These permits were granted: Harrison Coddington, addition to house at Duer and Howard streets, to be used as a kitchen; Harrison Coddington, three small dwelling houses on Howard street; George Sovereign, two story dwelling house on Brook avenue; Elizabeth MacClymont, garage on Washington avenue; Max Michaelson, wagon shed on Chatham street.

According to Recorder Dolliver's report there had been thirty-four arrests during the past month and $62 in fines had been collected. Of this amount $17 goes to the Secretary of State in division of auto fines. Bills to the amount of $1,700 were ordered paid and the collector's report showed a balance of $1,300.85.

Satisfactory Oiling.

The Borough Council received a bill of $600 last night for sperading oil on the streets. It was ordered paid if found correct and in doing so the councilmen expressed general satisfaction at the way in which the work has been done. The contract was executed by a concern which heats the oil before spreading it and forces it in the roadbed with a patent spray. Less than half the quantity was required for an area equal to that treated last year.

Festival a Success.

The strawberry and ice cream festival held at the First Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Pastors' Aid Society, was a success, although the rain in the afternoon interfered somewhat with the out-of-door entertainment. Liberal patronage was accorded and all enjoyed the informal program of music rendered in the afternoon and evening. The proceeds from the affair will be used for church work.

Mrs. Irene Dennis.

Mrs. Irene Dennis, colored, of Elm place, died at her home last night. She was forty years old. The funeral will be held at her late home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Murray's Auction Rooms.

Robert Murray's auction rooms have removed to 164 East Front street, opposite the Woodhull-Martin building, convenient to all trolleys.

MEMORIAL SERVICES OF JUNIORS TOMORROW

The members of Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold memorial services for deceased members tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The members will meet in their respective lodge rooms at 1 o'clock and march to the North Plainfield cemetery, where the first service will be held; thence to Evergreen cemetery, where the services will be concluded.

State Councilor William B. LaRue, of Bound Brook, will make the memorial address and the Rev. C. S. Kemble will deliver the eulogies and read the prayers. George Watts will be master of ceremonies and Guy E. Thomas and John Kliner will act as marshals for the day.

TWIN LIONS ARE BORN ON CARNIVAL GROUNDS

"Jennie," the magnificent African lioness connected with the trained animal show at the Knights of Columbus carnival now in progress on West Front street, did not take part in the performances, last night. She took no one in her confidence but when Herbertino, a trainer, looked into her private cage just previous to the time for her to appear before the spectators, he found that she had been playing an important maternity role by herself and had presented a fine pair of cubs to her liege lord, 'Nero." She indicated to the intruder that she was "doing very well, thank you," and the news was quickly noised about the arena.

B. H. Patrick, general manager of the show, made the announcement to the gathering in the tent and roars of delight came from all the animals, who overheard him. It was stated later by Harry Bentum, press representative, that the babies would be named "Plainfield" and "Watchung," in honor of their native city and the council conducting the carnival. This is the first time on record that lion cubs have been born here.

The twins are in fine condition and worth $500 each. "Jennie," the mother, is valued at $2,000. She belongs to the group exhibited by Trainer Charles Clark and both the mother and babies will be shown to the spectators tonight.

The crowd at the carnival, last night, was one of the largest of the week and all the attractions were well patronized. The big enterprise will be brought to an ending tonight and a record attendance is expected.

N. P. H. S. JUNIORS ENTERTAIN THE SENIORS.

The junior class of the North Plainfield High School gave a reception and dinner to the members of the senior class and the faculty last night. The dinner was served in the manual training building by a local caterer and was greatly enjoyed. Adjournment was afterward taken to the kindergarten room where an informal musical program and dancing was enjoyed. The room was decorated with cut flowers and class colors.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Edmund J. Kenney, chairman; Lawrence French, William Taylor, Henry Kinney, Miss Margaret Darby, Miss Florence Daly and Miss Madeline Uhrahn.

Special Music at P. C. C.

There will be special music at the Plainfield Country Club tonight for the entertainment of the guests who are also attending the horse show, and there will be the usual Saturday evening dance following the dinner. Monday evening at 6:45 o'clock, preceding the open air performance by the Coburn Players, a dinner will be given at the club.

Weight Crushed His Foot.

A heavy weight dropped on the left foot of Thomas McDonald, of 1020 West Third street, at the Pond Tool Works yesterday afternoon. The toes were badly crushed and the large one was broken in two places. He was attended by Dr. Kruger at the latter's office and later taken home. He will be laid up for two months.

In the Borough Court.

A Greek peddler, arrested by Marshal Kerrman yesterday, was released on $4 bail to appear for trial this morning for having no license. He failed to show up and the $4 was declared. Tony Scarfino, arrested for riding a wheel on the sidewalk, will be arraigned tonight.

Benevolent Council Grows.

Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., initiated two candidates last night and the good and welfare committee served refreshments. There was an unusually large number of members in attendance.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF HARRY E. CAREY HELD

The funeral services of Harry L. Carey were held yesterday afternoon at the late home on Somerset place and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including all of the letter-carriers from the local postoffice, of which Mr. Carey was one for nearly three years. There was also a delegation of members from Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which Mr. Carey was a member. His lodge regalia and an American flag rested on the casket; also many beautiful flowers, sent by relatives and friends and the letter-carriers and Franklin Council.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, conducted the service, offering prayer and making a few remarks. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pallbearers were William B. Sharp, Frank Legg, Robert Loughlin and E. T. VanWinkle from the postoffice force and Charles Wilson and John Bicknell, from Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M.

PRETTY BABY GIRL ABANDONED ON PORCH

An unusually pretty girl baby, evidently six or seven weeks old, was found on the front porch at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Forester Hartpence, of McKinley place, at an early hour this morning. It had evidently been occupying its open-air bedroom the greater part of the night, but suffered little from the exposure. The child is still in the hands of its finders, but is to be taken in charge this afternoon by Overseer Ayres, who will find a home for it.

Mrs. Hartpence was aroused from sleep shortly after 4 o'clock by hearing the wail of an infant. They seemed to come from the front yard and an investigation led to the finding of the deserted child. It was dressed in hand-made clothing of good material covered by a blue coat and all wrapped in a woman's skirt. A nursing bottle had been placed where it could be used but was empty when found. The lack of sustenance was evidently what caused the baby to cry.

The infant is evidently of American parentage. It has a well-shaped head, light blue eyes and seems to be perfectly healthy. There were absolutely no marks on the clothing to indicate the identity of anyone connected with the leaving. The police are conducting an investigation.

MISSION BAND HEARS MRS. DANIEL RAPALJE

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held its final meeting for the season yesterday afternoon. No further sessions are to take place until the first Friday in October. In addition to the transaction of general business the members enjoyed a talk from Mrs. Daniel Rapalje on her personal experiences in mission work in China. She gave reminiscences of associations with Mrs. Talmadge, the Reformed Church missionary at Amoy.

Rev. and Mrs. Rapalje were in the Chinese field for several years but retired and are now living here. Mrs. Rapalje showed a number of photographs of the girls' school in Amoy and also an idol secured from one of the temples.

Mrs. Corra Ryno, the new president, was in charge of the meeting for the first time.

Will Explain New Laws.

The third of the series of street meetings under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. will be held tonight, when Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will be the speakers. There will also be special music.

Gave Dinner to Choir.

Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, wife of the pastor of Warren chapel, assisted by the Missionary and Aid Society gave a dinner to the choir on Thursday evening. Covers were laid for fifteen and a very pleasant evening was spent by all present.

Rev. Dr. Bailey, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, will preach a special sermon to several colored lodges at the church tomorrow evening.

HETFIELD REFUSES

Declines Mayor's Appointment for Plainfield's Corporation Counselship.

CANDIDATE FOR A JUDGESHIP.

Job Would Only Be For Few Months and Work Has Accumulated—Likely to Succeed Newcorn As District Court Judge.

Giving as his reasons that should the city fathers confirm the nomination, the position would only be secure to him for the balance of the year and that as the office has been vacant since the death of Craig A. Marsh last November the work has accumulated, Walter L. Hetfield yesterday informed Mayor Moy that he must decline the honor of the corporation counselship. Accordingly, in his letter of declination, Mr. Hetfield requested that the appointment be withdrawn before the Common Council meets on Monday night.

When asked today to explain his unexpected action, Mr. Hetfield said:

"As a matter of fact I was not a candidate for the office. The first intimation I had that I had been named was the morning after my name was informally presented to the Common Council by the Mayor. He told me of what he had done and I naturally appreciated the honor. But at the same time I could not make up my mind whether I wanted the position. I have carefully considered the whole matter, however, and have arrived at the decision I state in my letter to the mayor.

"In the first place," continued Mr. Hetfield, "my selection at this time, taking for granted that the appointment be confirmed, would only be for the balance of the year. Politics is a very uncertain thing in life and I would have no right to assume that I would be reappointed and reconfirmed. Then, again, you must remember that the office has been vacant for many months and naturally the work to be performed has accumulated. It would take almost my entire time to catch up with the work and transact such other legal business for the city that would be presented from time to time. And all this for a part of the $2,000 annually salary. No, I couldn't think of taking the office."

The letter to the mayor follows:

"My Dear Mayor:—

"Since your personal notice to me on the 25th.ult. that you had sent my name to the Common Council of this City for the office of Corporation Counsel, I have considered the matter, and come to the conclusion that conditions will not warrant me to accept the position, should my name be confirmed by the Common Council. Therefore, I wish you would withdraw my name before the next meeting of the Common Council.

"Thanking you for the honor in presenting my name for the position, I remain,

"Yours very truly,
"WALTER L. HETFIELD."

Mr. Hetfield would make no comment on his avowed candidacy to succeed William Newcorn as judge of the Plainfield district court when the latter's term expires a few months hence. His friends say that his chances for that office are excellent.

1st M. E. EPWORTHIANS HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION.

These officers were elected: President, Arthur Humble; first vice president, Miss Jessie Billet; second vice president, Miss Ada Stark; third vice president, Mrs. Oscar Rose; fourth vice president, Miss Ethel Pryor; secretary, Irving Stebbins; treasurer, Irving Dodge.

COUNCILMEN REFUSE A TAX REDUCTION

The Borough Council received a petition last night from George D. Sovereign, asking that he be allowed a reduction of interest on unpaid taxes on what is known as the Embury property at Washington avenue and Park place. It was stated that the petitioner had come into possession of the place through the foreclosure of a mortgage and that steps are now being taken to get it back. The assessment has been very high, a fact admitted by Mayor Smalley, but because of litigation, the matter was not taken up with the tax board. The interest on back taxes is $41 and Mr. Sovereign asked for an erasure of this amount.

The matter was discussed at some length, but while it was admitted that the request was within reason, to allow it would be establishing a dangerous precedent. Councilman Smalley finally offered a resolution that a reduction of $25 be allowed. The vote was against it, Messrs. Smalley and Waldron voting aye and Stahl, Milne and VanArsdale no.

DR. MURRAY SPEAKS TO MOTHERS' ASS'N

The Plainfield Mothers' Association held its final meeting for the season at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon when Dr. William H. Murray presented the need for an infant clinic or a visiting nurse in this city. The members discussed ways and means for assisting in this scheme the proposition being favorably received by the women.

There was also a discussion of next year's program, which will open on November 10 and 11, with the entertainment of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers at the Plainfield High School. About 150 delegates from all parts of the State are expected to attend. The program for the rest of the year follows:

December 8, discussion of subject: "The Children's Christmas;" January 12-February 23, lectures on prevention of disease by Dr. N. H. Probasco and Dr. H. D. Corbusier; March 8, discussion, "Fatigue from Work and Play,' led by Dr. Clara Krans; April 12, annual meeting, subject, "How to Make the Backyard Attractive." Pledges for the entertainment of the New Jersey Mothers' Congress are now payable to Mrs. George B. Wean, 923 Park avenue.

F. E. SMITH JR. WINS HONORS AT COLLEGE

Frederick E. Smith, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Smith, of Central avenue, has the distinction of being the first honor man in the '11 graduating class at Rutgers College. He stands at the head of his class, which numbers fifty-eight, which means that he holds the highest average in all his studies for the full four years' course. This is a great distinction and his friends are congratulating him upon his success.

DeLancy Ferguson, also of this city, who is a member of this years' graduating class, is an honor man. He also won several prizes in composition work. Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Ferguson are graduates of the Plainfield High School, which speaks well for the preparatory course at that institution.

GAVE RECEPTION FOR MR. AND MRS. EDWARDS.

The Greenwich, Conn., Graphic, publishes the following item of interest to the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, who until a few weeks ago resided on Franklin place:

Ebert held a delightful afternoon reception at their unique and beautiful home, Brookford, on Saturday, May 20, from 4 to 7 o'clock, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, who have recently taken residence in Greenwich. HORSE SHOW ENDS

Best Card Today at the Eighth Annual Exhibition of Local Club.

ATTENDANCE NOT SO LARGE.

Championship Classes for Saddle and Harness Horses and Military Mounts the Final Features of the Show.

Cloudy skies and now and then a little rain did not give promise of a brilliant ending of the eighth annual horse show today. However, at times it looked as though it would break away and that the sun would once more shine on the crowds that have been thronging the grounds, as well as the fine horses. J. W. Harriman today offered a $250 cup to take the place of the one his "Nala" won yesterday.

Today's card is doubtless the best of the week, for the championship classes for saddle and harness horses are to be decided, and the classes for military mounts, including jumpers, together with those for draught stallions and mares and the strong array of hunters and jumpers which will close the show, combine to offer an exceptional program. Today's card will be as follows:

Class 8-4 pairs harness horses, 1:15; Class 42-3 ponies under saddle, 1:30; Class 26-14 combination horses, 1:40; Class 53-2 draught stallions, 2:00; Class 52-2 draught mares, 2:05; Class 65-5 hackney mares, 2:10; Class 5-13 single harness horses; 2:20; Class 61-5 military mounts, 2:35; Class 62-2 military teams—jumping, 3:00; Class 49-A-5 pairs of hunters, 3:10; Class 9-5 single harness horses (ladies to drive), 3:30; Class 33-8 saddle horses, 3:45; Class 23-3 single harness horses (Plainfield Riding and Driving Club cup), 4:00; Class 57-4 saddle horses (local), 4:10; Class 40 saddle horses (championship) 4:20; Class 24 single harness horses under 15.2 hands (championship) 4:40; Class 25 single harness horses 15.2 hands or over (championship) 4:50; Class 48-18 hunters, (Corinhian class), 5:00; Class 50-11 hunters Watchung Hunt Club cup, 5:30.

There was a pretty general distribution of honors at the second day's exhibition of the eighth annual horse show of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, although J. W. Harriman's fine string of entries showed their superiority in many of the classes in which they were shown. An interesting event occurred in judging Class 3 for single harness horses, when Master Allen Harriman won the blue with Lady Dilham over his father's entry, Elegant Dilham. This brought forth hearty cheers from the crowd.

Earlier in the afternoon, when Mr. Harriman won the "Dr. Selwonk" challenge cup, valued at $250, which was offered by Reginald C. Vanderbilt, he turned the rig over to his son, who received the handsome trophy for his father, amidst great applause. Mr. Harriman's entry "Nala," which captured the cup yesterday for "keeps," won a leg on the trophy in 1909. DeWitt C. Flanagan's "Prince Charming," and Mrs. J. S. Walsh's "Maid of Honor," were strong competitors for honors in this class.

Another event yesterday of unusual interest was Class 60 for officers' charges, open to all branches of the U. S. Army or National Guard. This was a showy class and the horses performed well. There were six entries, three from Squadron A, of New York; two from Squadron C, of Brooklyn, while Captain W. A. Bryant represented the Essex Troop, of Newark. He was up on a new horse, "Rocket," and the horse failed to do as well as expected in the jumps. His gait was also off.

Charles A. Doscher, of Squadron C, Calvary, N. G. N. Y., won the blue in this class, with Alden S. Blodget, of Squadron A, as second, Alvan Williston Perry, also of Squadron A, was third and Trumpeter William Springler Mitchell, of Squadron A, finished fourth. Captain Bryant, of Essex Troop, was a post entry.

Frederick Bull's "Sunday Morning," won Class 47 for ladies' hunters, and the handsome trophy offered by the Somerset Farm, Carl M. Udo Fleischmann, owner. This was one of the best classes of the day and brought out some fine entries.

The judges were very deliberate in announcing a decision in Class 18 for tandems, but Avondale Farm's entries, Lady Dilham and Elegant Dilham were finally awarded the blue and the decision met with popular approval judging by the applause.

W. A. McGibbon's entry, "Kildare," won two blues in the saddle classes, which also took the judges a long time to make decision. These competitions were keen and it was a toss up as to who would finally win out.

The day's program closed with the Doan's Kidney Pills should be used.

Have cured women here in Plainfield.
This is one Plainfield woman's testimony.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble. A neighbor recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me and on her suggestion, I used them. They gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious recurrence of my former trouble. You may publish this acount of my experience for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Country Club, The Coburn Players will give "Much Ado About Nothing" on the grounds of the club Monday night at 8 o'clock. These players yearly make a pilgrimage of the principal universities throughout the country as well as appearing at a few of the prominent country clubs. There is an illusion in the open air performances which is impossible to get in a theatre, and coming during the heated term are particularly enjoyable. The incidental music sung by a hidden male quartet adds much to the charm and pleasure as does the lighting which transforms a familiar scene into a fairyland.

FOREPAUGH AND SELLS BROTHERS BIG CIRCUS.

With the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Big United Shows, which exhibits here June 9, about 1,500 people are employed. Quite a travelling city in itself. This enormous circus, goes where it will; stays as many days as it pleases and arranges its route without consulting anyone outside the management of this great enterprise.

The Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Shows gives a superb street parade. It will enter no agreement with other shows by which this feature of circus day is eliminated. A street parade is a part of a circus ticket.

This circus cares not if other shows make the same cities in which it appears. Its performance differs so widely from the usual circus performance that it does not consider the present day show as real opposition. Its features are many. The bills setting forth the glories and features of this unparalleled aggregation of travelling acts and stupendous congress of all that is greatest and best in the world of the sawdust arena, state that this year the show is greater and grander than ever and that many entirely new acts will be seen. Man was made to laugh, the philosophers say. He will live up to nature's intent, if he attends the Forepaugh & Sells Bros. circus. There are fifty clowns with the show. Anyone of them could bring laughter tears to the eyes of a clothing store dummy. They cut their teeth on the funny bone of a mastodon.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Emil Larsson, of Rockview avenue, are planning to spend the summer in Europe and will sail next week.

THE VIRTUOLO

The Intrepreting Piano

Through our recent announcements of the Virtuolo hundreds have enjoyed the impromptu recitals at our store. These impromptu recitals are now almost continuous. Scores of sales have been made the past few weeks.

We want you to call and examine the Virtuolo. It is a new player piano. Ten years from now all player pianos will have to be built like it.

The ease with which a novice can play even the most difficult pieces on the Virtuolo is due to a new invention in player piano building called "the air-muscle finger." We will explain the principle of the "air-muscle finger" at our store. Space won't permit it here.

These "air-muscle fingers" play inside the piano almost direct on the strings. They are as sensitive as a nerve. By the easy and simple operation of two buttons, two levers and the pedals you can make them play for you any piece. You can make the cords of sunshine glisten over the light airy pieces; you can make the heavy cords resound tempestuous and beautiful, and you will be surprised how you can make these "air-muscle fingers" touch the strings lighter and lighter until they die out deliciously into nothingness.

Or, if you wish to play ragtime or a popular air, you can make the Virtuolo "air-muscle fingers" fill you and your guests with all the ectasies of joy that these pieces create in the theatre.

There really isn't any reason why you shouldn't have a Virtuolo Player Piano playing in your home tomorrow night. The price is reasonable, terms are easy, and it is manufactured and guaranteed by the Hallet & Davis Piano Company, of Boston, who has been the leading art piano builders for 71 years.

The Virtuolo in a Hallet & Davis upright piano retails at $750. Terms $50 cash and $15 per month.

The Virtuolo in a Conway upright retails at $550 to $600; terms $25 cash and $12 per month.

If in 30 days you are not satisfied with your Virtuolo, we will take it back, without expense to you, refund all you have paid, and cancel the contract.

Pianos or unsatisfactory player pianos taken in exchange

Come in and hear the ingenious "air-muscle fingers" of the Virtuolo play today. Whether you wish to purchase or not doesn't matter. You are very welcome. Our automobile will bring you to our store and back home if you write or 'phone us. If you put it off you will never come.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

A great writer has said that many people with good incomes are more unhappy than beggars because they live beyond their means. If you have never had a bank account you realize the truth of this assertion and cannot understand the feeling or independence and happiness that you may so easily enjoy.

Youthful Elopers Caught.

Mt. Holly, June 3.—After an all-night search Constable Nelson Peak, of Medford, yesterday morning captured Westley Wells, twenty-one years old, and Emma J. Wilkins, thirteen years old, who are charged with having eloped Memorial Day. The pair live on adjoining farms. The girl is a daughter of Amos Wilkins. She spent part of the holiday on the grounds of the Medford Field Club. After the program of sports had been finished she disappeared with Wells. They were lodged in the county jail. Hunger Thursday night forced Wells and the girl to apply at the residence of William Alloways, near Kirby's Mills, for something to eat.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, of this city, will speak at the W. C. T. U. meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the rooms on Madison avenue.

The hours of services at St. Stephen's church tomorrow, Whitsunday, will be holy communion at 7:30 and 11 a. m., and evensong at 5 p. m.

ORIGIN OF AN EXPRESSION.

"If This Court Knows Herself, and She Thinks She Do."

We frequently hear the expression, "If the court knows itself, and it thinks it does," but few persons are aware of the origin thereof.

The individual who gave birth to it was a Pike county Missourian named Blackburn, who flourished in the west many years ago. Blackburn ran away from home when he was a mere boy and sought his fortune in the west, where he grew to manhood as an Indian fighter, hunter, trapper and mountain guide. Although not an educated man, he was possessed of great acumen, to which was united a keen wit. When gold was discovered in California, Blackburn was one of the first to proceed thither. The miners as a sort of joke elected him alcalde, an office that combined the duties of mayor and justice of the peace. The first case coming before the new alcalde was that of a gambler who while drunk had ridden his horse over a young Mexican woman. She was seriously injured.

The trial took place in the largest cabin in the neighborhood. The gambler, who was rich, had retained able counsel to defend him. Alcade Blackburn called the young woman to the witness stand. She told a straightforward, honest story. When she had finished the alcalde peremptorily ended the trial. The attorney for the defendant protested vigorously, but the alcalde disposed of his protest thus: "If this court knows herself, and she thinks she do, I fine you $500 damages and assess upon you the cost of puttin' this young woman in good condition."

When asked what he meant by "good condition" the alcalde replied that the gambler must pay the doctor's bills and all other costs of the young woman's sickness.—Exchange.

MOZART'S UNTIMELY END.

Sad Finish of the Career of the Great Musical Genius.

Late hours, unwearied vigils, everlasting labor, the effects of chills, damp and exposure, in the hard life he led—a life alternating between brilliant passages and the most loathsome drudgery, between rosy anticipations of fortune and inevitable and eternal disappointments—had their effects on the vigorous constitution of Mozart. His lamp of life burnt out untimely. While still a young man—only thirty-five years old—he fell into ill health, the symptoms of which were a fitful, restless nervousness, a craving for inordinate excitement and a rapid decay of the physical stamina of his constitution.

Unfortunately for him, in the absence of any strong influence at home which might keep him in the path of duty, he was tempted to seek recreation abroad and fell into the company of a dissipated set of men, haunters of the theaters and taverns of Vienna, the chief spirit of whom was one Schikaneder, a low, coarse man of neither refinement nor talent. In company with this crew the glorious genius, whose critical state of health demanded the utmost care and attention from loving hands, flitted night after night from tavern to tavern in Vienna, deluding himself with vice under the idea that he was gathering the secret spirit of brotherhood for use in his opera, "The Magic Flute," on which he at that time was engaged.—Rowbotham's "Private Life of Great Composers."

Teeth In Their Stomachs.

Whatever it may be that the lobster and the crab, rapacious, never dainty, are eating they always see something else that they want and can't wait until they have masticated the first before attacking the second. But they don't give up the first, not by any manner of means. Nature, humoring this rapacious bent, has fitted the lobster and the crab with teeth in their stomachs, and they swallow their half masticated food and finish the chewing process with their stomachs while they seize and chew the other thing that has attracted them. Lobsters and crabs have no teeth in their mouths. They chew with their claws what they have time to and hand the unfinished job down to their stomachs to do the rest of the chewing.

Dollar Bills From All Over.

"That dollar silver certificate you have there has been gathered together from all over the world," said the bank cashier. "Part of the paper fiber is linen rag from the orient.

"The silk comes from Italy or China. The blue ink is made from German or Canadian cobalt. The black ink is made from Niagara Falls acetylene gas smoke, and most of the green ink is green color mixed in white zinc sulphite made in Germany.

"When the treasury seal is printed in red the color comes from Central America."—New York Sun.

No Apology Necessary.

"I congratulate you most heartily," said the nearsighted guest at the wedding, "on this happy—oh, I beg your pardon! I thought I was speaking to the bridegroom."

"That's all right," the other man replied. "I accept your congratulations. I am the father of the bride."—Chicago Tribune.

Very Lucky.

"I don't get what I deserve for my jokes," wailed the humorist.

"You're lucky," sympathized his friend.—Toledo Blade.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

UP TO DATE—Had no money of my own, so took the other fellows money and went to Lakewood Wednesday and bought the very best piece of ground I could find to build a town or city on. It is situated at a one horse depot called Ridgway, but partly made arrangements yesterday to call it Uptodate. The main macadamized road running from Lakewood to Lakehurst goes right through Uptodate, and there is the making of a nice place there. Did you ever know that I sold Highland Park this city? Sold 500 lots there in 1½ years to outside people, while Plainfield people did nothing but kick about it. These lots are for the poor man. The prices will be $25, $30 and $35 each, and no tin can houses can be built there, for the lots shall be restricted to a $2,000 house. FORTY YEARS in BASEBALL

A History of the Great National Game

By CAPT. A. C. ANSON

Former Manager of the Chicago National League Team

I remember I asked her, once inside the door, if her father and mother were at home and she looked at me with a half frightened air as though I might have the intention of looting the premises. She gave a sigh of relief when I assured her that I only wanted to ask permission to light a cigar, as I felt somewhat exhausted after the walk. Both her parents were in and I was presented to them before going out to lunch. The mother was a sweet-faced woman, all graciousness and hospitality, but I fancied that the old gentleman did not take kindly to my presence. He seemed to be somewhat reserved in his manner, and once or twice I discovered him in the act of scanning me sharply over the top of his spectacles. Virginia and her mother were at their ease if I was not, and they did their best to help me along.

Up to that day I had never concerned myself as to what manner of man I was, baseball and billiards giving me more to worry over than the cut of my trousers or the fit of my coat. Right then and there I had a sudden change of heart. As soon as I reached my room after leaving the Fiegal home I went straight to the looking glass, determined to see myself, as I really was, if I collapsed at the sight. Luckily it didn't have that effect on me. Something, I don't know what it was, seemed to assure me that it would do.

Then I began to frequent the Fiegal house, and I actually neglected my business to invent excuses for doing so. Lying did not come natural to me, but I certainly tried hard enough to become expert in finding pretexts for visiting the little girl who had caught me on the fly. Some of these tales must have seemed rather fishy to the Fiegals, but any old yarn was good enough for me.

No, it wasn't exactly smooth sailing. I had a rival and a mighty good-looking one at that, Charlie Snyder, a great hit with the sex wherever he went. Charlie was also a lively candidate for first place in Miss Virginia's affections and for a while it looked as though I was going to be distanced. Finally I got so fussed over the business that I out and told the little woman that she must choose between us.

"That's exactly what I've been doing," she said demurely.

"Well, I suppose it's Charlie," I said, with an awful sinking in the region of my blood pump.

"Then you are wrong—as usual," she retorted.

I was kind of dazed for a moment, but I knew I had won.

CHAPTER X.

I Sign With Chicago.

In the fall of 1875, just before the National league came into existence, I received an offer to sign a contract with the Chicago club. Four years earlier I would have jumped at the chance, but now that I had the promise of a Philadelphia girl to become Mrs. Adrian C. Anson as soon as everything could be arranged satisfactorily, the Quaker burg seemed good enough for me. So I didn't even nibble at the Windy City bait, but went right along with my self-appointed job of getting the Athletics to do better team work.

The Chicago folks were in dead earnest, and my fondness for Philadelphia and a portion of its contents cut no figure in their calculations. For one thing, they had made up their minds to organize a championship team before the opening of the season of 1876. They had got weary of seeing Boston walk off with the honors and were lying awake nights to invent some scheme to circumvent the beaneaters, and were willing to part with a lot of rhino if it could be done.

As a starter the Chicago management signed the big four who had made it possible for the Boston club to win the pennant so many times in succession—Cal McVey, first base; James White, catcher; Ross Barnes, second base, and Albert G. Spalding, pitcher. It was a coup that fairly took the breath of the sporting fraternity all over the country. Nothing so enterprising in the way of baseball tactics had ever before been pulled off in America.

When Spalding landed in Chicago about the first thing he did was to propose to the Chicago management to send for me. He told the Chicago folks that the new organization was lacking only in one point—that with A. C. Anson to play third base they might expect to float the pennant from their clubhouse. So it seemed that the good impression I had made on Al at our first meeting in Marshalltown had been confirmed by subsequent records, I rather think it had myself.

Not at all discouraged by my unwillingness to make a change, William A. Hulbert, president of the Chicago Baseball club and shortly afterward founder of the National league, accompanied by Al Spalding, came on to Philadelphia to present their case in person. At our first meeting I was most favorably impressed by Mr. Hulbert, although I learned afterward that he didn't take a violent fancy to me. He was a fine looking man, standing in the neighborhood of six feet and weighing about 215 pounds. With rather a stern expression of countenance, he made it evident right from the start that he was a business man and would tolerate no foolishness. After we were better acquainted I found that he was big hearted and convivial after business was over, and that he was the soul of honor and wouldn't stand for crookedness in any form. I want to say, too, that as an executive he had few equals and no superiors. He was mighty quick to get on to a situation, and when he had made up his mind to act it took a whole lot to prevent him.

At that visit I was so moved by Spalding's entreaties and Mr. Hulbert's arguments that I agreed to play with the Chicago team at a salary of $2,000, an advance of $200 over what I was getting with the Athletics. I hardly know how I happened to sign the contract without consulting the little woman who was about to go into partnership with me; but when I told her what I had done I realized that I had made the blunder of my life. She simply stood up very straight in her small shoes and declared that it shouldn't be.

Of course I wilted and promised to recall my hasty agreement. I had an idea that it would be a comparatively easy job to get my release from Chicago and I was willing to do almost anything to fix it up with my sweetheart. When I tried it out I discovered that I had never been more mistaken in my life. In answer to the letter I wrote to Mr. Hulbert asking him to release me I received an answer which made not the slightest mention of my request—it was only a curt order to report in Chicago on April 1.

I made two trips to Chicago that winter in my attempt to beg off from Mr. Hulbert, but all in vain. The more I urged and threatened the more determined he got, and when, finally, I made an offer of $1,000 to obtain my release he all but ordered me out of his office. I was so huffy over my failure that I went away vowing that I would break the contract anyhow. I don't remember that I had the slightest idea of doing as I threatened, but I was made enough to say anything.

Nothing further passed between us until April 1. On that day I walked into Mr. Hulbert's office and greeted him as cheerfully as if nothing had ever happened. It was a cool, windy day and I was wearing a big striped ulster and carried a grip large enough to hold my entire wardrobe.

"I thought you weren't going to show up," said Mr. Hulbert, looking mighty severe.

"I've come to get that release," I said confidently.

"You've come to the wrong shop. You won't get it," he declared.

"How about that thousand plunks?" I asked.

"Not for a hundred thousand," he retorted promptly.

"All right," I said, moving off. "I won't play with your team anyhow."

An hour later I stood on the opposite side of the street and saw Mr. Hulbert leaving his office for luncheon.

"Goodby, old man! I'm off for Philama-clinck!" I yelled across at him.

"Go and be d—d!" returned the president, with a scowl that made me shiver in my big ulster.

"Do I get that release?" I piped.

He didn't even deign to reply, but passed on rapidly without further notice of me.

"I didn't go to the railroad station just then, however. Later in the afternoon I strolled out to the ball grounds just to have a look at the boys, who were having their first practice under their new captain, Al Spalding. Al was pitching to the men in turns, while the rest alternated in the field, and everybody was doing a lot of talking. About the first man I struck as I entered the grounds was Mr. Hulbert.

"I thought you were on your way to Philadelphia," he observed grimly when his eyes fell on me and my ulster.

Mr. Hulbert said no more and I soon became so interested in the practice that I forgot all about him. Spalding was sending them so nattily that I was seized with a terrible itch to get hold of a bat. It seemed to me that I'd just have to have a hand in the business in spite of myself. Finally I picked up a bat and, stepping up to the plate, called out to Spalding:

"Pitch a couple to me, Al, just for fun!"

"Not until you get out of that big ulster and take your place with the other men of my team," said the captain, stiffly.

I hated to do it. I even threw down the bat and pretended to be going. I knew I was beaten, and it was like pulling teeth to give in. However, there didn't seem to be anything else to do, so I threw off my overcoat, picked up the bat, took my position at the plate and shouted out:

"All right, sonny! Now let her go!"

And I want to remark right here that she did go—precisely where nobody knew at last accounts.

CHAPTER XI.

I Help Win the Pennant.

Neither the president nor the captain of the Chicagos had worried a little bit over my threat to break my contract. Spalding certainly knew me well enough to recognize my big bluff as the final kick of a man who wouldn't go back on his word no matter what his personal likes and dislikes might be. When it came to the scratch there was nothing to do but fix it up the best I could with the prospective Mrs. Anson and turn my face toward the setting sun.

So I submitted meekly, put on the Chicago uniform and started in to do my best to help win the coveted pennant for the Lake Michigan metropolis. During the winter of 1875-76 the National league was formed. Morgan G. Bulkeley of Hartford, Conn., afterward governor and now United States senator from that state, was its first president and filled the position one season, being succeeded by Mr. Hulbert. The eight clubs that were members of the new league were the Athletics of Philadelphia, the Bostons, the Hartfords, the Chicagos, the St. Louis, the Louisville, the Mutuals of New York and the Cincinnatis.

By the constitution of the new league no city of less than 75,000 inhabitants could become a member, and no city could be represented by more than one club. If that had been the rule when I was with the Athletics we would have been spared the humiliating experience with the Philadelphias—beaten by our own townsmen! Another reform brought about by the league was the adoption of a player's contract. With that in force the Chicagos could not have taken the "big four" away from Boston. The new rules also provided for the expulsion of members guilty of breaking their contracts or for dishonesty, and for a penalty such men were debarred forever from playing in league clubs. Gambling and liquor selling on club grounds were prohibited and any player interested in a bet on the result of a game was liable to get the grand bounce.

I guess I could remember the makeup of the Chicago team in the first season of the National league without consulting my diary, but to make sure I see that it was as follows: A. G. Spalding, pitcher, captain and manager; James White, catcher; A. C. Anson, third base; Ross Barnes, second base; Cal McVey, first base; J. P. Peters, shortstop; J. W. Glenn, left field; Paul A. Hines, center field; Robert Addy, right field. As I have said already, four of these were coaxed away from the pennant-winning Bostons and a fifth—who was myself—was snatched bodily from the Philadelphia Athletics. For five men who had been treated in such a high-handed manner, I want to remark, we were a tolerably cheerful bunch of ball merchants.

Just at first the Boston folks were so crushed by their loss that they hardly knew which way to turn. The blow was a tough one, but the management gathered up the fragments and went to make their organization as formidable as possible. From that time on Boston's sole ambition was to beat Chicago, but it so happened that we bested them in nine straight games before they got their hearts' desire.

I shall never forget the first game we played on the Boston grounds that season. It was Memorial day and a record crowd turned out to witness the event. Long before the hour named to call the game the inclosure was packed too full for comfort, and a vast crowd of disappointed fans, some of them from long distances, was making a big hullabaloo outside. On account of the holiday no one was working and apparently everybody was wild to see the "Stolen Big Four" in their new uniforms. The mob was so dense that at one time it looked as though there would not be room enough in the grounds to play the game. When the gates were closed the crowd swarmed over the fences and the force of special policemen had more than it could do to preserve order.

I wish you could have seen and heard the ovation the "Big Four" received when they put in an appearance. The crowd was so tickled to see the old favorites that the fact that the players were now members of a hostile team was lost sight of for the time being. The game that followed was played under considerable difficulty, but it was one of the most enjoyable I ever took part in. Harry Wright, the Boston manager, made a heroic attempt to run up a score, but Spalding's excellent pitching made it impossible for the Beaneaters to win. As a result, we beat them, and this made them sorer than ever over the purloining of the "Big Four." I don't remember that I did anything sensational on that occasion. If I did it failed to get into my diary.

On September 23 we met Boston for the tenth and last time that season. We were mighty anxious to make our account against the club ten straight victories, but we were doomed to disappointment. I suppose that our nine previous successes had made us over-confident, or perhaps it was our anxiety that made us shaky, for we failed to win, being beaten by a score of 10 to 9. But, say, it was worth being licked that day to see how happy it made Harry Wright to save just one little game out of the ten we had pulled off. He was so tickled that he had at last downed his hated rivals in a single game that he positively hugged O'Rourke when he crossed the home plate and scored the winning run.

I've got to tell you, though, that 1876 was a mighty poor season for the business end of the game. Although we carried off the championship, we quit loser, and not a single club in the new league made a cent. That first year of the league was far from being a financial success. Some of the clubs got into serious trouble. My old friends, the Athletics, and the New York Mutuals failed to play out their scheduled games in the west that year, and at the next annual meeting of the league—held in Cleveland the following December—they were expelled. That left only six clubs to enter the arena for championship honors in 1877. The men who organized the league must have felt a little shaky as to the outcome of their experiment, but there wasn't anything that could chill the pedal extremities of William A. Hulbert when once he had undertaken to see a thing through. The organization of the league had been a hobby with him for years, and he declared that the new venture was going even better than he had expected. I am glad that he lived to see his scheme in successful operation.

HE POSITIVELY HUGGED O'ROURKE.

That fall I signed again with the White Stockings, as did Spalding, McVey, Barnes, Peters, Andrus and Glenn of the old team. Jim White repented of his desertion of the Hub and went back to his first love. Our newcomers were Bradley, who had done some wonderful pitching for the St. Louis club that season, and H. W. Smith, a promising catcher and outfielder.

Then, after I had completed my business arrangements for the next season, I returned to Philadelphia and put the finishing touch to the most important and profitable transaction in which I have ever taken part. I don't mind telling you, though, that when I faced the dominie on that occasion I was more rattled than ever I have been when, bat in hand, I have stood before the most puzzling twirler in the league.

We went out to Marshalltown on our wedding journey, putting up for a few days at the Anson house, whose proprietor was tickled to death to see us. It was our first meeting since I had become a full-fledged professional ball player, and the old gentleman had entirely recovered from his attack of spleen due to my refusal to become a scholar. As for his new daughter-in-law—well, I don't mind telling you that she made a big hit right at the start.

(To be continued next Saturday).

ELECTRIC POWER IS FLEXIBLE

A decided advantage which Central Station electric power has over steam, is its flexibility. One can use a fraction of one horse power or as many horse power as may be needed, up to a thousand or more, with equal facility.

With separate motors it is not necessary to keep an entire power plant running to operate a single machine. Each power unit can be started and stopped independently. In this way there is no power wasted; no expense which does not net direct returns.

One of our customers, who abandoned a steam plant and substituted Central Station electric power, writes that the change has saved money. Among other things he says:

"We have gained also in the space that was formerly taken up by the engine and consider it a great advantage to be able to increase our power by simply extending the wires to the point at which we wish to use it, thereby doing away with the long lines of shafting and the belts necessary under the old system, which we found a constant source of expense."

What Central Station electric power has done for this concern it can do for you. It can save you money.

Let our power engineer study your problem and show what can be done in your power plant. You can get the information without cost and without incurring any obligation. A card or a telephone message will bring him.

A communication from the Belmont Iron Works requesting that in connection with the proposed new bridge over the Elizabeth River the board consider the merits of their hand rail and bridge railings, and submitting blue prints of the same, was read and on motion by Freeholder Meisel this request was referred to the Elizabeth Dawbridge Committee.

Henry Krouse, Esq., Chairman of the County Road Committe, Roselle, New Jersey:

Dear Sir—Regarding the question of the improvement of the road known as Westfield avenue, between Orchard street, in the City of Elizabeth and Bayway, I beg to say that Westfield avenue, originally, in May, 1890, was, by resolution of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, taken over and improved as a county road under the act of March 19, 1889, known as the County Road Act, and the supplements and amendments thereto. Under this act, as amended in 1891, the Board of Freeholders could not arrange for the constructing of a trolley line thereon. Under the act of 1898, chapter 118 of the law of 1898, and the amendment thereto, chapter 102 of the laws of 1899, the construction of a street railway was permitted over said road. These acts simply gave the Board of Chosen Freeholders additional powers over roads which they already had control; that is, it gave them power to widen, straighten, grade and otherwise improve highways under their control, and to provide for the construction of street railroads thereon. The roads improved under the act of 1889 required that one-third of the expense of paving or otherwise improving said road, or any part thereof, should be paid by the cities, towns, townships or boroughs in or through which said pavement or improvements should be made in proportion to the cost of such improvement in each municipality.

As before stated, the act of 1898 by virtue of which the powers of the Board of Freeholders were extended so that a trolley line might be built upon Westfield avenue, did not curtail the powers of the board over said road, but extended them to that extent, giving them power to widen the road and, by widening the road and permitting the building of trolley lines thereon, they lost none of their former powers vested in them by virtue of the law of 1899.

Therefore, in my opinion, that part of Westfield avenue between Orchard street and Bayway remained a county road under the act of 1889 until it was relinquished by virtue of a resolution of the Board of Freeholders held in March, 1905; this they were authorized to do by virtue of the first section of said act of 1899. It is, therefore, my opinion that, at the present time, the Board of Chosen Freeholders have no jurisdiction over that part of Westfield avenue between Bayway and Orchard street in the City of Elizabeth.

The next question to be determined is, in case the Board of Chosen Freeholders desire to make any improvement on said road, how can it be done? It looks to me, at the present time that the only way it can be done would be by re-adoption of that part of the road under the act of 1889, and the supplements and amendments thereto. Then, by virtue of the amendment to the act of 1899, which amendment was made in 1907, chapter 182, the road may be repaired and maintained in the same manner as roads are required under the act known as the State Aid Road Act, Revision of 1905.

If the road was adopted under the State Aid Road Act of 1905, it is a question in my mind if any improvement could be made under it by the Board of Freeholders. Section 18 of the law of 1905, page 103, seems to provide that it would be necessary for the City of Elizabeth to enter into an agreement in writing with the Board of Freeholders for the repair and maintenance of that section of the road within the corporate limits, and further, that it would be necessary for the city to ever after keep said road in repair and be under the control of the city; hence, I see no relief for the City of Elizabeth in that respect. I am,

Very respectfully yours,
W. R. CODINGTON.

April 10, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Meisel, this communication was received and ordered placed on file and the clerk directed to send a copy to Mr. Samuel Koestler at El Mora.

Committee Reports.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Garwood Bridge would respectfully report that bids have been received for the work, and the work has been awarded to Elmer L. Moore, of Cranford, N. J., at $880, he being the lowest bidder.

The appropriation for this work was $850, and the committee would therefore introduce the following resolution:

Resolved, That the appropriation for the bridge at Oak street, Garwood, N. J., be increased from $850 to $880, as the last named figure was the lowest bid received for the work.

Respectfully submitted,
GEO. G. TELLER,
J. LOGAN FAY,
CHAS A. SMITH.

On motion by Freeholder Gruener, this report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to examine the culvert at Cherry street and Morris avenue, Union Township, would report that they have visited the place, and found the culvert filled up, and also found that the culvert was built of lightweight stone and wood, and that the foundations were practically gone.

Your committee would recommend that a new culvert, with concrete walls and cast iron cover plates, be constructed at this place, the cost not to exceed the sum of $215.

Respectfully submitted,
AARON D. CRANE,
THOS. J. PIERSON,
HENRY KROUSE.

On motion by Freeholder Doane, this report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders,
Elizabeth, N. J.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Union Street Bridge, Fanwood, New Jersey, would report that they have met and made an examination of the bridge.

The present bridge is of wood, and is rotted. The foundations are also in very bad order.

Your committee would recommend that a new bridge be built across Union street at this point of concrete and steel, the span to be 5 feet and the length 49 feet, at a cost not to exceed the sum of $625.

Respectfully submitted,
BURTON P. HALL,
D. F. HENNESSY,
ELSTON DARBY.

On motion by Freholder Gruener this report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

Your committee on Drawbridge in Rahway would recommend that A. T. Crane be appointed bridge tender of said bridge from May 1. 1911, to May 1, 1912. The salary to be two hundred dollars ($200) a year.

Respectfully submitted,
ADOLPH H. GRUENER,
THOMAS J. PIERSON,
W. H. RANDOLPH.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur, this report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee on three bridges at Westfield, N. J., would report that they have made an examination of the ground, and find that new bridges are needed at Boynton avenue, near the Street Railway Company's barns, and at Pierson street, near the new school house. The proposed new culvet on Westfield avenue, near Grove street, is on an old watercourse, but as the section has been developed into streets, it is the opinion of the County Attorney, whom we consulted in the matter, that the county is not liable for maintenance of the culvet.

Your committee therefore recommend that a new bridge be erected at Pierson street, 66 feet long by 10 feet span, at a cost not to exceed the sum of $1,000. Your committee also recommend that a new bridge be erected at Boynton avenue, 80 feet long by about 6 feet span, the cost not to exceed the sum of $1,000.

Respectfully submitted,
CHAS. A. SMITH,
BRADFORD JONES,
W. H. RANDOLPH.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, the report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Elizabeth Drawbridges would respectfully report that they have examined the Bridge street drawbridge over the Elizabeth River in detail, and have had estimates made of the cost of repairing the present bridge.

The bridge is 66½ feet in length and 24 feet in width.

The foundations are in very fair order. There will have to be some small amount of mason work done upon them to replace stones that are now displaced, but the cost of this work will probably be small. The foundations are in sufficiently good order to admit of use in the present bridges, or for use in a new bridge, should a new bridge be constructed.

In making repairs to the present structure there will have to be done the following work:

Replace lower chords of trusses throughout entire length.

Two new cross girders, at southerly end.

New hanger at all girders, where necessary, possibly over half of the bridge.

New steel straps at bottom of uprights, to be replaced over almost entire bridge.

About 100 lin. ft. of new tie rods.

New counterweight construction throughout, and new counterweights.

Rebuild south ends of top chords of trusses.

Refit turning gear.

New floor beams of steel, with new plank flooring.

Painting of whole structure when ready.

It is the opinion of the committee and County Engineer that these repairs will amount to approximately the sum of $2,600.

If such repairs are made, the bridge will probably be fit for use for some years, but will still be an old bridge, and will be light for modern traffic.

Your committee has also investigated the cost of a new structure at this point, using the present foundations and the present centre pier.

A new bridge, if built in this location, should be of heavier construction, should be built of a different type, preferably with solid trusses. A solid floor system should be provided. There should be no way in which water could get into or stand upon the steel work construction, as at present.

The cost of such a structure is estimated from careful examination, as the sum of $4,700.

It is the opinion of your committee and the County Engineer that a new bridge should be built at this location. Experience in the past has demonstrated that old bridges such as this one, after being repaired, do not last well. In the case of the Summer street bridge, over the Elizabeth River, which is a drawbridge, considerable money has been spent in the past few years upon repairs, and the condition of the bridge at present is such that a new bridge has been authorized by the Board of Freeholders.

The committee would therefore recommend that a new steel bridge be authorized at Bridge street over the Elizabeth River, at a cost not to exceed the sum of $5,000.

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH PERRY,
J. LOGAN FAY,
GEO. G. TELLER.

On motion by Freeholder Jones, the report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted, 19 ayes and no nays.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your commiteee appointed to investigate the needs of culverts on streets in Garwood, N. J., would respectfully report that they have visited the place and examined the situation.

It was found that a great amount of water now finds its way to Center street which could better be intercepted at West street, and we would therefore recommend that a new culvet be built across Spruce avenue at the easterly gutter line of West street, to care for the flow of water at that place.

We further recommend that a 12-inch cast-iron pipe be laid across Myrtle street, at the easterly gutter line of Center street.

The total cost of the work not to exceed the sum of $235.

This culvert runs underneath the street railroad tracks and it is the intention of the committee to ask the Public Service Corporation to pay a part of the cost of the work.

Respectfully submitted,
J. LOGAN FAY,
CHAS. A. SMITH,
GEO. G. TELLER.

On motion by Freeholder Krouse, the report was received and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee on Jail Inspection would respectfully report that they have inspected the jail; also the books of the warden.

THE HORSE SHOW. EXCUSE ME LADIES! MY FIRST MONTH'S EXPERIENCE.

Did not have as much as four dollars to my name when I started, and the first day I went up into a lawyer's office to have my backers agreement signed, lawyer like, he had to give a voice about it, and scared my backer so much, that it is not signed yet. But it is as good as signed, for my actions have proven his advice to be worth about 30c, but please let me have the 30c. Now let me tell you why I love about one half the Plainfield lawyers. It is because I studied law under one of the best lawyers in Trenton and when I see you people paying for something that you don't get, jars me. Some of it is from pure dumbness,and some from pure devilishness. One or two of them got in my way unlawfully once, and they will go to jail just as soon as I get to them. This is what I have done: Disposed of 2 houses on East Seventh street, one on Madison avenue, one in Scotch Plains, one in Dunellen, two in Highland Park, 3½ acres of ground in New Brunswick. Have nine almost dealt for a Newark property (between Mr. Conover and myself) one farm and outfit at Middlebush, three farms at Pattenburg, one at Lebanon, and last but not least, a $27,000 farm near Clinton. Bought up-to-date Lakewood, sold two other parts there, and meet the Board of Trade at Easton next Tuesday to manage a tract of land, that I have not seen to lay out in building lots, and build up for the working class of people. They know in Easton as well as they do in Trenton.

Will it pay you to pay me $15 for advertising? I don't want to be bothered with any city property, if you don't, but just yet I can not expect farmers all over Jersey to do it.

By the way, I must not forget Mr. McDonough. In two weeks, without experience, he has written $28,000 of insurance, and he is not here to ask him how many houses he has rented. That ridiculous sign does it. D. Foster Updike.

Chalmers MOTOR CARS

are units of efficiency and beauty. No part is "skimped;" no line is out of harmony.

The Chalmers "30" is a perfectly balanced car. Its motor is powerful enough to take the car everywhere a car can go—it has as much speed as any man can use.

The car is heavy enough to ride well on any road, but not so heavy as to load the motor with useless weight.

The frame is heavy and strong; the wheels are large and of the best materials; the rear axle is of the full-floating type; the brakes are powerful and easily operated; highest grade ball bearings are used throughout motor and transmission; the motor valves are large, giving the maximum of power; the unit power plant insures perfect alignment of working parts; the best nickle steel is used throughout the chassis.

In fact, the things which are advertised as "features" of other cars are found as a matter of course in the Chalmers.

Chalmers cars are designed and built to give satisfaction in every condition of motoring. 14,000 Chalmers owners would tell you that they do give satisfaction, if you could ask them.

MEN FALL FORTY FEET IN WINDMILL COLLAPSE

Two carpenters at work razing a windmill forty feet above the ground, in Bernardsville, Thursday, narrowly escaped serious injury and possible death when the structure collapsed under them and carried them to the earth.

A peculiar feature of the case is that the fall of the mill resulted from one of the supports being knocked out of place by a timber dropped by one of the workmen.

The men are Samuel Allen and Ralph Marclow, of Basking Ridge. They were at work on the country place of a Mr. Chapin. Maclow was knocked senseless and at first was thought to be fatally hurt. He sustained bruises about the head and chest. Allen's left leg was crushed and his nose fractured.

Mr. Chapin had the injured men removed to their homes in Basking Ridge in his automobile.

Harriman and Flanagan Donate Trophies For Those They Won.

AT HORSE SHOW'S CLOSE.

Miss Mabel B. Hooley Captures Two Blues, Master Alan Harriman "Tickled to Death" By His Good Fortune.

The eighth annual exhibition of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club closed Saturday afternoon, with the largest attendance of the week and great interest in all the classes. The program was one calculated to arouse the enthusiasm of the lovers of the horse, including the championship classes, as well as those for hunters and jumpers and the military and club cup events.

Early in the afternoon it was announced that DeWitt C. Flanagan and J. W. Harriman after having won two challenge cups valued at $250 each, donated similar trophies for competition next year. Mr. Flanagan will name his cup after "Prince Charming" and "Rataplan," his two fine horses that won the "Thomas W. Lawson" cup, while Mr. Harriman will name his gift the "Nala" cup replacing the "Dr. Selwonk" trophy, which he received.

Mr. Harriman's entries were unbeatable on Saturday in the harness classes, and his "Nala" won the championship, while in the class for smaller horses "Lady Dilham" carried off a championship with her full brother, "Elegant Dilham" taking the reserve. Alan Harriman, the younger son of J. W. Harriman, not only drove "Lady Dilham" when she won the blue, but also captured first with the same entry in the competition for the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club challenge trophy, defeating a strong list of entries, which included not only his father, but Reginald C. Vanderbilt as well. Master Harriman was very proud as he drove about the ring with the handsome club trophy.

Reginald C. Vanderbilt also captured several blues with his thoroughbreds, including Silfield Lillie. Mrs. C. Cecil Fitler, who exhibited several horses, was only second to "Silfield Lillie" in the open harness class with "Sporting Extra," and later turned the tables on the Vanderbilt entry, driven by Miss Mabel B. Hooley, winning a first.

J. W. Harriman headed the list of blue ribbon winners with ten and five reds, while George Watson was second with his Florham Stud Farm entries, with seven firsts, five seconds and seven thirds. Mrs. Fitler added five blues, two reds and four yellows to her credit. Mr. Vanderbilt and William McGibbon each won four firsts and two seconds and Mr. McGibbon headed the list for the saddle classes.

There was considerable local interest in the fine performance of Miss Mabel B. Hooley's entries, "Sister Brown" and "Crusher," the former ridden by Brown Rolston and the latter by herself. They won a blue for pairs in fine style and in the last class of the day for hunters and jumpers, for the Watchung Hunt Club trophy. Miss Hooley's "Sister Brown" with Brown Rolston up, won first and Miss Hooley's "Crusher" was second.

Although there were many counter-attractions, the show was a success, and as stated before the only fact regretted is that the townspeople did not patronize it more liberally. The entire crowd was made up chiefly of out-of-town people. The awards for Saturday follow:

Class 8—Pair of Heavy Harness Horses Exceeding 15.2 Hands—Won by DeWitt C. Flanagan's b. g. Prince Charming and b. g. Rataplan; Florham Hackney Stud's b. g. Florham Tip Top and b. g. Florham Top Notch, second; Mrs. C. Cecil Fitler's ro. g. Jim Selby and ro. g. Fatty Bates, third.

Class 42—Saddle Ponies, not exceeding 14.2 hands—Won by Miss Sylvia M. Newgass' b. m. Sweetbriar; Somerset Farm's gr. m. Lady Idol, second; Mrs. F. E. DuBois' gr. g. Massoud, third.

Class 26—Combination saddle and harness horses—Won by Myron H. Oppenheim's b. g. Watchful; Percy R. Drury's ch. m. Mayo, second; John T. Spratley's ch. g. White Oak King, third; W. A. McGibbon's br. g. Kildare, fourth.

CARNIVAL SUCCESS

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, Nets $1,500 by Week's Enterprise.

BIG CROWD ON CLOSING NIGHT.

Profits to be Used in Building Addition to the Columbus Club—Committee Grateful to the Public for Patronage.

The Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus carnival which held forth on the West Front street grounds all last week came to a successful close Saturday night. A record crowd was in attendance and all the attractions from the smallest to the largest, did a capacity business until the lights were dimmed. Even then the sightseers were loath to go and the work of dismantling was commenced with many lingering on the lot.

The members of Watchung Council who had served as workers in various capacities throughout the week were entertained by the committee after all labors had ceased. Supper was served in the auxiliary tent and a general good time was had. An informal program of music and addresses added to the enjoyment.

As a result of the undertaking the council will net about $1,500 and the members individually and collectively express arppeciation to the general public for its support. An attempt was made to secure an absolutely clean and diverting attraction and the committee feels that the nightly crowds in attendance was sufficient proof that they had succeeded. The carnival company was well pleased with the week's business and left for Peekskill, N. Y., with favorable impressions of Plainfield. The profits derived by the council will be added to the fund to complete the rear addition to the Columbus Club building, arranged for when the general plans were first prepared.

The committee which arranged for the appearance of the carnival and to which credit is due for the success of the undertaking, was composed of the following members of the council Theodore J. Shirley, chairman; J. J. Varley, secretary; A. A. Connon, treasurer, A. E. Kenney, H. P. Greenwood, John J. Kenney, C. W. Fogarty, W. H. Shaefer, John Carty, John C. Traynor, Miles Wilson, M. D. O'Keefe, Daniel J. Couraine, David Doyle, C. L. Kling, Clinton Shannon, Robert McCormack, A. M. Martell, David Mack, M. J. Whalen, William Messler, Harry Parsch and Thomas Carty, Jr.

COUNCIL TO RECEIVE WATER REPORT TONIGHT

The Comomn Council will hold its regular June meeting tonight when it is expected that the special water commission will present its final report. While the contents have not been announced in advance, it is the general belief that the report will recommend condemnation proceedings in the matter of acquiring municipal water supply for Plainfield. It is known that several members of the body favor this procedure and are anxious to vote for such a recommendation on the part of the committee.

The committee has been holding meetings frequently of late for the purpose of preparing its report, but the members have refused to discuss the probable text of it, preferring to have it first made known at a meeting of the Common Council. While there are some who favor condemnation proceedings, it is known that there are many others who do not, in fact some of the largest taxpayers of the city oppose such a scheme.

As it will be the regular meeting tonight, it is also expected that a number of other important matters will be considered. Mayor Moy may send in some appointments to add interest to the meeting.

MISS MARGUERITE BROWN WIFE OF FRANCIS VESEY.

Miss Marguerite Brown, of Park avenue, and Francis Vesey, of Newark, were married yesterday afternoon, Rev. B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, officiating. Miss Mayme Brown, of this city, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and John Vesey, brother of the groom, was the best man.

The bride wore a suit of steel gray with a hat to match, while the bridesmaid wore a gown of white embroidery. A reception followed the ceremony and after a trip, the couple will reside in Newark, where the groom is employed.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF DAVID R. WEAVER HELD

The funeral service of David R. Weaver was held at the late home on Manning avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including about sixty members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., who had charge of the service; also members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mr. Weaver was a member for many years, conducted the first part of the service, offering prayer and reading appropriate Scripture selections. Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., then took charge and the officers conducted the ritualistic form of funeral service in an impressive manner.

There were many beautiful floral tributes, including a wreath from Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., a pillow of roses and pinks from Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., a pillow of pinks and smilax from Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., a handsome pillow of pinks and smilax from the family; a large wreath of autumn leaves from his nieces, Mrs. Vincent L. Frazee and Mrs. Walter N. Martin; a broken column of lilies, roses, pinks and peonies from Woolston & Buckle and employes, where Mr. Weaver was employed for twenty-one years and a beautiful star from Lydia Chapter, Order Eastern Star Lodge; also palms from his brother, Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver was one of the first councilmen in North Plainfield, when that place became a borough, and for many years he was overseer of the poor. In recognition of this fact, representatives of the borough government attended the service.

The remains were taken today at Whitehouse, the former place of residence of Mr. Weaver, for burial, where Mr. Broek held a service at the grave. The pall-bearers, members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., were Andrew Lutkins, Henry Nischwitz, L. C. Sheppard, William Krausse, W. C. Smith and John T. Case.

The women of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold an all-day sewing meeting Thursday.

The East New Jersey Baptist Association will hold its annual meeting at the Parmley Memorial Baptist church, Jersey City, tomorrow.

ARGUMENT ON BILL BEFORE GOVERNOR

Governor Wilson, this morning in the executive offices in Trenton, gave a hearing on the Frelinghuysen bill, No. 301, permitting boroughs to make changes in sewer plants the signing of the measure was opposed by a delegation of fifteen from Bound Brook and adjacant territory, who object to Plainfield constructing a sewage disposal plant near their border line. H. G. Opdyke introduced the Bound Brook delegation and Sherard Depew, of Trenton, spoke for the bill representing North Plainfield borough. The governor expressed the belief that the site of the plant could not be changed without the consent of the township in which it is to be located. He did not say whether he would or would not sign the bill.

MONDAY MORNING IN POLICE COURT

Sentence was suspended in police court this morning on Frederick C. Waldron, of McDowell street, who was arrested on complaint of his wife. Mrs. Waldron told how her husband had beaten and otherwise abused her. Judge DeMeza gave the culprit a lecture and received his promise to live in harmony wih his wife in the future.

Antonio Jarbenski, of West Third street, arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, also got a suspended sentence on his promise to report each week to Overseer-of-the-Poor Ayers and to pay his wife, from whom he is separated $5 a week for her support.

Charles McSchaefer, of Spooner avenue, was held in $1,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury on a heinous charge preferred against him.

For taking bottles and other things from the city dump on Randolph road, two junk dealers, George Treano and G. Polastro, both of Newark, were arrested this morning. They will be given a hearing tomorrow morning. The complaint was made by the city dump keeper. Neither Newarker has a junk license here.

Mrs. Dr. Ferguson, of Madras, will speak at a parlor meeting to be held next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. F. St. John Fitch, 916 Park avenue.

P.H.S. PUPILS SANG OPERA AND CANTATA

The sacred cantata of "Ruth" by Gaul, and the comic opera of "Patience," were given by the pupils of the Plainfield High School at the school auditorium Saturday night before a capacity audience. The cantata and the opera were received enthusiatically. The school chorus sang the cantata, while a cast selected from the pupils of the school gave the opera.

The soloists in the cantata were as follows: "Ruth," Miss Anna Tillotson; "Naomi,' Miss Eunice Eckert; "Orpah," Miss Kathryn Smineck; "Boaz," Roy E. Titsworth. A piano solo by Miss Mabel Maxson and a group of songs by Miss Ruth Sadler had to be omitted owing to the length of the program.

The opera "Patience," was given as the last half of the program. The cast has the assistance of Mrs. Clarence Cooney, of New York, and she gave a fine interpretation of the part of "Lady Jane." Miss Susan Bennett took the leading part in a finished manner. Samuel B. Howe, Jr., as "Reginald Bunthorne," and Roy E. Titsworth, as "Archibald Groosvenor," were exceptionally good and pleased with their solos and clever acting.

Luther Banks, Burnett Doane and Felix Janke were also good in their parts, especially Felix Janke. The comp'ete cast follows:

"Colonel Calverly," Luther Banks; "Major Mergertroyd," Burnett Doane; "Lieutenant of Dunstable," Felix Janke; "Reginald Bunthorne," S. B. Howe, Jr.; "Archibald Grosvenor,' Roy E. Titsworth; "Lady Angela," Miss Eunice Eckert; "Lady Sophia," Miss Margaret Tubbs; "Lady Ella," Miss Margaret Hutchinson; "Lady Jane," Mrs. Clarence Cooney; "Patience," Miss Susan Bennett; chorus of maidens, the Misses Arnold, Brownlee, Brokaw, Bingaman, Bird, Foster, Hamilton, Russel, Wean, Smith, Alice Smith, Maclay, Sutton, Moore, Thompson, Leitheusser, Ogden, Stewart, Selby and Waldorf.

DR. F. C. ARD WEDS

Local Specialist Takes Miss Catharine Chappelle as His Bride.

CEREMONY HELD AT WESTWOOD

A Few Close Friends Witness Marriage—The Couple Start on Two Weeks' Auto Trip.

Miss Catherine Chappelle, of New York city, and Dr. Frank C. Ard, of this city, were quietly married at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at the summer home of the bride's brother-in-law, Bond Thomas, Riverdale road, near Westwood, N. J. Rev. Mr. Fair, rector of the Episcopal church at Westwood, performed the ceremony. The couple was unattended.

The ceremony was witnessed by only a few relatives and intimate friends those present from this city being Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Murray, Dr. and Mrs. B. VanD. Hedges and Miss Walbridge.

A pleasing and attractive feature was that the ceremony was performed on a large veranda of the house, and the wedding luncheon was served on the spacious lawn adjoining. The veranda was tastefully decorated for the affair with the season's flowers. After congratulations and the luncheon, Dr. and Mrs. Ard left on a two weeks' automobile trip. Upon their return they will reside at Dr. Ard's home on Park avenue.

The bride's home was formerly in California, but for several years she has been living with her sister in New York. She was a schoolmate of Miss Walbridge, of this city, in Brooklyn, and she has a large number of friends in this city. Dr. Ard is also well-known here, where he has resided for a number of years. He has been prominent here in society and in enterprises for the maintenance and improvement of Muhlenberg Hospital. He was one of the leading members of the Plainfield Automobile Club, which he helped to organize. He has a large practice as an eye and ear specialist.

MEMORIAL SERVICES OF LOCAL JR.O.U.A.M.

Under the auspices of Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., the annual memorial services were held yesterday afternoon. The Juniors to the number of about one hundred, met at their respecitve lodge rooms and then marched in a body to the North Plainfield cemetery, where the first service was held at the grave of William Newmiller. The second service was held in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue, at the grave of Theodore Kurzhals, Jr. There was a large number of juniors in line and the services were very impressive

State Councilor William B. LaRue, of Bound Brook, made the memorial address of the day, and the Rev. Charles S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, delivered the eulogies at both services, and Rev. W. A. Knox, of Dunellen, offered prayer.

George Watts, of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., was the master of ceremonies and he was assisted by Guy E. Thomas and John Kliner, in placing American flags and flowers at the graves of departed members. This service, which was inaugurated a few years ago, has grown in interest each year and this method of honoring the memories of departed members is being adopted by other councils of the order.

RECTOR RESIGNED

Ill Health Compels Rev George A. Warner to Leave Holy Cross Church.

ORDERED TO TAKE A LONG REST

Clergyman Severs His Membership on Borough Board of Education—Suffers Nervous Break-down From Over-work.

Broken in health by over-work, Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross and one of the most popular men in the community, has relinquished his duties and has left for an indefinite time in the hope that a long rest may fully restore him to health. For six months past his nervous system has been badly impaired but he fought persistently against a complete breakdown. The collapse, however, came on Thursday and his physician ordered him to quit work at once and to take a long rest.

The clergyman, accordingly, sent his resignation to the vestry and asked that it be accepted at once in order to allow him to go away. At the same time, he resigned as a member of the North Plainfield Board of Education, of which body he was a most valuable member. His fellow members on the board were depending on him largely to make the borough high school arrangements and the loss was therefore doubly felt.

The resignation as rector was read by Rev. Dr. Brockway, of New York, who conducted the morning service at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday and it came as a sad surprise to his devoted and appreciative parishoners. In some of the local churches yesterday prayers were offered for his speedy recovery. Expressions of regret and sorrow were heard on every hand.

Rev. Mr. Warner is a graduate of the General Theological seminary, New York, where he took high honors. Preceding his theological training he took a college course.

FAREWELL RECEPTION FOR PASTOR AND WIFE.

The members of the First Baptist church are planning to give Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss a farewell reception on Thursday evening, June 15, in connection with the retirement of Dr. Chambliss as pastor of the church. A committee of women from the church are now engaged in arranging the details of the affair.

Dr. Chambliss will close his pastorate at the church on Sunday, June 25, and it is expected that during the summer the pulpit will be occupied by supplies. In the meantime the special committee appointed for the purpose will be engaged in the work of securing a successor to Dr. Chambliss.

Y. M. C. A. MEETING AGAIN DRAWS BIG CROWD.

The Y. M. C. A. Christian Work Committee conducted the third of its series of open-air meetings at Front street and Madison avenue Saturday night. The crowd was fully as large as on the previous occasions numbering fully 500; and the same rapt attention was paid. The speakers were Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. Edmund Young and Edward Brunn again finished the musical features.

The speakers at next Saturday night's meeting will be Rev. John Y. Broek and Rev. G. B. Shaw. E. H. Guest will play the cornet and a tenor soloist will sing.

Vested Choir to Sing.

The boy choir of the Netherwood Reformed church, will appear for the first time in their new vestments at the morning service next Sunday at 10:30 o'clock, under the direction of Horace J. Martin. This will be Children's Day and the choir will take part in special exercises on that occasion.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire will address the Morris and Essex Baptist Association at the First Baptist church, Montclair, on Wednesday.

How to Have a Warm House

First—install a BOYNTON "Square Pot," Patented, Furnace in the basement.

Then—in the morning before business and in the evening before retiring, step down and turn the BOYNTON clinkerless, ash-cutting grate. This clears the fire perfectly. Now put in a little coal; set the dampers for the degree of heat you wish, and leave the to do the rest. The BOYNTON is the most reliable house-heater known. It consumes less coal and gives more heat for the coal consumed, than any other heater on the market.

The BOYNTON "Square Pot" never holds dead fire. BOYNTON Boilers are now equipped with this same economical fire box and quick clearing grate. See your dealer about BOYNTON "Square Pot" furnaces and boilers.

SENATE PLAN FOR NEW LORIMER INVESTIGATION

Washington, June 5.—All hands in the Senate were fairly well satisfied Friday with the plan for holding the new investigation of the election of William Lorimer, of Illinois. The men who voted for Lorimer last winter believe that the "dignity of the Senate" has been upheld and that no aspersion has been cast upon the previous investigating committee.

The anti-Lorimer Senators declare that they are willing to leave the matter to such men as Senator Kenyon (Rep., Ia.), former trust buster and avowed Progressive, and Senator Clapp (Rep., Minn.), one of the unrelenting Progressive wheel horses. With them will be Senator Kern (Dem., Ind.), and Senator Lea (Dem., Tenn.), both new members, who have not recorded their views in the case, and the following who voted for Lorimer last winter.

Dillingham (Rep., Vt.); Gamble (Rep., S. D.); Fletcher (Dem., Fla.), and Johnston (Dem., Ala.).

These men will form a sub-committee of eight—four Republicans and four Democrats—which will be authorized by the committee on Privileges and Elections and given full powers by the Senate.

MLLE. MARIE PETROT.

With Forepaugh and Sells Circus.

The most dangerous and terrific of circus thrillers is being presented this esason with the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Bros.' circus by a young French woman, Mlle. Marie Petrot. Seated in a heavy automobile she makes a terrific dash down a steep incline, the car and the rider then leaping high into the air and making two complete somersaults in space before lighting on a spring platform fifty feet away.

The danger of the act is apparent to all beholders. As the car makes its frightful leap into space, a tragedy seems inevitable. The first turn is made in safety, but this only intensifies the suspense. For the fraction of a second the automobile pauses in the air, bottom up, as though its energy were already spent. This for the audience is the critical moment and many avert their eyes, death to the brave young woman seeming certain. As gracefully as a bird wings its way across a meadow the second somersault is turned and with a heavy crash the car hits the platform.

This is but one of many sensational numbers with the show. The Ty-Bell Sisters, from France, are presenting an aerial spectacle known as the "Human Butterfly" act. It is fully as dangerous and it has great beauty as well. Among the trained animal numbers are two troupes of riding, juggling and musical seals, Prof. Taylor's monkey circus and the three best trained herds of elephants in the world Next Friday, June 9, will be the day and date.

Henry Demarest has returned from a week's visit with relatives at Bound Brook.

Jury Awards Fifty Cents.

Trenton, June 5.—Charles J. Fury, proprietor of the Hotel Sterling, was allowed fifty cents damages Thursday by the jury which heard the trial of his suit against Alfred W. Packer, sergeant-at-arms of the City District Court, whom he sued for $5,000 damages, claiming that Mr. Packer assaulted him April 4 last. The defense admitted the assault, but claimed that the defendant struck the plaintiff thinking that the latter was about to attack him. Mr. Packer has brought a counter suit against Mr. Fury for $5,000, alleging an assault, which grew out of the same trouble which resulted in Mr. Fury's bringing suit. The suit was on the calendar for trial, but Judge Lloyd has put it over until next term.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

With the trees that really grow in the earth and nature's own shrubbery for their scenery, and the green carpet of grass for their stage, the Coburn Players of New York, will present "Much Ado About Nothing," at the Plainfield Country Club tonight. The immortality of the play has long been recognized everywhere, but it remained for this company to give to the most charming comedy that Shekespeare ever wrote the setting that once seen seems more truly theirs than any other. In the open air, with only the sky for a roof, they are escaped from the sometimes smothering complexity of the playhouse, and seem veritable to come into their own amid surroundings where the plays and not theatrical accessories are the thing. The Coburns have appeared before audiences made up of students and faculty of most of the most important institutions of learning in the country and this season their tour embraces return engagements to the greater part of these.

Children's Day services will be observed at Trinity Reformed church next Sunday, and a feature will be the baptism of children. The pastor, Rev. J. Y. Broek, will be in the church parlor Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock to meet parents.

A LOSS TO PLAINFIELD.

The resignation of Rev. George A. Warner as rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, meaning as it does his withdrawal from this community, is a most unpleasant surprise by no means confined to his own parish. During the nine years that he has been here, he has enedared himself to the townspeople generally, so much so that at every public gathering and in every movement of any importance he was expected to and did take a conspicuous part. A man among men, at all times he commanded respect and admiration and has been a power for good. The blow caused by his resignation is all the more deeply felt because it is caused by ill health, a complete nervous breakdown due to over-work. The Daily Press voices the sentiment of the community in wishing the popular clergyman a speedy recovery.

ORGANIZED CHARITY WORK HERE IN MAY

The slight increase in the number of new cases of poverty reported last month has given the society time and opportunity to take up the problem of a serious crisis which has arisen in Plainfield; namely, those who are interested in the welfare of the sick and poor are confronted by the possibility of having no district nurse to send to the relief of the suffering. The City Union of King's Daughters has maintained a visiting nurse for a number of years and in this way has relieved a great deal of distress, and in fact has demonstrated the impossibility of a city the size of Plainfield getting along without such services. Last month the King's Daughters at their annual meeting, decided to concentrate their efforts in the development of their Day Nursery. It naturally fell to the Organized Charities to sound the sentiment of the community and learn whether a nurse could still be maintained. This has been done and it is likely that with the assistance of all who are interested in this most necessaryand charitable endeavor, a new nurse trained in both hospital and field work will be put at work in Plainfield within a short time. The executive secretaries will be able to give particulars to those desiring information and the society will most heartily welcome suggestions and assurances of financial support.

As to the routine work in May, 21 new cases were taken up and 7 reopened, making a total of those carried forward of 118 families; during the month, 156 aplicants called at the society's office and 285 consulted the secretaries in regard to relief; the secretaries made 402 visits and were assisted by 9 volunteer visitors, who visited 17 families in addition; 12 persons were sent to institutions and 28 to the Muhlenberg clinic or to the doctors; 35 cases of tuberculosis were on the books of the society druing the month, the largest number yet recorded; it was necessary to take 10 cases into court and two children were placed in private homes.

The material relief dispensed during the month shows a falling off from the winter figures, although the decrease has not been apparent earlier in the spring. $292.40 was expended for board, clothing, milk, provisions and rent; the local druggists filled 13 prescriptions for the society's clients; and the poor and alfs committee co-operated in a number of cases. The society feels that it is now supplying adequate relief to a few cases and thinks this is more satisfactory than dividing money as it has to spend among a great many inadequately.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The monthly business meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Temple Baptist church will be held in the Baraca Bible class room Thursday evening.

Immanuel Circle, of King's Daughters of the Temple Baptist church, will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. William Crow, of Belmont avenue, Thursday evening.

The monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Temple Baptist church will be held Wednesday evening after the weekly prayer-meeting.

Rev. Dr. William Spurgeon, of London, will speak at the Park Avenue Baptist church Saturday, June 17, and will preach at the church the following day and on Monday night, June 19, he will lecture at the church.

ARRESTED HIM AGAIN FOR SUNDAY SELLING.

Peter Riseto, who conducts an ice cream and fruit store on East Front street, was arrested by Patrolman Dennis O'Keefe yesterday on a charge of Sunday selling. This is the second time that Riseto has been taken into custody on a similar charge, and City Judge W. G. DeMeza entered into an agreement with Martin B. Stutsman, counsel for the defendant, that pending a decision in the first case, Riseto be permitted to sell ice cream, but he must not display his goods for sale as on other days. A decision in the first case is expected within the month.

The Misses Ray and Anna Warnock, of Craig place, returned Saturday after attending the graduation exercises at the University of Maryland and a sightseeing trip to Washington, Mount Vernon and other places.

ACKERMAN COLLECTION HIS PRESENT TO STATE

Through the generosity of Acting Governor Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, the New Jersey State Museum, already the depository of a wealth of material of historical and economic value, is to be enriched by a splendid collection of Continental paper money. Acting Governor Ackerman has presented the collection to the museum and Curator S. R. Morse has accepted it for the State.

The collection consists of 110 pieces and is the finest in the world, as it is complete in every detail as issued to the people, with one exception. It lacks the six dollar note of the tenth issue, dated Philadelphia, September 26, 1778. This Mr. Ackerman still hopes to obtain and place with the collection, The collection will be mounted in suitable frames for proper display in the museum and will be known as the Ackerman Currency Collection.

This collection was formed by the late Harmon A. Chambers, of Philadelphia, a collector of notes, who gave the greater part of more than eighty odd years of his life to the collecting of paper money, autograph letters and historical matters generally relating to Pennsylvania. The set, all in fine condition, was the one Mr. Chambers had selected as his best. Acting Governor Ackerman obtained the set some years ago when the Chambers collections were disposed of. Mr. Ackerman has added many choice notes to the set since he has owned it.

Acting Governor Ackerman has long been known as one of the most noted living Philatelists. His collection of postage stamps of the United States and various foreign countries, is superb. While he has long been known as a famous collector of stamps, few of his friends knew that he was also a collector of coins and paper money.

Curator Morse said today that the value of this collection as an educational exhibit is beyond comprehension and the State was indeed very fortunate in obtaining it. He declared that the gift was another demonstration of the liberality of New Jersey citizens and their desire to make the State Museum one of the finest in the country.

Continuing, Mr. Morse insisted that the State should no longer delay asking provision for increased museum accommodations that the great and valuable collections may be properly safeguarded and properly displayed. He said that he was in touch with other citizens who would, doubtless, contribute collections to the museum as the final resting place for them if the State provided adequate facilities for properly displaying them.

The annual excursion of the First Baptist church Sunday school will go to Asbury Park on July 27.

MOVE TOMORROW IN KENSINGTON AVE. CASE

Although today was fixed as the return date for the writ of certiorari in the matter of the proposed extension of Kensington avenue, the papers will be actually filed tomorrow in the Supreme Court at Trenton. As required by law in all such cases the city clerk must prepare a report of all proceedings in the matter. This has been done by Clerk James T. MacMurray, and the report is a very complete one comprising ninety pages. It gives a detailed report of this matter from 1904 to date.

The court will go over the records and will then fix the date of argument, if it thinks it is necessary. Usually after the prosecutor of the writ files his reasons, en days elapses before argument is heard. Howard H. Williams, who, with Winfield S. Angleman represents the protesting property-owners on Kensington avenue, are prepared to go on with the case, and it is the general impression that Judge Gilbert Collins has been retained to represent the city.

TWO FARMHANDS DROWN IN A POND

Patrick Brady, 23 years of age, and Alonzo Toloski, age 26, farmhands employed by Walter Henderson, manager of the Talcott farm near Westfield, were drowned yesterday afternoon in Lambert's mill pond.

The two men in company with another farmhand went to the pond directly after eating a hearty dinner. They disrobed and entered the water for a swim. Suddenly both men gave a cry and sank beneath the surface, as they came to the top both men began to fight desperately, each trying to cling to the other, finally they embraced and sank from sight.

Meantime the man who had accompanied them had cried for help, but as the place is far from any house no one came. The man then ran to the Talcott farm and informed his employer of the drowning. Chief of Police O'Neil, of Westfield, was telephoned to and immediately sent men to the pond, but the bodies of the drowned men could not be located. A renewal of the search will be made this morning.

The water in the pond at the point where the men went under is at least twenty feet in depth. Two women school teachers were drowned at the same point twenty-five years ago.

BANK'S SUPPOSED THOUSANDS MISSING

Something new in the way of bank defalcations developed Saturday at the local plant of the Manganese Steel Safe Co., when a large safe was opened after many unsuccessful attempts. A large sum of money, stated to be between twenty-five and forty thousand dollars, was supposed to be inside, but when the anxious watchers were able to peer into the depths of the treasure compartments the munificent amount of ten cents was revealed. The owners of the safe were immediately wired

The safe was one of the big bank type put out by Maganese Company and was installed by it some years ago in the Farmers' State Bank, of Tuska, Oklahoma. Word was received by the concern several weeks ago that the combination had gotten out of order in some way and to get the door open experts were sent to the Oklahoma town to see what could be done, but their efforts proved of no avail. The safe resisted their attempts to get inside with the strength of Gibraltar and they finally decided upon the last recourse—ship the steel mass to Plainfield and have it ground open. The bank officials declared this would have to be done as the bundle of money tucked away in the interior was sorely needed to carry on business.

The safe was accordingly forwarded to this city as speedily as possible and it was found beyond all shadow of a doubt that the combination had been tampered with. There was nothing to do but cut it open and the big grinders were set at work. A messenger from the First National Bank was kept on hand in readiness to transfer the treasure to a vault and a representative of the Oklahoma institution was present to do the counting. The safe was finally separated but alas and alack, the emptiness within corresponded with the empty looks of the watchers. A drop from thousands of dollars to the price of two beers almost gave the bank men heart disease.

Want to Adopt the Baby.

The baby found on the doorstep of Forster Hartpence's home Saturday morning, is still in the care of Overseerseer Ayers. Several people have asked permission to adopt it and it may be turned over to one of them. The police have conducted an investigation but have secured no trace of the person who abandoned the child.

The regular weekly prayer-meeting at Grace M. E. church Wednesday night will be devoted to the interests of Sunday-school work. F. W. Miller, of Somerville will speak on general Sunday-school work and James E. Church, of the borough, will make an address on "The organization of bible classes." All interested are cordially invited to attend.

MEN AND THE CHURCH SUBJECT FOR SERMON

"Men and the Church," was the subject of a special sermon delivered at Trinity Reformed church last night, by Rev. John Y. Broek, when the members of the Dutch Arms, men's association, attended the service in a body. Rev. Mr. Broek took his text from Matthew 6:14 "Ye are the Light of the World," and in part he spoke as follows:

"The church, the true body of believers, is a light to the community, to the nation and the world. If churches were taken away we would be plunged into an era of moral and spiritual darkness. No person would care to live in a city in which there were no churches, and no business man would want to advertise the fact.

"The church is a great living organization through which God is working to establish righteousness and truth in this world of sin It is not a holy club, nor made up of good people. We are sinners saved by grace and we are in the church because we need it. The different sects and denominations exist, growing out of diversities of language, time and place, yet it is essentially one church of which Christ is the Head.

"We should plan large things for the church. Too often we are content to do religious work on a minimum standard instead of by maximum standard. We will never regret doing all we can for the church for it will abide forever.

"It is one of the hardest duties of a minister to get men interested in active religious work. The women are in the forefront, and the men are left behind. Many organizations are doing a tremendous amount of good in their own way, but there is no organization which is doing a larger amount of good than the church."

Preceding his sermon Mr. Broek congratulated the Association upon the excellent work it has been doing since it was organized and of the large number of men present at the service; also referring to the honor he felt in being asked to preach a special service to them. The Dutch Arms is one of the most active men's associations in the city and has been an influence for much good in Trinity church.

HONOR THE MEMORY OF DEPARTER ELKS.

A delegation from Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., visited the local cemeteries yesterday and placed magnolia wreaths upon the graves of departed members according to the annual custom. Besides those who had belonged to Plainfield Lodge, the graves of J. Y. Harkins, of Worcester Lodge, Worcester, Mass., in St. Mary's cemetery, and Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, who had frequently officiated at Elks' services, were also decorated. The wreaths were composed of magnolia flowers and leaves dyed purple by a special process. They are imported from Germony and last six months.

The committee in charge of the delegation was composed of S. P. T. Wilbur, chairman; A. D. Findlay and John H. Cose.

ACTING GOVERNOR A VERY BUSY MAN.

Acting Governor Ackerman spent the greater part of Saturday in the office of the Governor, clearing up the work so as to leave nothing undone for Governor Wilson when he arrived at the State house today after his western tour.

At a meeting of the trustees of the State school fund, over which the acting Governor presided, the trustees purchased $60,000 of Lakewood School bonds.

Although the acting Governor has only considered such matters as should receive immediate attention, it was estimated Saturday that he has been called upon to affix his signature to some 400 papers since he has been acting Governor.

Rigs Collide.

A runabout in charge of John Cooper, driven for H. S. Farley, of Watchung avenue, collided with a buggy owned by Mrs. John Berker, of South Plainfield, at Front street and Somerset streets this morning. The left rear wheel of the buggy was tron off. Mrs. Becker escaped with a slight shaking up. Spectators claim that the liveliness of Cooper's horse was responsible.

The monthly meeting of the Probasco Bible class will be held in the boys' room of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday evening. All members are urged to attend as this will be the last meeting until fall.

McGee, baritone, gave a musical service at the church last night under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist and choirmaster. The special numbers, which were enjoyed by a large congregation, included the following:

"Sun of My Soul," Matthews; "Still, Still With Thee," Burdett; "Crossing the Bar," Cruikshank; "O Divine Redeemer," Gounod, duet for contralto and baritone; "By the Waters of Babylon," Howells, baritone solo. In addition to the music, the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor, delivered an interesting short sermon.

JUNIOR MISSION BAND HOLDS ITS EXERCISES

Exercises of exceptional interest were given by the Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church at the close of its season's work on Saturday afternoon in the lecture room. The devotional service was conducted by Dr. J. A. Chambliss. A review of the study book entitled "The Finding Out Club" was in charge of Mrs. Chambliss, who has been the instructor of the band in Foreign Mission Study. Ten young girls called "Dimes" represented ten departments of the work done by a dollar and were the following members of the band: Travis Nash, Dorothy Lee, Katharine Endress, Emily Pilger, Dorothy Krewson, Rachel Smith, Emma Verscheur, Gladys Lee Bessie Case and Mary Buchanan. Five countries were described by the following young people, some of them in costumes: Japan, Erma G. Dobbins; India, Wilhemina Endress; Corea, Mabel Douglass; China, Charles Nash and Egypt, Craig Holder.

The program was pleasantly interspersed with music, Mrs. J. H. Buchanan acting as accompanist. Violin solos were rendered by Charlotte Verscheur and Randolph Douglass; piano solos by Edna White and Constance Harris and a piano duet by Dorothy Lee and Emma Verscheur. A sale of articles made by the band with cake and ice cream concluded the entertainment that gave great pleasure and satisfaction. Much credit is due Mrs. Reuben King for her centering interest in the band.

OFFICERS ON DUTY TO GET FREE RIDES

The State Board of Public Utility Commissioners announced its decision Saturday that the free riding of policemen, firemen and inspectors of boards of health, without discrimination, in the performance of their duty, is not a violation of the new public utility law. The text of the decision is as follows:

"The board does not regard the free transportation, with discrimination, on behalf of a municipality, of policemen, firemen and inspectors of boards of health, in the performance of their public duties, as a violation of the provisions of P. L. 1911, Chapter 195."

The Board did not decide the question of the right of railroad and trolley companies to give transportation at special reduced rates to school teachers and school children.

The question of the right of policemen, firemen and health inspectors to ride free on trolley cars was raised by the Public Service Corporation. The company held that the new law abrogated this right and such officials must pay fare even when in uniform and in the performance of their public duties. In this city and some other places the trolley companies did not prohibit such riding.

The decision of the Public Service Corporation prohibiting the free transportation of such officials assumed a political aspect in some sections, notably in Hudson county, where Assemblyman Charles Egan, father of the Public Utility Bill in the House, expects to be a candidate for another term as a lawmaker. Had the decision been the other way it would seriously have affected his chances of election, because all the policemen and firemen would have campaigned against him. Assemblyman Egan has insisted all along that it was not the intention of the framers of the new law that it should prohibit this free transportation.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

UP TO DATE—Had no money of my own, so took the other fellows money and went to Lakewood Wednesday and bought the very best piece of ground I could find to build a town or city on. It is situated at a one horse depot called Ridgway, but partly made arrangements yesterday to call it Uptodate. The main macadamized road running from Lakewood to Lakehurst goes right through Uptodate, and there is the making of a nice place there. Did you ever know that I sold Highland Park this city? Sold 500 lots there in 1½ years to outside people, while Plainfield people did nothing but kick about it. These lots are for the poor man. The prices will be $25, $30 and $35 each, and no tin can houses can be built there, for the lots shall be restricted to a $2,000 house. If you want to get in on the ground floor with me and I can tell you more about it, where it will not cost me so much. D. Foster Updike, my time is yours, 159 North avenue. 'Phone 1907. 6 1 tf

THE GOLD WAS THERE.

But Mark Twain Missed It by Just One Pail of Water.

With Steve Gillis, a printer of whom he was fond, Mark Twain went up into Calaveras county to a cabin on Jackass hill, where Steve's brother Jim, a lovable, picturesque character (the "Truthful James" of Bret Harte), owned mining claims. Mark decided to spend his vacation in pocket mining and soon added that science to his store of knowledge. It was a halcyon, happy three months that he lingered there. One day with Jim Gillis he was following the specks of gold that led to a pocket somewhere up the hill when a chill, dreary rain set in. Jim was washing and Clemens was carrying water. The "color" became better and better as they ascended, and Gillis, possessed with the mining passion, would have gone on regardless of the rain. Clemens, however, protested and declared that each pail of water was his last. Finally he said in his deliberate, drawling fashion:

"Jim, I won't carry any more water. This work is too disagreeable. Let's go to the house and wait till it clears up."

Gillis had just taken out a pan of earth.

"Bring one more pail, Sam," he pleaded.

"I won't do it, Jim! Not a drop! Not if I knew there was a million dollars in that pan!"

They left the pan standing there and went over to Angel's camp, which was nearer than their own cabin. The rain kept on, and they sat around the grocery and barroom smoking and telling stories to pass the time.

Meanwhile the rain had washed away the top of the pan of earth left standing on the slope of Jackass hill and exposed a handful of nuggets—pure gold. Two strangers had come along and, observing it, had sat down to wait until the thirty day claim notice posted by Jim Gillis should expire. They did not mind the rain—not with that gold in sight—and the minute the thirty days were up they followed the lead a few pans farther and took out $20,000 in all. It was a good pocket. Mark Twain missed it by one pail of water.—Chicago Post.

INSURANCE MAPS.

Handy Guides For Underwriters In Fixing Premium Rates.

Many persons must have noticed when making application for fire insurance that it is the practice of the underwriter to examine certain maps before he will fix the rate of premium or accept a risk on the property offered. His lithographic surveys marked off in diagrams of red and yellow and other colors are always in evidence, sometimes bound securely in dozens of large volumes, on other occasions laid conveniently in piles of loose sheets for handy reference.

Few persons realize, however, that these maps contain all the information which the underwriter desires to know about the building he is asked to insure and that in most instances more matters are explained to him by a single glance than the applicant could make even though he be the owner of the property.

As a matter of fact the details set forth are most explicit. The mapmaker has managed by colors, characters and signs to give a full description of the construction, equipment and occupation of the building, everything which over fifty years of this sort of surveying has proved to be of any possible interest to the insurance man. It is so complete, for instance, that an agent in New York city can readily form a good idea of the character of a risk situated in some town in Missouri or California, or, vice versa, agents in towns in these western states can likewise tell the character of a risk in New York city.—Cassier's Magazine.

Poising on Nothing.

Away up in the air, far beyond the mountain tops, the great condors will hang poised as motionless as if perched on solid rock. True, their wings are outstretched, but even through glasses not the slightest motion is perceptible. They remain in this position for many minutes, sometimes for an hour, making a careful scrutiny of everything below them in their search for prey. Then, with a slight tilting of the wings, they flap slowly away, or, having found what they were seeking, dart like a bullet toward it. The eagle, hawk and other species have this same faculty of poising apparently on nothing.

Banked Rails.

In rounding a curve the tendency of the weight of a train is invariably to shift to the outside wheels. To counteract this tendency the outer rail of a curve is raised on a higher level than the inside, the elevation being in an exact proportion to the sharpness of the curve as determined by the principles of engineering. If both rails of a curved track were of exactly the same elevation a train would not dare round it at high speed.

FOUGHT IN THE TREES.

Curious Duel Between a Pair of Fire Eating Frenchmen.

In the swashbuckling days of the early part of the nineteenth century the dueling hero in France was the Marquis Merle de Sainte-Marie, whose affairs of honor were almost incessant. One of these is said to have been so ridiculous that it helped to set in motion the current of feeling that has since made dueling so much less honorable than it once was.

It appears that one day there called upon the marquis one Pierrot d'Issac, himself a famous duelist. Now, in French pierrot means sparrow and merle means blackbird.

D'Issac struck himself on the chest with emphatic dignity. "Marquis," said he, "I am a Bonapartist and you are a royalist. Moreover, I am the sparrow and you are the blackbird. It seems to me that there is one bird of us too many."

"I quite agree with you, monsieur," politely replied the marquis, "and my choice is pistols, and, as is appropriate for birds of our species, let us fight in the trees."

Pierrot d'Issac was agreeable to this unique suggestion, and as if it were not a sufficiently ridiculous thing that one man should challenge another because his name was Sparrow and the other Blackbird the duel was actually fought from trees. The seconds stood on the ground below.

At a given signal the pistols were fired, and there was a rustling among the leaves of one of the chestnut trees. Pierrot d'Issac came tumbling to the ground "like a ripe chestnut," as one of Sainte-Marie's seconds expressed it, whereupon Merle de Sainte-Marie in a facetious mood began to chirp triumphantly in imitation of the song of the blackbird. D'Issac waited till he had recovered from his wound and then challenged Sainte-Marie for the chirp.

This time there was nothing amusing about the encounter. It was fought with swords, and Sainte-Marie was badly wounded. The sparrow had avenged himself on the blackbird.—New York Herald.

FORBES' GREAT FEAT.

His Newspaper Story of the Last Days of the Commune.

One morning after the siege of Paris, when the city was believed in London to be still in the hands of the commune, Sir John Robinson, manager of the Daily News of London, reached his office to find the late Archibald Forbes lying on the floor asleep, his head on a postoffice directory, while the printers were hard at work on his manuscript, the story of "Paris In Flames," a most vivid description of the last days of the commune.

"Forbes had telegraphed from Dover announcing his coming," said Sir John Robinson, "the printers had been waiting, and thus the country heard of those terrible days for the first time.

"London was ablaze with excitement. Bouverie street was impassable through the newsboys shrieking for copies, and in parliament Mr. Gladstone was questioned that afternoon and could only say he hoped the story was exaggerated.

"When Forbes wakened from his slumber amid all this turmoil what a spectacle he was! His face was black with powder, his eyes red and inflamed, his clothes matted with clay and dust. He was a dreadful picture. He had been compelled to assist the communists in defending a triangular space upon which three detachments of the Versailles troops were firing and had actually taught the citizens how to build a barricade."

By aid of dummy dispatches addressed to Lord Granville and the queen Forbes escaped from this threatening triangle and wrote all the way to England, being the solitary passenger on the mail boat.

Must Have Been a Storm Scene.

"As perhaps there may be some one who has not heard the story of the Dutch painter, I tell it," says Elihu Vedder in the Atlantic.

"A person calling on this painter heard a most infernal uproar in his studio. Things seemed to be falling and brass plates flying about, and there were loud shouts.

"The servant came to the door in a state of great anxiety and told the visitor at once that the master could not be disturbed.

"'I should think he couldn't be much more than he is,' said the visitor. 'But what under the sun is the matter?'

"'He is painting a sky.'"

RUSIE'S TERRIFIC SPEED.

His Thunderbolt Delivery Terrorized the Batters.

A veteran ball player who has batted against nearly all of the noted pitchers in the last twenty years named Amos Rusie as the universal standard of speed in shooting the ball across the rubber.

"There have been many fast pitchers in baseball, and all of them in their time when they cut loose for fair have baffled the best of hitters with their speed, but you will notice that when fast pitchers are spoken of the one remark is always made, 'Has he the speed that Amos Rusie had?' And, I think, it will be that way forever. As long as great names are remembered or baseball is the nation's game Rusie will remain the champion speed merchant, the one pitcher who could send in the ball faster than any one else that ever lived. When you say 'fast as Rusie' you don't mean it, either; you only wish to show that your favorite pitcher is a very speedy boy.

"Words fail really to describe the speed with which Rusie sent the ball. He was a man of great width, great strength and the ability to put every ounce of his weight into the pitch. Coupled with this he had a set of dazzling curves which were manufactured with the same effort required to produce the speed. Some men can throw a straight ball with great force, but have to slow up in order to develop curves, but Rusie drove in a curved ball with all of his tremendous power.

"Facing Rusie to a timid man was like going into battle must be to an inexperienced soldier. The distance was shorter then. Rusie had the whole box to move around in instead of being chained to a slab, and he simply drove the ball at you with the force of a cannon. I have stood up to all the great pitchers of nearly twenty years, I have seen scores of them come and go, and none of them inspired the terror in a batsman's heart that was put there by the mighty Rusie. The ball was like a white streak tearing past you without time to balance yourself, figure the course of the ball or take aim at it. The fellows with the wide curve might fool you into reaching out and missing them, but you weren't reaching out at Rusie—you simply swung at a white streak as it hurled past, and if you took a full arm swing the ball was gone and in the catcher's hands before you had half finished the swinging motion.

"The convincing proof of Rusie's terrible speed was this: If any other pitcher hit a man the man swore, limped a moment and went to first. If Rusie hit a man the man retired from the game and sometimes went to the hospital. To be hit by Rusie was worse than to have an ordinary man smash you with a rock."—New York World.

He Didn't Know Them.

The late Rev. Horatio Stebbins of San Francisco was a man of large mind and noble powers, but more familiar with the world of intellectual and scholastic interests than with trivial and timely things. His household was blessed with a charming daughter who grew up tall and beautiful, commanding the admiration of all who saw her.

One day a visitor said to the good doctor: "Doctor, your daughter grows more charming day by day. Why, she's a regular Gibson girl."

"Ah, thank you, thank you," replied the doctor in his best manner. When the visitor had gone, turning to his wife the doctor asked, "My dear, who are the Gibsons?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Change For the Better.

The nine-year-old boy of a Baltimore family who is compelled by his parents to practice daily upon the piano may not be a clever performer, but he has a pretty shrewd notion of the worth of an instrument, as well as a rather mature wit, as is evidenced by an incident in the household not long since.

His father upon returning home from a week's absence heard the lad plugging away at the piano.

"When did you learn that new piece, son?" asked the parent.

"It isn't a new piece, dad," answered the boy. "The piano has been tuned."—Lippincott's.

She Won.

He was a philosopher and a talker. She was a woman of action. They stood together on the bridge and watched a tug that was hauling a long line of barges up the river.

"Look there, my dear," said he. "Such is life. The tug is like the man, working and toiling, while the barges, like the women, are"—

His wife gave him no time to finish the sentence. "I know," she said. "The tug does all the blowing and the barges bear all the burden."

Not So Bad.

"What's the worst you can say about him?"

"He hasn't an honest hair in his head."

"Well, that's bad enough."

"Oh, not so bad as you think. I mean he wears a wig."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Dining Hint.

Fletcher says you should "hold your face down" when you are eating, so that your tongue will hang perpendicularly in your mouth. To do this most comfortably get down on your hands and knees when you eat, explains the Chicago Record-Herald.

There is but one virtue—the eternal sacrifice of self.—George Sand.

PLAY WITH DEATH

Men Who Are Reckless In Handling High Explosives.

STORIES BY HUDSON MAXIM.

The Accident by Which the Inventor's Left Hand Was Blown Off—John Bender's Contempt For Dynamite—Mixing Fire and Nitroglycerin.

"It is practically impossible," writes Hudson Maxim in Adventure, "to make the ordinary laboring man appreciate the necessity of care in the safe handling of explosives, and the life of the careful man is always endangered by the actions of the careless one.

"After I had sold the works at Maxim and had invented motorite I needed a place in which to make the material and hired a branch of the works there for that purpose. It was winter. My wife had accompanied me as a precautionary measure. She was sitting in the laboratory to keep warm, near a big barrel stove charged with bituminous coal.

"On entering the laboratory for something my wife asked me what was in those two tin pails sitting near the stove. She said that she had a suspicion it might be nitroglycerin, and she informed me that one of my men had just been in stirring the fire and that the sparks flew out in all directions, some of them lighting in the buckets to be quenched on top of the oily liquid.

"'Horrors!' I said. 'It is nitroglycerin.'

"I called the man who had placed it there and told him to take it away. As it was necessary to keep the material from freezing he took it into the boiler house near by. A little later on, going into the boiler house, I saw one of the men stirring the fire while the other was standing with his coattails outstretched in either hand, forming a shield to keep the sparks from flying into the nitroglycerin.

"In the manufacture of high explosives and in experimenting with them a little absentmindedness, a very slight lack of exact caution, a seemingly insignificant inadvertence for a moment, may cost one a limb or his life. The accident that cost me my left hand is a case in point.

"On the day preceding that accident I had had a gold cap put on a tooth. In consequence the tooth ached throughout the night and kept me awake a greater part of the time. In the morning I rose early and went down to my factory at Maxim, N. J. In order to test the dryness of some fulminate compound I took a little piece of it, about the size of an English penny, broke off a small particle, placed it on a stand outside the laboratory and, lighting a match, touched it off.

"Owing to my loss of sleep the night before my mind was not so alert as usual, and I forgot to lay aside the remaining piece of fulminate compound, but instead held it in my left hand. A spark from the ignited piece of fulminate compound entered my left hand between my fingers, igniting the piece there, with the result that my hand was blown off to the wrist.

"Once when entering my storage magazine at Maxim, in which were several carloads of dynamite along with 37,000 pounds of nitrogelatin, I saw John Bender, one of my employees, calmly but emphatically opening a case of dynamite with a hammer and a chisel. I promptly discharged him.

"Not long afterward the innkeeper at Farmingdale called on me to buy some dynamite and said he had engaged Bender to blow the stumps out of his meadow lot. I told him Bender was courting death for himself and everybody around when handling dynamite, but Boniface still wanted Bender to do the work.

"'Well,' said I, 'the dynamite you want is 16 cents a pound, but if John Bender does not succeed in blowing himself up and killing himself with the dynamite you can have it for nothing. On the other hand, if he does blow himself up you must pay for the dynamite.'

"A few days later there was some hitch in Bender's exceptional luck. A particularly refractory old stump had resisted a couple of Bender's dynamic attacks. The failure to dislodge the stump Bender took as a personal affront because it reflected upon his skill as a stump blaster.

"'Next time,' said he, 'something is going to happen.' He placed about twenty pounds of dynamite under the deep rooted veteran, touched it off, and several things happened in very quick succession. The huge stump let go its hold on earth and proceeded to hunt Bender.

"It was a level race, but the stump won. Striking Bender on the north quarter, it stove in four ribs, dislocated several joints and damaged him in several other respects and particulars. Boniface came to settle for the dynamite.

"'Sixteen cents a pound,' I said. 'Bender hasn't a chance in a hundred. Wait till the doctors are through with him.'

"'What do you say to a compromise,' suggested Boniface, 'of 8 cents a pound? For, really, I do not believe that Bender is more than half dead.' And the account was settled on that basis."

Kind words are the brightest of home flowers. They make a paradise of the humblest home.

SIM SIMPKINS.

Sim Simpkins don't believe in things;
His fancy never spreads its wings.
He says that "two an' two is four
An' so shill be ferevermore."
When Morse got up the telegraph
Old Sim read of it with a laugh,
And then says he:
"Huh! Needn't tell me.
I don't believe what I can't see."

And when 'twas said electric lights
Should gleam and glimmer through the nights
Old Sim said: "Shucks! How'll you send fire
A-scootin' through a solid wire?"
He proved that it could not be done
By argument that weighed a ton
When "Humph!" said he.
"You needn't tell me.
I don't believe what I can't see."

When Bell announced the telephone
Old Sim read of it with a groan
And wiped his specs and slowly said:
"Th' feller's plainly off his head.
Th' idy! Talk an' I could hear
Ten miles away all plain an' clear!
Huh! No, sir-ree;
You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

The wireless telegraph made Sim
Deny its truth with language grim.
"It's nothin' but a pesky sham.
Now, who could breathe a tellygram?"
And when the Wrights got up and flew
Old Sim just took another chew,
And "Umph!" said he.
"You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

Don't think this shaft is aimed at Sim
And that there's only one of him.
Oh, gentle reader, you and I
Learn of some truths, but do not try
To make them true, but wisely frown,
And arguments we try to drown
With "No, sir-ree;
You needn't tell me!
I don't believe what I can't see."

—Chicago Post.

In Doubt.

"Charles, you would better walk down to papa's office and see him about our engagement."

"Clara, I can walk to your papa's office, but I may need some help to get back."

His Money.

A poor beggar received a monthly allowance of $5 from a rich man. The money used to be paid to him regularly by the bookkeeper. On one occasion when the poor man came around the bookkeeper handed him only $3. The poor man remained standing quietly until the bookkeeper asked whether there was anything else he wished.

"You must have made a mistake," he said. "I always get $5."

"Yes," replied the bookkeper; "that has now been changed."

"Changed? Why?"

"You see, the boss recently married off his eldest daughter, and he had a great deal of expense, as you may imagine—the dowry and so forth. You can easily understand"—

"Yes, yes!" grumbled the beggar. "Give your employer my best wishes and tell him that if he ever marries off another daughter he may do it with his own money, not with mine."—Maccabean.

His Error.

The young man who loved the daughter of the widow had called to get the mother's consent to lead the fair girl to the altar, but he blundered at the very outset.

"I have come, madam," he began in a voice that was agitated and beseeching, "to ask you for the blessed privilege of working for your dear daughter, taking care of her, giving her a home and"—

He got no further. The widow, with indescribable eagerness, threw herself into his arms. "I gladly give you the privilege," she cried. "You don't know how I have hoped and longed for a model man like you to be my darling daughter's father!"—Chicago News.

Why He Was Gallant.

A stout woman entered a crowded car and took hold of a strap directly in front of a man seated in the corner. As the car started she lunged against his newspaper and trod heavily on his toes. As soon as he could extricate himself he arose and offered her his seat.

"You are very kind, sir," she said, panting for breath.

"Not at all, madam," he replied. "It's not kindness; it's simply self defense."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Reason.

"Talking about women," observed the peach to the potato, "I can't bear these so called notable housewives with their energy in providing for their families."

"Why not? What effect do they produce on you?" asked the potato.

"They jar me," answered the peach.—Baltimore American.

A Proper Name.

"Yes. It's unusual, but appropriate. He's a bright spot in one existence that gets us up at all sorts of unearthly hours."—Washington Star.

His Treasurer Knew.

He who goes into politics must remember what he is recorded to have said, for it is the habit of the sharp nosed public to search out past utterances and hold the candidate responsible for them. John Burns, says Mr. Grubb in his life of that labor leader, once made the slip of remarking that no man was worth more than £500 a year. Accordingly, when he became a cabinet member with a salary of £2,000, he was obviously open to attack.

When he first met his constituents at Battersea after he was made president of the local government board a candid friend recalled the statement about a man's worth by calling out in the middle of his speech:

"Wot abaht that 'ere salary of £2,000?"

Mr. Burns was equal to the occasion.

"That is the recognized trade union rate for the job," was his apt reply. "If I took less I would be a blackleg."

"Wot yer goin' ter do with the £1,500 over?" pursued the inquisitive questioner.

"For details," answered Mr. Burns, "apply to my treasurer, Mrs. Burns."

One of Dr. Hale's Jokes.

When he was quite a young man the late Dr. Edward Everett Hale played a practical joke on some girls who were members of a party with whom he was summering on the Massachusetts coast.

All these girls were reading the same exciting novel, and one day at dinner it was a leading topic. Knowing that none of them had finished it, Hale, unknown to them, carried it away with him the next morning when he went to the city. On the train he wrote an absurd conclusion to the novel, laying the final scene at the summer resort.

Carrying this bogus conclusion to a publisher, a friend of his, he had it put in type, and then, carefully removing the bona fide conclusion, he pasted in his own. On his return he placed the book on the piazza and waited. The look which spread over a girl's face as she read that last chapter was, Dr. Hale declared, worth going far to see.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Flying Dutchman.

The Flying Dutchman was a ship which was sometimes visible from various points of land, but more particularly from the Cape of Good Hope in very stormy weather. The story runs that her captain once swore so fearful an oath that as a punishment for his blasphemy he was condemned to beat about the oceans until the day of judgment. The Flying Dutchman was never known to get into port and was generally seen sailing under full canvas before a strong wind. The myth is generally understood to have had its origin in the waterspout, which in the distance resembles a sailing vessel.

Very Fortunate.

One evening just after dinner a young husband of Indianapolis was, in accordance with his custom, giving his better half the gist of the news when suddenly he laid down the paper with this exclamation:

"By George! Here's an account telling how during the recent storm off the New England coast a ship loaded with passengers went ashore. Why, that vessel belonged to my uncle Tom in Portland!"

"How fortunate!" returned the young wife. "And just think how glad those passengers were to get to dry land!"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Poor Milkman.

A family living in an eastern city found a good deal of cream on a bottle of milk which had been standing overnight, and when the driver called in the morning the pleased servant held it up to the light and said, "Look here, I have never seen anything like this before on your milk."

The man looked at it for a moment, scratched his head and replied, "Well, I don't know what's the matter, but you can throw it out, and I'll give you a fresh bottle in its place."

Rebuked.

Higgins—How is it you are always idling about? I never see you when you have anything to do. Wiggins—The fact is it takes so much of my time looking after other folks' business I have none left for looking after my own. Don't you find something like the same trouble yourself?—Boston Transcript.

The Best Ever.

Gentleman—But I am afraid he wouldn't make a good watchdog. Man (with bull terrier)—Not a good watchdog! Why, Lor' bless your 'eart, it was only last week that this very animal held a burglar down by the throat and beat his brains out with his tail.—London Tatler.

What Struck Him.

"Did anything about the defendant strike you as being out of the ordinary?" asked the judge of the plaintiff in a case of assault and battery.

"Yes, your honor," was the reply.

"What was it?" queried the judge.

"His fist," answered the plaintiff.—Chicago News.

Rain and the Scot.

Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) says: "Never ask a Scotchman if it is raining. I have never heard a Scot admit that the rain is falling. What I have heard him say is that if it goes on as it is now it will turn out wet."

Mutual Surprise.

THE CHAUFFEUR

By BEATRICE TUCKER

"Come, Molly; the auto's waiting."

"All right, Imogen; I'll be with you as soon as I can tie on my veil. Have you your goggles?"

"Goggles? No! Do you suppose I would make myself hideous by wearing such things?"

Imogen went out to the piazza, where at the foot of the steps the automobile was waiting, and said to the chauffeur:

"You needn't go today, William. I'm going to drive myself."

"Yes, ma'am."

"Is everything all right?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Come, Molly; let's be off."

Molly came hurrying out, trying to adjust a veil and pull on a pair of gloves at the same time, a somewhat difficult feat to perform. The two got into the auto, and the machine chugged down the driveway to the gate. It was a mild spring morning, and the roads were fine. Imogen was quite an expert driver, and there was nothing to mar the pleasure of the trip till they had been out a couple of hours and were some thirty miles from home. Then one of the tires subsided and let the wheel to which it belonged down on to the ground.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Molly. "What shall we do?"

"There's a shed or stable or something over there; let's go over and see if we can get any help."

Having placed the auto on the side of the road, they both walked the hundred yards that separated them from the house and found a man in overalls tinkering with an automobile.

"Oh, how fortunate!" exclaimed Molly. "It's a garage."

"We've got a puncture or something," said Imogen to the man. "We've left our auto out there in the road. Would you mind coming out to see what's the matter?"

The man left his work, went with them to their auto, inspected the wheel and said:

"It's not a case of puncture. There's a rip in the tire."

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Imogen. "Can it be fixed?"

"Not here. I haven't the tools."

"What shall we do?"

"I'll put enough wind in it to get your machine into my garage, and there it must be left till you can get another tire. I see you have no 'extra.'"

The man managed after much difficulty to get the auto into the garage; then he said to them:

"I will take you to your home, and you can send some one out with an extra tire to take your auto back."

"Do you think that's the only thing to do?"

"Yes. Please wait till I go to the house and get off these overalls. I'll be back in a moment."

He went up a byroad and disappeared. The two girls occupied themselves looking at an imposing mansion on the top of a hill, at the foot of which they waited.

"That's a fine house," said Imogen. "I wouldn't mind being at the head of that house—that is, if I had a husband to be"—

"At the foot," supplied Molly.

In a few moments the man returned in chauffeur costume.

"I should think you'd be hungry," he said. "It's past lunchtime, and you'll not get home before 3 o'clock. Perhaps you'd better go up to that summer hotel," pointing to the house they had been admiring, "and get something to eat. It's not yet opened for the season, but I think you'll find something to stay your appetite."

"What a beautiful site for a hotel!" exclaimed Imogen. "We thought it a private house."

They climbed the hill, were admitted by a maid in white and black uniform and shown into a dining room having none of the appearance of one belonging to a hotel. There a delicious luncheon was served. On attempting to pay for it the maid said that there was no one in the house to receive cash and they would have to pay another time.

"We'll leave it with the man at the garage down there," said Imogen.

"Yes, m'm," the girl assented.

Returning to the garage, they found the man waiting for them with an auto ready. They entered it and started for home. On the way home the chauffeur became more communicative, and Imogen remarked sotto voce to Molly that he used very good language for an auto tinker. When they reached the house Imogen took out her pocketbook, asking him how much his charge would be, including the luncheon.

The chauffeur replied that there was no charge for the ride; on the contrary, he had been much honored. As for the luncheon, he owned the house in which they had lunched, and in this, too, they had honored him.

The girls looked at each other in consternation.

"But you said," Imogen protested, "that the house was a summer hotel."

"I lied there," said the man imperturbably.

The three sat regarding one another for a few moments, then burst out laughing.

"Pardon me," said the chauffeur, "I couldn't help it. You walked right into your own trap."

That was some years ago. Today Imogen is at the head of the house on the hill, and the gentleman chauffeur is at the foot of it.

Westfield shut out High Bridge in the opening game of the Central New Jersey League at Westfield, Saturday. Olde pitched fine ball. With three on bags in the seventh, a fast double play by Olde, Seery and Erxleben saved the day for Westfield. Greenfield's error gave the home team the first run in the sixth with a smashing single. TWO LEAGUE GAMES PREVENTED BY RAIN

Owing to the threatening weather two games in the newly organized Central New Jersey League, were not played on Saturday. Plainfield was scheduled to meet Somerville and oBund Brook to try conclusions with Scotch Plains, but both contests were called off at noon.

The directors of the league will meet tomorrow night at the Queen City Hotel to discuss the schedule and their action will be ratified at a meeting of the league at Bound Brook Wednesday night.

The only game played on Saturday was that between High Bridge and Westfield, in which the latter won by a score of 2 to 0. Plainfield had an especially strong team out for Saturday, including Jack Doscher, the former Brooklyn pitcher, and Stallings was engaged for an outfield position. This same team will play for Plainfield next Saturday. Some of the managers of the league wanted to eliminate major or minor league players, but others opposed this and there is now no limit, a club being permitted to engage any class player. Dalley, of this city; Steinmetz, of Roselle, and Dagnon, of High Bridge, have been engaged as umpires.

GOLF.

A. M. Morrell won the Holiday cup in the play-off at the Park Golf Club, Saturday. On Decoration Day four players tied for first place, and it was aranged to play-off on Saturday. Mr. Morrell's net score was 81. He also won the first three points for the President's cup with the same score, while Dr. H. K. Carroll and W. V. Byard divided the remaining points. For the scratch cup, Dr. Carroll, Mr. Byard, R. V. Carpenter and Mr. Morrel divided the points.

These scores were returned for the President's and golf club cups:

A. M. Morrell, 104, 23-81; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 94, 11-83; W. V. Byard, 98, 15-83; H. L. Moody, 117, 31-86; R. V. Carpenter, 104, 15-89; N. H. Morrison, 118, 27-91; Nelson A. Miller, 108, 15-93.

MISS KENNEY' CLASS ENJOYS A PICNIC PARTY.

Miss Margaret Kenney, of East Second street, who is a teacher in the Kearny High School, entertained the members of her class on the Kenney "picture lands" near Mt. St. Mary College grounds, Saturday. The guests numbered twenty-eight in all and came to Plainfield by train, during the morning. The site selected for the occasion had been specially aranged and the entire day was spent in a jolly way. Games and other diversions were enjoyed and dinner was prepared by the young folks themselves in regulation camp style. It was a great success in every way and it was with great regret that the guests noted the arrival of evening. The hostess was unanimously voted a royal entertainer and the best teacher ever.

Miss Kenney was assisted in the arrangements and entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. J. Kenney, Mrs. A. E. Kenney and two members of the Kearny High School faculty, Miss Secor and Miss Blake.

D. FOSTER UPDIKE'S AMUSEMENTS

THE HORSE SHOW. EXCUSE ME LADIES!

MY FIRST MONTH'S EXPERIENCE.

Did not have as much as four dollars to my name when I started, and the first day I went up into a lawyer's office to have my backers agreement signed, lawyer like, he had to give a voice about it, and scared my backer so much, that it is not signed yet. But it is as good as signed, for my actions have proven his advice to be worth about 30c, but please let me have the 30c. Now let me tell you why I love about one half the Plainfield lawyers. It is because I studied law under one of the best lawyers in Trenton and when I see you people paying for something that you don't get, jars me. Some of it is from pure dumbness,and some from pure devilishness. One or two of them got in my way unlawfully once, and they will go to jail just as soon as I get to them. This is what I have done: Disposed of 2 houses on East Seventh street, one on Madison avenue, one in Scotch Plains, one in Dunellen, two in Highland Park, 3½ acres of ground in New Brunswick. Have nine almost dealt for a Newark property (between Mr. Conover and myself) one farm and outfit at Middlebush, three farms at Pattenburg, one at Lebanon, and last but not least, a $27,000 farm near Clinton. Bought up-to-date Lakewood, sold two other parts there, and meet the Board of Trade at Easton next Tuesday to manage a tract of land, that I have not seen to lay out in building lots, and build up for the working class of people. They know in Easton as well as they do in Trenton.

Will it pay you to pay me $15 for advertising? I don't want to be bothered with any city property, if you don't, but just yet I can not expect farmers all over Jersey to do it.

By the way, I must not forget Mr. McDonough. In two weeks, without experience, he has written $28,000 of insurance, and he is not here to ask him how many houses he has rented. That ridiculous sign does it. D. Foster Updike.

Chalmers MOTOR CARS

are units of efficiency and beauty. No part is "skimped;" no line is out of harmony.

The Chalmers "30" is a perfectly balanced car. Its motor is powerful enough to take the car everywhere a car can go—it has as much speed as any man can use.

The car is heavy enough to ride well on any road, but not so heavy as to load the motor with useless weight.

The frame is heavy and strong; the wheels are large and of the best materials; the rear axle is of the full-floating type; the brakes are powerful and easily operated; highest grade ball bearings are used throughout motor and transmission; the motor valves are large, giving the maximum of power; the unit power plant insures perfect alignment of working parts; the best nickle steel is used throughout the chassis.

In fact, the things which are advertised as "features" of other cars are found as a matter of course in the Chalmers.

Chalmers cars are designed and built to give satisfaction in every condition of motoring. 14,000 Chalmers owners would tell you that they do give satisfaction, if you could ask them.

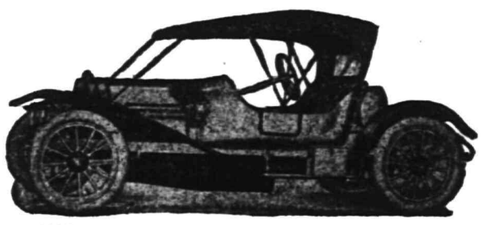
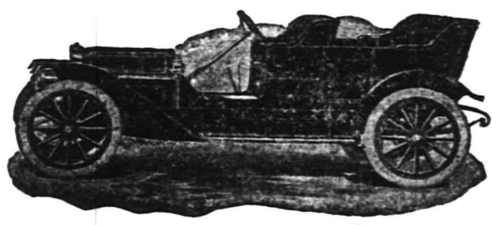
A Manufacturing Conundrum

Our customers often ask us how we are able to make a car as good as the DE TAMBLE at the prices we charge; using as we do the very best material, the most approved designs and employing only skilled workmen. It really is surprising even to us.



MODEL G—2-PASSENGER ROADSTER—$1,000



MODEL H—5-PASSENGER TOURING CAR—$1,150

Most cars of the prices we charge for the DE TAMBLE are lacking in some particular quality. They are either poorly made, lacking in style or are noisy on the road. But the DE TAMBLE is none of these.

By our system of manufacture, making all our parts, we are able to shave the profits usually paid to parts manufacturers, and at the same time have a better product and a more harmonious whole.

When we say the DE TAMBLE is the best car ever made at moderate price, we are stating the facts very mildly.

This low-priced quality combination should be especially attractive, and we would be pleased to open negotiations with those who are in need of a medium-priced car.

TO EXPEDITE BILLS

Common Council Moves to Hasten Payments by Limiting Mayor's Time.

MAKES CITY CLERK AUDITOR.

Councilman Mygatt Asserts That Ordinance Does Not Deprive City Executive of His Power—Holt Alone Objects.

The Common Council at the June meeting last night took steps to secure the payment of all bills in the future preventing Mayor Moy from withholding them by placing a ten-day limit on him for the approval or rejection of claims. Councilman Herbert Buxton explained that several claims had been held up by the Mayor for unexplained reasons and the finance committee in trying to overcome this difficulty had had an ordinance prepared.

According to the provisions of this ordinance, which was adopted on two readings and ordered advertised, City Clerk James T. MacMurray is made city auditor and he passes on all claims. It was afterward explained by Councilman F. E. Mygatt that the action was taken not to deprive the Mayor of his powers, but to make it possible to pay bills within a reasonable time and to allow the Council to check up such claims. Mr. Mygatt stated further that several bills had been in possession of the Mayor for sometime and under present conditions nothing could be done toward paying them.

In connection with the ordinance offered by him, Mr. Buxton presented an opinion from Judge Gilbert Collins on the subject. The opinion is as follows:

"In answer to your communication I have to say that it is my opinion that the provision of section 1, supplement, March 18, 1814 of the Charter of Plainfield, 'that no evidence of indebtedness against the city shall be valid unless signed by the Mayor, does not extend to checks, warrants or any paper writing the purpose of which is to authorize the present payment of funds;' but only to bonds, improvement certificates, promissory notes or other paper writings, evidencing, as the supplement says, an indebtedness, but not as paying an indebtedness.

"Not only was the ordinance of 1893, amended July 12, 1897, relating to the signature to checks or drafts within the power of the Common Council, but in my opinion it would be competent for the Council to make such provision by ordinance as might be thought desirable with reference to the signature to checks and warrants.

"Under chapter 126 of the laws of 1904, every claim against the city must be submitted to the Mayor for approval or veto; but, after approval or after re-passage over the Mayor's veto, there is no provision of law of which I am aware that renders it necessary that the Mayor should sign a check or warrant in payment of the claim. That duty may be delegated to any official selected by the Common Council by ordinance. The act cited especially provided by the 'Common Council or other body having charge of the finances of any city may by ordinance prescribe the manner of issuing and designate the officers who shall sign, contersign and audit all such warrants.'"

Following the reading of the opinion, the ordinance prepared by Judge Collins was introduced, as he explained at the request of Mr. Buxton. The ordinance, a lengthy one, covers the manner and method of paying all bills, the only important change being that City Clerk MacMurray is made city auditor.

Mr. Holt explained that it would be impossible for the members to thoroughly understand such an extensive ordinance on one or two readings, and he moved that the matter be laid on the table until the members can acquaint themselves with its provisions. He also suggested that copies be sent to each member.

Mr. Buxton stated that the ordinance simply substituted an officer of the city as auditor instead of the Mayor and should be passed. Mr. Mygatt said that in part he agreed with Mr. Holt, but it was important that the ordinance be passed as soon as possible so that the question of the payment of bills could be settled. He emphasized the point that the ordinance does not take away all the Mayor's powers, but simply puts a time-limit on withholding claims. The measure was then adopted on two readings, Mr. Holt alone voting in the negative.

Alonzo Brokaw Improving.

Alonzo Brokaw, of the borough, who was injured last week in an automobile accident while returning from Newark, is improving slowly. In addition to having several fractured ribs he suffered an injury to his shoulder which will detain him at home possibly two or three weeks.

TO SEND TO GERMANY ONE INDIGENT AND ILL

Councilman F. L. Montgomery, chairman of the alms committee, called the attention of the members of the Common Council, at the June meeting last night to the fact that the city has an indigent man at the alms house suffering from tuberculosis, and the cost of maintenance is $5 a week. He said that for $35 the man could be sent to his native home in Germany, where his parents reside and they would take care of him.

Mr. Montgomery said that neither the overseer of the poor nor the alms committee cared to incur the expense and have it thrown back on them through the refusal of Mayor Moy to approve the bill. A motion was finally made and adopted on the suggestion of Councilman Mygatt, that the alms committee be authorized to spend $50 or so much of that amount as was found to be necessary to send the indigent patient to his home in Germany.

NO CONTRACTS MADE FOR CITY'S SUPPLIES

Joseph Harrigan and the Commercial Mills and Elevator Company presented bids at the June meeting of the Common Council last night for furnishing the city with hay, straw and oats for the city departments for the coming year, but owing to the fact that the time limit for accepting the bids was so short both bids were returned. Mr. Harrigan gave the Council five days in which to accept or reject the bid, while the Commercial Mills and Elevator company put the time-limit at 12 o'clock noon today.

The Commercial Mills and Elevator Company's bid was $30 a ton for hay, $1.16 a bag for oats and $17 a ton for straw. Mr. Harrigan's bid was $28 a ton for hay, $1.25 a bag for oats and $18 a ton for straw.

Both bidders explained today that owing to the uncertain condition of the market neither one could afford to extend the time for accepting or rejecting the bids. The price of oats advanced one cent yesterday and other advances are anticipated especially in hay, the market being very uncertain. One person commenting on the action of the Council said today that the delay of the members in buying oats, hay and straw is an expensive one for the city, for when they get ready to buy, the price will have advanced so much that the taxpayers will have to pay a great deal more than formerly.

MISS KARR'S PUPILS HEARD AT A RECITAL

The pupils of Miss Grace Powell Karr gave their recital of the season Saturday afternoon at the residence of Miss Karr. No pains were spared to make this recital excel alll former ones and the children entered into the spirit of the occasion with more than their usual enthusiasm.

Wendell, and closed with a piano quartet, "Charge of the Uhlans," Carl Bohm, arranged for the occasion by Miss Karr. This was played by the Misses Mildred M. Clark, Sarah L. ENGAGE ARCHITECT Education Board Retains J. G. Rogers For High School Addition Plans.

PRESENT REPORTS FOR MAY.

Building Committee Authorized to Make Repairs to Schools—Medical Inspections for Month—Custodian's Statement.

Recommenations were made by the building committee of the Plainfield Board of Education last night that James Gamble Rogers, of New York, be retained as architect for the $35,000 addition to be made to the high school building. George W. Knight, of Newark, was recommended as the heating and ventilating engineer.

It was decided to have the building committee make such repairs as it considered necessary to the school buildings during the summer vacation season and also any needed improvements at the Jefferson school grounds. Superintendent Maxson was authorized to purchase desks for three school rooms.

Dr. Maxson read a letter from Father Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, regarding the authority of the Board to extend medical inspection to the parochial schools, and he was instructed to notify the priest that by advice of State Superintendent Baxter it could not be done.

A summer class for backward children was authorized under the direction of Dr. Maxson. Authority was given the finance committee to pay a note in bank amounting to $5,000 with interest. Bills amounting to $2,000 were ordered paid and notice was given that the collection of taxes for May amounted to $687.69. The custodian's report showed disbursements of $12,413.54, and receipts $27,256.03, the balance on May 31 being $27,185.22. As tuition money received by the Board from the schools' superintendent for the second and third quarters $2,012 was reported.

The report of the medical inspectors showed that 116 pupils were examined during May at the schools and also a large number at the physicians' offices of pupils convalescent or suspected of having contagious diseases.

NON-SUIT GRANTED IN PIANO FIRM'S SUIT

In the Somerville District Court yesterday Judge Isaac P. Runyon granted a non-suit in a demand for damages brought by the Hallett & Davis Piano Co., against Peter Johnson, of this city. The amount involved was $85 and devolved about the purchase of a piano by Johnson last December at a cost of $375. He gave one of the company's certificates valued at $85 and $24 in cash, the rest to be paid in installments. In January he found the instrument to be defective and another was given him in its place. This also proved unsatisfactory and Johnson sent it back, declaring the deal to be at an end.

The company brought suit for $85 damages, but admitted on the stand that the instrument had been re-listed at $290. As Johnson had paid them $109, Walter L. Hetfield, counsel for the defendant maintained the firm had suffered no damage and asked for the non-suit. The court took the same view and granted the request.

Y.W.C.A. OFFICERS

Miss Faith Parmalee Secretary and Miss Margaret Bradshaw Physical Director.

TO TAKE CHARGE JULY FIRST.

Annual Meeting of Association Yesterday Presided Over by Mrs. Mead—To Pay Off Mortgage on the Building.

Announcement was made at the meeting of the executive board of the Young Women's Christian Association yesterday that the association has engaged Miss Faith Parmalee as general secretary and Miss Margaret Bradshaw as physical director, succeeding Miss Amy Tapping and Miss Herbert, respecitvely. Both Miss Parmalee and Miss Bradshaw come from Oberlin, Ohio, and the former is a graduate of Oberlin College. Miss Bradshaw has been connected with the physical department of Oberlin College. Both are friends of Miss Tapping and Miss Mosher, the former physical director. Miss Parmalee was industrial secretary of the Y. W. C. A., at Akron, Ohio. They will take charge on July 1.

Mrs. Frederic G. Mead, president of the local association, presided at the meeting yesterday, with eighteen members present. Mrs. Elliott F. Barrows, treasurer, reported a balance on April 3, of $524.17, and the receipts for the past month were $285.12, with expenditures of $389.08, leaving a balance of $420.21.

Miss Amy Tapping, general secretary, reported that the library has received 200 books during the month. The current expenses of the office were $3 for stamps and fifty cents for carriage hire in connection with the recent annual exhibit held on April 29. During the month 136 books were taken out of the library, 502 callers received and there were fifteen applications for employment. The chairman of the educational committee, Mrs. W. D. Murray added to the report of the exhibit and gave especial credit to the different teachers, whose interest made the affair such a success. It was announced that Miss Capron, millinery teacher, and Miss Farrel, teacher of domestic science, will return next year.

Miss Goddard, chairman of the membership committee, reported thirteen renewals and fourteen new members. Miss Ashwell gave an account of the Bible class supper, which was attended by seventy-two girls. Miss Harland, from the Northfield Conference, made the address. During the winter 470 suppers were served. The financial end of the work was most satisfactory, $6.75 being returned to the treasury from the $10 set apart for the supper committee at the beginning of the year.

Upon the suggestion of Mrs. Mead the board adopted the official seal for the association as the official mark. Mrs. P. H. Stewart reported for the junior work. It was also announced that Mrs. H. L. DeForest had resigned as chairman of the glee club committee. Mrs Stewart also reported concerning the Easter party, the lecture on the Passion Play given by Mr. Stewart and the success of two plays. Fifty-seven names have been added to the junior roll.

Mrs. Lewis Williams told of the luncheon given by Mrs. P. H. Stewart and the tea at the association rooms for the foreign guests on their way to the Indianapolis convention. An account of the Biennial conference was given by the president, while Miss Margaret McCutchen, chairman of the physical committee, reported that a party was given for all the gymnasium classes, a tract meet is being arranged and a play is to be given by the physical classes. The diplomas will be given to the "First Aid" students at that time. It was announced that Mrs. O. L. Jenkins will be glad to accept the payment of the mortgage at the convenience of the association.

It was voted unanimously that the association pay off the mortgage on the property with the $10,000 received from the estate of Mrs. M. E. Edgerton and the $1,000 raised by the members.

Argument Postponed.

Upon the request of Judge Gilbert Collins, who represents the city, the certiorari proceedings in the matter of the proposed opening of Kensington avenue, was put off for the term at the session of the Supreme Court in Trenton, this morning. Judge Collins' request for time to examine the records was granted. H. H. Williams and W. S. Angleman, representing the protesting property-owners, were ready to go on with the case, but they agreed to have the matter go over for this term.

HOTEL BURGLARY

Entrance Gained Through Window and Smashed Cash Register Yields $80.

POLICE HAVE NO CLUE AS YET.

Henry Windham, the Proprietor, Sleeps on Top Floor and Intruder was Undistrubed—Loss About $100.

Some unknown person or persons forced an entrance to the bar room of the Hotel Waldorf early this morning, and the visitation cost Proprietor Henry Windham something over $100. The amount is divided between $80 in cash and the damage to a fine $250 register which had to be smashed open to get the money. It was thought at first that the machine was ruined, but an expert declared after a close inspection that twenty-five or thirty dollars would fix it up.

The intruders got in by removing a pane of glass from a rear window. It was accomplished some time after midnight as it was about that time before the employes left the place. There were three registers back of the bar, but only one of them contained any money. This was the one nearest the front entrance and the burglars evidently knew it for the others were not tampered with. All the lights in the place were extinguished and the doors leading to it were bolted from the inside to guard against any interference. The register was taken to the back yard and then pounded with a hammer and chisel until it gave up its contents.

Mr. Windham sleeps in a rear room on the third floor of the hotel and knew nothing of the burglary until he went to open up at 5:30 this morning. He found himself barred out by the bolted doors and realized immediately that something was wrong. He got in by unlocking the front door and had no sooner looked around than he noted the absence of the register. It was found in the yard later on.

The police were notified and though a close investigation was made no clue has been obtained. They are satisfied, however, that the job was the work of someone who had familiarized himself with the surroundings.

OPPOSE HASTY ACTION FOR COMMISSION GOV'T

Declaring by resolution that while it favors the proposed commission form of government for Plainfield, the Chamber of Commerce directors at a meeting last night went on record deploring the circulating of the necessary petitions for an election at this time, deeming it "unwise, inexpedient and untimely" until a thorough investigation is made by the chamber and a campaign of education on the subject is had.

The semi-annual report of the secretary, John Ulrich, showed that the membership had increased 100 per cent and would be further augmented if the citizens thoroughly understood the body's objects. The purposes he stated are to promote the general welfare, to advance the commercial, industrial and municipal interests of the community and to bring the residents into closer intercourse. He reviewed the chamber's efforts for consolidation of city and borough, the campaign for which was postponed by request of the North Plainfield Council; to the speeches made before the chamber and to its deliberations concerning commission government. The chamber's library, he stated, now contains 1 000 volumes. The finances he added are in excellent shape.

MRS AGNES E. TAYLOR AGED 79 YEARS DEAD

Mrs. Agnes E. Taylor, aged seventy-nine, wife of the late Charles K. Taylor, died yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of Miss Mary J. Thickstun, on Central avenue, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Taylor was born in New York and formerly lived in this city. She had been living in Brooklyn and came to Plainfield in January last, soon after which she was taken ill.

Mrs. Taylor was a member of the First Baptist church, and an attendant at the services there for many years. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. William D. Thickstun, of this city and Mrs. David Dunn, of Brook'yn; also two sons, Joseph R. Taylor, of New York and W. W. Taylor, of Brooklyn. Private funeral services were held this afternoon at the late home, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss in charge, and the burial will be at Tarrytown, N. Y., tomorrow.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTION FOR BACKWARD PUPILS

The Board of Education at its meeting last night, authorized Superintendent Maxson to open a summer class for children in the grammar class and the high school that need special work. It often happens, Dr. Maxson says, that a pupil fails to make good in some one subject and starts out at the beginning of the year handicapped in that subject, if work is not done in the summer. He feels that many such children, if given an opportunity to do special work under a teacher for a portion of the summer, would get onto their feet and be able to do the work of the coming year satisfactorily, and that in many cases it would save a year in school for such children.

As an experiment such a class will be opened the summer. It will be begun probably on July 10 and be run for about six weeks, having morning sessions of about three hours. Any pupil in the grammar grades or lower classes of the high school who has failed in any subject may attend and receive special instruction in that subject, taking an examination at the end of the course or whenever he has completed the work and if he passes such examination, his record will be cleared for immediate advancement when the schools open in the fall. No pupil will be compelled to attend, but it will be open for those that desire to use this opportunity for working off deficiences.

ALFRED JACKSON WON PRIZE FOR BEST 'ADV.'

The editors of The Courier-News and The Daily Press who were selected as judges in the advertising contest conducted by the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company, of Madison avenue, have awarded the first prize, $25 in cash to Alfred Jackson, of 327 East Fifth street, a pupil at the Plainfield High School. His advertisement was seventh in the list, while Donna Campbell, of 216 East Sixth street, who was sixteenth in order, was given honorable mention.

In all several hundred copies of advertisements were submitted in the contest and the winning one will be found in another part of The Daily Press today.

COUNCIL ADOPTS 'M.O' WATER PLAN

Report Recommending Condemnation of Private Plant Unanimously Approved.

The Common Council, at its June meeting last night adopted the majority report of the special water commission and upon its recommendations contained in a supplemental report presented last night decided to undertake condemnation proceedings in the matter of acquiring a municipal water supply, as predicted in The Daily Press of yesterday. The report advises that the city acquire and establish its own plant and following the adopion of the report, a resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt, which was adopted, continued the commission and authorized it to go ahead at once and prepare all necessary papers and resolutions to be presented to the Council for action, with a view to taking up condemnation proceedings. Judge Gilbert Collins has been retained to represent the city's interest in the matter.

The report presented by the commission through Mr. Mygatt follows:

"To the Common Council:

"Your special water committee supplementing its report of February 6, 1911, further reports as follows:

"Since the making of its report on the date last mentioned, your committee has made a further endeavor to negotiate with the water company an agreement giving the city the ultimate control of its natural source of water supply.

"Various conferences have been had with Mr. Bergen, the president of the water company, and much correspondence has passed between him and the chairman of your committee. Mr. Bergen's letters and copies of the letters sent to him during that period, are attached hereto and made a part hereof.

"During the course of the negotiations a short term contract, with the right to the city to terminate it upon a years notice, was suggested and after consideration an offer to make such a contract was made by the company. Before action could be taken upon it, however, the offer was withdrawn.

"Throughout its negotiations your committee has taken the position that the supply of water obtainable from the Netherwood source, would not be sufficient to enable the company to supply all of its customers therefrom for any considerable length of time, and that, therefore, the company would, sooner or later, be obliged to obtain another and larger source of supply. Upon the withdrawal of the offer of a short term contract your committee suggested that a contract be made for a period of years sufficient to give the company ample opportunity to acquire another source from which to supply its other suctomers—with an option to Plainfield to purchase the works in Plainfield at the end of such period, at a price to be fixed by arbitration.

"Mr. Bergen in his letter to the chairman of your committee under date of May 29,1911, says:

"'The population of Union county along the Central Railroad has increased rapidly in recent years and every available source of water fit for domestic use has been developed and nearly all are now taxed to the extent of their capacity. The same thing is true in Middlesex county.

"'The supply now available will probably last five years and may last ten years, but it is doubtful. During that time a plan must be formulated and carried out, to obtain a supply for the future from some distant source.'

"This statement is important as an explanation of the attitude of the company. Clearly if the Netherwood source is to be looked to for a district supply it is insufficient, but for Plainfield's needs your committee believes that it is ample. The statement, however, serves to emphasize the fact that within the course of a comparatively few years Plainfield must control its natural source of supply, or by leaving the control with others be content to allow its natural sources to become part of a vast system serving the great territory of the metropolitan district.

"Your committee is of the opinion that, inasmuch as the company must, within a short time, secure another source for the purpose of supplying all or a part of its customers, Plainfield should be given a right to take over the Netherwood supply when the time arrives at which that supply will be sufficient only for the needs of Plainfield. They recognize the fact that the company is under an obligation to supply places other than Plainfield, and with that obli-

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., June 5, 1911.

AN ORDINANCE

Relating to the City Treasurer and Regulating the Receipt and Disbursement of City Moneys.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The City Treasurer shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, execute a bond in the sum of Twenty-five Thousand Dollars to the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, conditioned for the true and faithful performance of all the duties of his office, with such freehold security as the Common Council shall approve and direct, which bond shall be submitted to the Common Council for its approval, and, when so approved, shall be deposited with the City Clerk for safe keping.

Sec. 2. The City Treasurer shall receive all moneys belonging to or in any way appearing to the City, unless otherwise provided by law, and shall forthwith deposit the same in such bank or banks as the Common Council shall from time to time designate as the depositories of city moneys, in the name of "The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield."

Sec. 3. City moneys, except where otherwise provided by law, shall be disbursed only upon warrants drawn on the City Treasurer as follows:

(1) Upon the "Library Fund" such warrants shall be signed by the President and countersigned by the Treasurer of the Board of Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room.

(2) Upon the appropriation for the Board of Health, such warrants shall be signed by the President and countersigned by the Secretary of said Board.

(3) In all other cases, such warrants shall be signed by the President of the Common Council and countersigned by the City Clerk, as Auditor.

Provision may be made by resolution for substitutionary signature and counter signature in case of absence of any or either of the officers named.

In all cases where claims must be submitted to the Mayor for approval or disapproval, the signatures and countersignatures, original or substitutionary, herein provided for, shall afford plenary evidence that the claim embraced in the warrant has either been approved by the Mayor, or, if disapproved by him, has been ordered to be nevertheless paid, if a claim has been marked "disapproved" by the Mayor and the claim has been ordered to be nevertheless paid, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, that fact, and the date of such action, shall be noted on the claim.

Every warrant drawn on the "Library Fund" shall be accepted in writing by the City Treasurer, if there be sufficient to the credit of that fund in the designated depository in which by law it must be separately kept, and such warrant shall thereupon be honored as a draft or check on that fund.

Every warrant drawn on the appropriation for the Board of Health shall be accepted in writing by the City Treasurer, if there be sufficient funds to the credit of that appropriation, and the City Treasurer shall, in writing, on said warrant, direct payment thereof by a bank, being one of the designated depositories of city moneys; and such warrant shall thereupon be honored as a draft or check on that bank.

Upon every other warrant, if for a claim properly audited, the City Treasurer, if there be sufficient funds wherewith to pay the same, shall, in writing, on said warrant, direct payment thereof by a bank, being one of the designated depositories of city moneys; and such warrant shall thereupon be honored as a draft or check on that bank.

In each case, such direction of payment shall be considered an acceptance of such warrant as a draft on the City Treasurer.

Sec. 4. The City Treasurer shall keep in a suitable book or books in such manner as directed by the Common Council, or its appropriate committee, the separate accounts of the several funds for which moneys shall be received or paid out by him, each under its proper head and title, so that the account of each of these funds shall show at all times the exact amount to the credit or debit of such fund. The Treasurer shall also keep a detailed record of all assessments made or authorized to be made by the Common Council, setting forth the date and purpose of each assessment, the name of persons assessed, the amount assessed against each, and the date of the payment of the same.

Sec. 5. Whenever the Common Council shall authorize money to be borrowed on the credit and in the name of the City in anticipation of the collection of taxes, the City Treasurer shall prepare and sign a note for the amount so authorized to be borrowed, payable at such time as shall be fixed by the Common Council, which note shall likewise be signed by the Mayor, and unless otherwise directed by the Common Council the City Treasurer shall cause such note to be discounted at one of the designated depositories of city moneys; the net proceeds thereof shall be credited to the account of the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield in such bank, and credited by the City Treasurer to the fund for which the money was borrowed. At the maturity of the note so discounted, the amount thereof shall be chargeable against said account.

Sec. 6. The City Treasurer shall render to the Common Council at each of its regular meetings a statement of all moneys received and disbursed by him from the date of his last preceding statement; and at the last meeting in each year he shall render a statement of all moneys received and disbursed by him during the current year, and he shall submit for inspection his books to the Mayor or Common Council or its appropriate committee, or any city officer the Common Council shall designate, whenever requested to do so.

Sec. 7. No claim or demand of any kind against the City, except as by law or this ordinance otherwise provided, shall be paid or directed to be paid by the City Treasurer, unless first regularly allowed and ordered paid by the Common Council, and a statement in writing to that effect duly signed by the City Clerk be filed with the City Treasurer. Upon receiving from the City Clerk said written statement of claims or demands allowed and ordered paid by the Common Council, the City Treasurer shall forthwith prepare warrants for the payment thereof, and have them properly signed as herein provided, and direct payment thereof by a designated depository of city moneys, as herein provided.

Sec. 8. Upon the warrants provided for in the last section being returned the City Treasurer after payment, the same shall be attached to the original claim. All paid warrants shall be filed by the City Treasurer, regularly numbered, and a detailed record of each shall be kept by him. BASEBALL.

Fines and suspensions were plastered on New York and Chicago players freely yesterday by President Lynch, of the National League. The series between the Giants and Cubs has had nearly as much kicking as ball playing, and between two teams each of which has a comparatively good chance for the pennant, if it doesn't kick all its chances away. President Lynch has been pretty tolerant with this species of rowdyism, but it would not be surprising if he began soon to inflict indefinite suspension for repetitions of offenses.

Larry Doyle, captain of the Giants, has been suspended three days for kicking last Friday in Chicago. Another who gets the same punishment is Miner Brown, of the Cubs. He hardly had returned from one three-day sentence before another is meted out of him. Inasmuch as a pitcher doesn't go in oftener than once in three days, as a rule, the Cubs do not feel Brown's absence as much as they would that of a player who is in every day. Brown and Umpire Eason have not been hitting it off very well lately, Brown's second suspension, as well as the first, being due to spats with Eason.

Chief Meyers and Beals Becker, of the Giants, have been fined $25 each for slowness in getting off the field when ordered last Saturday. Heinie Zimmerman, of the Cubs, also took his time when ordered off the pasture and has come in for an assessment of $25.

The Cubs, it will be noticed, have worked their way up in the National League list without the service of Johnny Evers. That doesn't mean that Evers isn't valuable, but does mean that he isn't invaluable. There was a wide impression that the Cubs would be likely to take a back seat without him, and maybe they will yet, but they have been admirably fortified. Jim Doyle has proved to be a find for them, covering third base right up to the handle and allowing the shift of Zimmerman to second base. The infield still remains as strong as the best and as strong as any infield in the country except that of the Athletics. Even with Chance out, Hoffman makes a proficient substitute at first base, and with a capable youngster in Kaiser to take Hofman's place in centre field. The list of men laid off this season through injuries or illness is so long that he is the wise manager these days who provides against such emergencies by having capable substitutes on hand.

In two consecutive games the Cincinnatis made a total of forty-one runs and thirty-six hits, which doesn't go any further toward winning a pennant than winning two 1 to 0 games but which, in all probability, will be something to look backward as something done by no other club.

Three triple plays have been made by the big league teams this season, all by American Leaguers. Two of the triple actions plays were propogated by the Detroits and one by the Highlanders.

COBURN PLAYERS AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Owing to the inclement weather is was impossible for the Coburn Players to present Shakespeare's comedy, "Much Ado About Nothing," out-of-doors at the Plainfield Country Club last night and the scene was transferred to the clubhouse where nearly three hundred members of he club and their friends enjoyed a superb performance.

With the Coburn Players "the play is the thing" in reality, and they fully sustained their reputation last night. The delightful comedy was given in a finished manner, and not the least of the delightful features was the incidental songs. Mr. Coburn has succeeded after a great deal of research in obtaining music for these that seem to be authentic and truly Elizabethan. The entire cast was uniformly par excellent and received frequent applause throughout the performance.

Prior to the play dinner was served at the clubhouse under the direction of Superintendent John Hilton, covers being laid for about one hundred.

UNION'S GRAND JURY SCORES JERSEY CENTRAL.

In making its final report to Judge Atwater in the Court of Oyer and Terminer at Elizabeth yesterday morning, the May Grand Jury, which has been in session since May 2, handed to the Court a lengthy presentment in which the Central Railroad of New Jersey was severely reprimanded for conditions that exist along the Long Branch Division, where the tracks cross the Elizabeth city streets at grade, thus menacing the lives of many persons. The Grand Jury ordered the railroad company to eliminate the dangers immediately.

The Grand Jury took up the matter of grade crossings at the suggestion of Supreme Court Justice Bergen at the opening of the May term of court. At that time Judge Bergen called the attention of the jurymen to the accident at the Elizabeth avenue station of the Long Branch Division on Easter Sunday night, April 16, when two women and one man lost their lives.

CASHIER MAY KNOW ABOUT EMPTY SAFE

The discovery of the Manganese Safe Works last week that a safe supposed to contain from twenty-five to forty thousand dollars held only ten cents, as told exclusively in yesterday's Daily Press, has led to considerable correspondence between this city and Tuska, Okla., where the safe came from. In one letter received by the Manganese concern it was stated that the cashier of the bank had disappeared after the safe had been forwarded by express to Plainfield and in the event of his being located he could probably tell something about the missing money.

In another letter forwarded to a local bank which was asked to receive and care for the thousands when the safe was opened it was declared the cashier had died after the time lock on the safe had been permanently set. At any rate the Tuska bank is out a large sum and has been put to considerable expense beside.

It took five days of steady grinding to cut through the one inch of steel in the safe and even at the last fraction sledge hammers and wedges had to be used.

DAVIS MORTGAGE COVERS $19,000 PLACED ON FILE.

Jersey City, June 6—A blanket mortgage on the property owned by the estate of the late Robert Davis was filed yesterday in the office of County Register of Deeds John J. McMahon by Henry Byrne, a well-known contractor. The mortgage, it is understood, is to cover a loan of $19,000 made to the estate by Mr. Byrne.

This $19,000 was required to make up the total of $79,000 alleged to have been due County Collector Stephen M. Egan by the late Democratic leader. The other $60,000 had been raised by the estate on two notes for $30,00 each.

With the payment of this $19,000 the indebtedness of Mr. Davis to County Collector Egan was cancelled. There is now no money due the county from that source.

Robert Davis, Jr., one of the executors of the estate of the late Robert Davis, said yesterday that there never was a time that the heirs were not ready to make good all loans made to their father by Mr. Egan. "Al we wanted," he said, "was some tangible proof that the indebtedness actually existed. When this proof was offered we turned over the money to Mr. Egan, mortgaging the estate in order to do so. No just claim against the estate will remain unpaid even if it takes my last dollar to make it good."

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Swedish Pilgrim church, West Sixth and New streets, with preaching by Rev. N. H. Nyrap, of Brooklyn.

OBJECT TO DAMAGES.

Trenton Man Believes 50 Cents Insufficient.

Trenton, June 6.—Because the verdict was illogical and inadequate John H. Backus, counsel for Chas. J. Fury, yesterday asked Judge Lloyd in Mercer Supreme Court that the verdict of 50 cents damages obtained by Mr. Fury last week from Alfred W. Packer, sergeant-at-arms of the City District Court, be set aside and a new trial granted. Judge Lloyd allowed the rule to show cause.

Mr. Fury sued Packer for $5,000 damages for an assault committed on the hotel owner by the officer. The jury found Packer guilty but only awarded 50 cents damages.

LITERARY.

A writer close to the household of King George V, has contributed an article to Munsey's Magazine for June, on "The Cost of the Coronation." Some of the items in this authoritative description will amuse Americans, and the grand total of more than a million dollars that will be spent in celebrating the accession of a new monarch will be in the nature of a revelation in pomp and grandeur.

The Standard Oil Company has not yet annuonced its exact plan for reorganization. From the standpoint of its practical business—that is to say—the carrying on of its refineries, its pipe lines, and its various factories for the making of commercial by-products, together with its admirable systems for the distribution of its oil and other products—the public is not likely to see any difference at all.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for June.

Most readers of the present generation recall Edna Dean Proctor as one of the inspirations of their youth without knowing that this fine spirited writer, who delighted our parents as well, is still in vigorous health and still occosionally writing delightful verses. Two years ago she visited Seattle, at the time of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. While on Puget Sound she became co much impressed with the stately grandeur of Mount Rainier, the noblest if not quite the tallest of American mountains, that he promised her Western friends to send them a poew on "Mount Tacoma," as she prefers to call the great peak, using its ancient Indian name. This promise is now fulfilled in some very musical verses written for the new edition of "The Mountain that Was 'God,'" which its author-publisher, John H. Williams of Tacoma, has just brought out, with G. P. Putnam's Sons as his New York agents. Miss Proctor's fine poem has for its title "The Mountoin Speaks," and is an expression, in the voice of the peak itself, of much that Mr. Williams has woven into his interesting first chapter on the Indian nature worship of this extinct fire-mountain which now presents the most important glaciers to be found south of Alaska.

The June "Century" is an Anglo American number, having four pages in color, and with several articles of most timely interest on both sides the Atlantic by prominent English and American writers. James Davenport Whelpley, the authority who has written several "Trade of the World" papers for "The Century," presents vital facts and figures regarding "The Commercial Strength of Great Britain;" and Rear-Admiral A. T. Mahan, author of "The Influence of Sea Power in the Pacific." James Cardinal Gibbons's "An Anglo-American Pact of Peace" is a wise and kindly message of good will to the English people.

What one man, with the love of God and his fellow man in his heart, was able to do in the Arctic is the motif of a story of deep and moving appeal, entitled, "Whitelaw of the Arctic" which Alvah Milton Kerr publishes in The Red Book Magazine for June.

COUNCILMEN BUSY

Big Batch of Routine Matters Occupy Their Time at Monthly Session.

RESOLUTIONS AND PETITIONS.

Reports and Communications Submitted—Judge Collins to Represent City in the Certiorari Proceedings.

Howard H. Williams, who with Winfield S. Angleman, represents the protesting property-owners of Kensington avenue in their efforts to prevent the proposed extension, notified the Common Council, at the June meeting last night, of the filing of the city returns in the Supreme Court and that argument would be held as soon as possible. Notice of this was forwarded to Judge Gilbert Collins, who will represent the city in the certiorari matter.

The Board of School Estimate notified the Council of its recent action when resolutions were adopted authorizing the issuance of $35,000 worth of bonds for the proposed addition on the high school building; also that $74,000 is the amount decided upon as thought to be necessary for the coming year for the maintenance of schools, exclusive of the county and State apportionment. These matters were referred to the finance committee.

Mayor G. W. V. Moy withdrew the appointment of Walter L. Hetfield as corporation counsel, at the request of Mr. Hetfield, the reason for which being stated in The Daily Press of Saturday. There was no comment and the communication was filed.

Residents of Park avenue in the vicinity of Second street, petitioned the Council to have an arc light erected at Park avenue and Second street, the petitioners citing the fact that it is a dark corner at night and the travel being heavy there, there is a necessity for more light. The matter was referred.

Residents of Leland avenue petitioned for permission to make certain sewer connections and the same was granted. W. A. Coddington, filed the papers in the transfer of the Huntington avenue property, to be used for sewer purposes, and the same were filed on motion of Mr. Buxton.

A communication was received from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. endorsing Dr. J. F. Berg, a member of the Post, for the position of overseer of the poor. Mayor Moy appointed Dr. Berg for the position, but the Council has taken no action.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of twenty-three sewer permits during May and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that he had granted eighteen building permits during the same period. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts for the past month to be $154.65, disbursements, $46.65, with a balance of $108.

Resolutions offered by Mr. Buxton, and adopted, authorized the borrowing of $3,000 on account of fire fund and $3,000 for sewer extension work. On motion of Mr. Gloak the resolution adopted at a previous meeting calling for bids for macadamizing work was rescinded and another resolution was adopted fixing Monday night, June 26, as the time for receiving bids. The Council voted to adjourn to June 26, at which time there will be further action on the water matter.

A resolution offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted, provided for issuing the usual notice to property-owners who have failed to lay sidewalks and if they do not comply after receiving the notice, the city will do the work and charge it up to the property.

Resolutions offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, authorized the fire and building committee to sell all horses in the fire department not required for service; also to expend $40 for the repair of batteries on Chief Doane's automobile.

Mr. Montgomery secured the adoption of a resolution authorizing the alms committee to expend $70 for the purchase of a cow for use at the alms house. Mr. Holt returned correspondence between Mayor Moy and the executive of the estate of Mrs. M. E. Edgerton relative to a legacy left to the police department for the pension fund, and the same was filed. In the matter of the petition of Samuel J. Robinson and others asking that a building line be established on West Third street, Mr. Holt reported progress. Mr. Holt's motion that the opinions of Judge Gilbert Collins be filed with the city clerk, prevailed.

Mr. Buxton presented a form of contract between A. B. Laing and the city for the care of the Gamewell fire alarm system but as Councilman C. C. Randolph had not had time to examine the contract it was held over for the present.

On motion of Mr. Holt, the ordinance providing for the re-districting of the city's election districts was passed on third reading, and amendments to the building code, providing for the use of hollow tile, were introduced and passed on two readings and ordered advertised. They were introduced by Mr. Holt.

SEVERAL INJURED IN AUTO SMASHUP.

New Brunswick, June 6.—Two touring cars collided on the Old Bridge road, near Browntown, Sunday night and the occupants of both cars were thrown out. Nearly all were injured, but none seriously. In one car was Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Schmalholz and Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Thomas. In the other car was Howard Sillsocks, secretary and treasurer of the Loyal T. Ives Needle Company, with a party of men friends. His colored chauffeur, Edward Williams, was driving. All live here. Dr. Benjamin Gutmann, of this city and Dr. B. J. Ellis, of Metuchen, happened along the road just after the accident in their cars and attended to the injured.

The collision occurred while the Sillcocks car was passing the Thomas car. There are various accounts of the accident, but all agree that the colored chauffeur turned white when his car overturned.

Mr. Thomas, the worst injured, is suffering from shock and contusions. Mrs. Thomas has her right foot badly cut. Mr. Sillcocks has a cut hand. Mr. Schmalholz is bruised and his right arm is useless. Mrs. Schmalholz wrenched the tendons of her right ankle and has several cuts and bruises.

The new team drawing the apparatus wandering around to the scene of the blaze, but by force of habit the populace made straight for Joe Harrigan's on South avenue. The firemen quickly administered first aid to a blaze in a chimney. The loss was trifling.

GOING TO THE CIRCUS

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

Moses Fairman was visiting the Widow Hooper at least two nights a week with a view to matrimony. Just about this time the billposter for a circus appeared and pasted the roadside barns with the usual gaudy bills, and the excitement began.

Perkinsville was no circus town. It never had had one and didn't want one. Such things were looked upon as demoralizing in the extreme. The bills were hardly up when the parents began warning their children and the ministers had something to say from the pulpits. On one of his visits to the widow Moses Fairman expressed the hope that she would not even permit her cat to view the circus parade, and the next instant he was a surprised man.

"Why, I shall be a spectator myself," replied the widow. "Not only that, but I shall attend the circus both afternoon and evening. I shall expect you to escort me in the evening."

"W-h-a-t!" gasped Moses as he stared at her with open mouth.

The widow repeated the words and said she was tickled to death that a circus was coming.

"But it's wicked! It's monstrous! You can't be in earnest!"

"I shall be there on a front seat."

"But I won't go, and neither will any church member. You have heard what has been said about it. Why, you'd be turned out of the congregation as a black sheep. Mary, don't think of doing any such thing."

"Moses, I'm going to that circus, and that's flat!" replied the widow as she put her foot down. "I don't believe there's any more wickedness about it than at a spelling school. Why should there be?"

"But circus men swear and fight," protested Moses.

"So do lightning rod men and tin peddlers. I've heard some of the men around your mill swear."

"But circuses have a clown, and the clown"—

"And the clown he jokes and makes fun. Why shouldn't he?"

"Mary," solemnly said Moses, "if you go to that circus then all is over between us."

"All right, Moses; I'll be there."

Moses went straight from the house of the widow to that of his minister and told his story. It produced consternation. The widow's independence had been winked at, but here was a case of revolution, rebellion, defiance. It must be met and crushed in the bud. The hour was late, but the minister went to struggle with the rebel. She put her head out of her chamber window and after ascertaining his errand replied:

"I have been to Sunday school picnics of our church and seen selfishness, quarreling and backbiting. It can be no worse at a circus, and I am going. Did you ever see a two horned rhinoceros?"

"N-no!" was the stammering reply.

"Then by all means go and see one. It may be your only chance for the next twenty years. Yes, and there's a five legged calf and a dodo."

Next day the news was all over town, and the earth proceeded to rock. The widow had many callers at her house, and Moses had many at his mill. All were "again" the widow. It was decided that she must be put down. At first she was only determined. So much was said, however, that she got her mad up and announced that she would attend Thursday evening prayer meeting and announce her position. She was there, and the church was crowded. It was hoped that she intended to recede from her first position, but it was a vain hope. She took the floor to ask how many persons present had ever attended a circus. Five men signified that they had, and seven or eight more could have done so, but didn't.

The widow asked how they had been harmed—if it had led to profanity, drunkenness, wife beating and theft. All pleaded not guilty. Then she asked why it was more wicked to look at an elephant than an ox. No one answered. Then she asked why it was worse to listen to a clown's joke than to some of the stories told around the postoffice while waiting for the mail to arrive. No one answered. Then she asked why a woman shouldn't walk a tight rope or a rail fence if she wanted to? She had seen men walking over the bridge on the railing, and no one had raised a fuss about it. Women would jump through hoops at the circus. What of it? She knew a woman in Perkinsville who had crawled through a screen door when locked out.

The widow's best weapon was saved to the last. She had made a good case, but she clinched it by asking if any one present would please point out in the Bible where Christian men and women were forbidden the circus any more than the paring bee, the cornhusking or the 'lasses candy pull. All heard, but no one complied, and Mrs. Hooper wrapped her toga about her and walked out.

The circus appeared on the date given. The widow was there, Moses was there, and the three or four people in town who weren't there were down with the mumps or measles. It was even said that the three ministers penetrated as far as the cages of the ostriches and the hyenas and that those who tried to figure up the increase of crime during the next year got lost in the maze before arriving at any startling results.

UP TO DATE—Had no money of my own, so took the other fellows money and went to Lakewood Wednesday and bought the very best piece of ground I could find to build a town or city on. It is situated at a one horse depot called Ridgway, but partly made arrangements yesterday to call it Uptodate. The main macadamized road running from Lakewood to Lakehurst goes right through Uptodate, and there is the making of a nice place there. Did you ever know that I sold Highland Park this city? Sold 500 lots there in 1½ years to outside people, while Plainfield people did nothing but kick about it. These lots are for the poor man. The prices will be $25, $30 and $35 each, and no tin can houses can be built there, for the lots shall be restricted to a $2,000 house. If you want to get in on the ground floor with me and I can tell you more about it, where it will not cost me so much. D. Foster Updike, my time is yours, 159 North avenue. 'Phone 1907. 6 1 tf

FORCED TO PROPOSE

By ANNA WOODBRIDGE

It was in the reign of King Edward of England, the fourth of that name, that John Ochiltree, a young farmer living in the county of Kent, met a lass called Mary Griggs at a Maying and conceived a strong passion for her. He danced with her around the Maypole and looked at her languishingly, but his modesty and the strength of his love tied his tongue so that he could say nothing to her.

Mary had been keeping company with Richard Doyle, a maker of armor, but the moment he laid eyes on John Ochiltree, Doyle saw that she was lost to him in favor of his rival. He drew away sulky, thus leaving the field to the man who had supplanted him.

The day after the Maying John waited for Mary to come out of her father's thatched cottage and joined her. He managed to wish her "good morning" and said that the crops promised to be good and that one of his cows had calved, but besides this he said nothing. Mary was a girl of spirit and would not help him on. She said to herself that he should talk to her like any other man or she would have none of him. He continued to show her by his expression that he was enamored of her, and when he looked at her his eyes had a melancholy expression.

Now, as soon as John got away from her his tongue was unloosed, and he could say what he liked. He told his mother of his trouble and convinced her that it was impossible that he should tell Mary his love and ask her to marry him.

"Then," said his mother, "Mary must propose to you."

"She will never do that," sighed John.

"She must be made to. My son wishes her for a wife, and he must have her. Besides, Mary is a good girl and will have a good dowry. I wish her for a daughter-in-law. I have made up my mind that, since you are unable to ask Mary to be your wife, she shall claim you for her husband."

"And how will you do that, mother?"

"Never mind, so that I do it. We women have to get through the world by exercising our wits. We are not men, to force our way, so we have to plan."

Things went from bad to worse between John and Mary. Determined to force him to declare himself, she encouraged her former suitor. This made John ill, and so great was his ailing that his mother feared he would die. She went to Mary and, telling her of John's condition and the cause, begged her to do that which was expected of the sterner sex—ask John to be her husband. Mary vowed that she would be no man's wife who had not the courage to ask her, and, though John might die, she would not do his part for him.

Not long after this a sheep belonging to a neighbor was found in John Ochiltree's fold. John was arrested for sheep stealing and thrown into prison. "The lad has lost his mind for love of you," said John's mother to Mary. The lass was secretly troubled, but tossed her head and said that a man who was afraid of a girl had no mind to lose.

John was tried and convicted and sentenced to be hanged.

Then Mary began to regret that she had refused to be persuaded. But it was now too late. She had driven John into insanity, for she believed what his mother said, or she had unintentionally bewitched him so that he had stolen a sheep. She sat at home mourning her sad fate at loving a man so defective. John's mother brought a request from her son that Mary would be present at his execution. Mary declared that she could not endure such a sight and would not go. But she was at last persuaded to grant this last boon to a man she was now persuaded she had driven to the scaffold, and on the morning of the hanging she went there with her lover's mother.

A crowd was gathered around the culprit. John, with the rope around his neck, had ascended a few steps of the ladder. He stopped and, seeing Mary below, said to her:

"Mary, save me."

"How can I do that, John?"

"It is the law that if one about to be executed be claimed in marriage by any woman he shall go free."

"Is that so?" Mary asked of the sheriff.

"If you claim this man in marriage I dare not hang him."

"Oh, Mary," cried John, "have mercy on me."

"Save him," whispered the culprit's mother.

Mary hesitated. "No," she said at last; "let him hang."

John staggered, then seemed relieved. He climbed nimbly up the other rungs of the ladder, and the sheriff was about to swing him off when Mary cried:

"Hold! I claim this man in marriage."

John was taken down, and the lovers, of whom the one couldn't and the one wouldn't till death was imminent, fell into each other's arms.

John's mother had stolen the sheep and placed it in her fold to bring about the result and force Mary to make the proposition. And yet we are told that women have not the heads that men have to accomplish results.

A MILD COMPLAINT.

Say, Belshazzar's my name,
And I'm here with a kick.
I arise to proclaim
That I'm utterly sick
Of the way in which I'm Getting gossiped about.
It's a cowardly crime,
And I want it cut out!
Every time that a bunch
Of cheap loafers get tight
At a twenty course lunch
And stay up half the night
And go howling about
Till the sun's in the east
The reformers all shout,
"Bad as Belshazzar's feast!"
And when crooks get the hook
Some one's certain to bawl,
"At the handwriting look
Which appears on the wall!"
Shades of Babylon great!
It has sure got my goat,
For I'm willing to state
That my feast of such note
Could in no ways compare—
Not in one single sense—
With that Trenton affair.
I dined ladies and gents.
Nobody got gay
And flung bottles about,
And the papers next day
Didn't set up a shout,
And that stuff on the wall
Which we happened to see
Was no scandal at all.
So I say, let it be!
And next time when a crowd
Of plain rowdies and thugs
Get to cutting up loud
And fall round on the rugs
Leave me out of it, please,
And don't shout in the least
In such measures as these:
"'Twas a Belshazzar feast!"
—Paul West in New York World.

Then She Grabbed a Strap

"Madam, I would give you my seat, but I am an old man," said the gouty passenger.

"You hold your age and place remarkably well, sir," replied the woman with a grouch.

Not In His Judgment.

"The next thing in order," said the master of ceremonies, referring to the slip of paper in his hand, "is music."

"No, sir!" savagely whispered the leader of the band. "Not music! The next thing is 'Hail, Columbia!'"

Taking his station, he scowled, waved his baton, and the noise of the brasses burst forth.—Chicago Tribune.

Cause of His Death.

"Yes, I remember him," said Alkali Ike. "He died very sudden."

"Heart disease?" asked the eastern tourist.

"Waal, now, I don't know as you kin say it was the heart any more'n the club, spade or diamond. Anyway, he dealt himself four aces."—Philadelphia Press.

Not the Real Thing.

"So," said Miss Sharpe, "this is your diamond engagement ring, eh? When Mr. Cheepley gave it to you it must have flattered you."

"Flattered me?" queried Miss Gull.

"Yes. You know they say 'imitation is the sincerest flattery.'" — Catholic Standard and Times.

Found Wanting.

"Please shake your head, Mr. Pike," said the young lady's small brother.

"All right, Tommy. Now, what did you want me to shake my head for?"

"Pa said you was a rattle brained idiot, but I didn't hear nothin' rattle, did you?"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Higher Criticism.

Georgiana was making preparations for her doll's birthday party, and her brother stood by helplessly, receiving instructions. "Oh, Palmer," she exclaimed suddenly, "first we must take this child over to church and have her criticised."—Success Magazine.

Accommodating.

She (her first lesson)—I have been shut up in boarding school so long that I feel very awkward and timid in company. I do not know what to do with my hands.

He—I'll hold them for you.—New York Weekly.

The Latest Kick.

"How did I acquit myself, hubby?"

"Well, you don't make the speeches that mother used to make," was the ungracious answer of the gentleman suffragette. — Louisville Courier-Journal.

Why She Objected.

"I don't like the way my new dress is cut."

"Did your modiste make a mistake?"

"No. The baby has been practicing on it with the shears."—St. Louis Star.

Postponed.

"Did Mrs. Green read her paper at the literary club last week?"

"No. Her husband was too ill to write it for her, and we had to postpone it."—Detroit Free Press.

An Easy One.

Her Father—Blanche, why doesn't Mr. Linger go home earlier?

Blanche—I'm why, dad!—Puck.

Three Kitchen Mades.

Plain Sally Lunn is simple,
But good for every day;
Brown Betty, more pretentious,
Has crisp and spicy way,
But Charlotte Russe is flippant.
In gayeties she'll plunge.
She goes to balls and parties
And quite inclines to sponge.
—Life.

"FUN" WITH THE CARDS.

How an Evening In the Parlor May Be Sacrificed.

Is there anything in the world so pathetic as the spectacle of a young man showing his favorite card trick to a bunch of girls? The slaughter goes like this—man speaks first:

"I used to know a clever trick with cards. Miss Ellen, choose a card from this pack."

"I am to choose? Which one?"

"Any one you like."

"But how can I tell when you show me only the backs and the backs are all exactly alike?"

"Just take one at random."

"Oh, is that fair? Well, here—I've got the queen of diamonds."

"Oh, you mustn't tell me what you have. I'm to tell you that, you know. Put it back and take another."

"Why can't I keep this one? I can remember it better."

"There wouldn't be any trick. You see, you are to take a card that I don't see, and then I'm to find out the one you looked at."

"Oh! Why, I don't believe you can do it! All right; I've another one."

"Look at it and put it back in the pack."

"What part of the pack shall I put it in?"

"Anywhere you wish."

"But I should think you'd want to know, so you could tell which card it is. Well—there!"

"Now I shuffle them, so. Presto! Is this the card you chose?"

"Oh, I don't know. I forgot to look and see what one I took. Oh! Here's May. Now there are enough to play bridge. May, you should have been here sooner. Mr. Jones has been showing us the most wonderful card tricks!"—Cleveland Leader.

She Made Rapid Progress.

The feminine will out even in the case of children. This was amusingly shown not long ago when little Caroline, seven years old, and her brother, six years old, were sent to school on the same day.

For a week they attended regularly, and on Saturday night the proud father called them to him. With one on each knee, he asked what they had learned in school.

"Well," said the boy, "I learned dat de worl' is round. I can count up to five and say my alferbet."

His father beamed and by careful questioning got quite a remarkable amount of knowledge out of his small son.

"I'm proud of you, Freddie," he said, smiling. "Now, Caroline, have you learned lots too?"

"Uh, huh," answered Caroline shyly.

"Well," encouraged her father, "tell us what you have learned."

"I learned the names of all the boys in Freddie's class," she answered, proudly and wept when her father laughed.—Philadelphia Times.

The Firstborn.

Young Father—I am amazed, shocked, my dear, to hear you say you intend to give the baby some paregoric. Don't you know paregoric is opium, and opium stunts the growth, enfeebles the constitution, weakens the brain, destroys the nerves and produces rickets, marasmus, consumption, insanity and death?

Young Mother—Horrors! I never heard a word about that. I won't give the little ducky darling a drop, no indeedy. But something must be done to stop his yelling. You carry him awhile.

Father (after an hour's steady stamping with the squalling infant)—Where in thunder is that paregoric?—New York Weekly.

Glances.

He would have been glad to exchange glances with her.

But a fair exchange were no robbery.

And she chose rather to steal a glance when she thought he wasn't looking.

"Oh, woman, woman!" he murmured, but dared not reproach her openly.—Puck.

Brutal.

The Wife—I've been to a bridge party, and I have a splitting headache.

The Brute—Well, I don't understand it. Your tongue might ache or your stomach, but why your head?—Cleveland Leader.

A LESSON THAT FAILED.

Don't Go Too Far When Asking a Father For His Girl.

"I don't suppose," the timid young man said as he tremblingly approached her father, "that you will be inclined to grant the request I have to make, Mr. Boodleson, but"—

"Stop!" the millionaire commanded. "I know what you're here for. My daughter told me this morning that you would call on me today. She made a strong plea for you, and I promised her that I'd listen to you patiently, but you have just about convinced me that you're not the kind of chap I want for a son-in-law."

"Wh-why, what have I done—what have I said to c-cause you to fe-feel that way?"

"I'll tell you. You came in here saying you didn't expect me to consent to let you have my daughter. That's no way to begin. If you expect to get along in the world you'll have to get over that way of approaching people. You should have come to me with a feeling of confidence in your breast and with words on your lips that would have indicated that you didn't doubt for a moment that you'd carry your point. Why, when I asked my wife's father for her I went up to him with all the confidence in the world, slapped him on the back and let him understand that I hadn't a doubt of my ability to win his consent."

"All right, old man. Seeing that there's no reason why Genevieve and I shouldn't get married, you'll of course give your consent, and remember that I expect you to do something handsome in the way of handing out a check as a wedding present. No bluff, you understand—no $10,000 check that is to be torn up after the guests leave or"—

Five minutes later the young man woke up on the sidewalk and began wondering how one was to be able to tell how to go far enough without going too far.—Chicago Record-Herald.

And a Bargain at That.

A little boy had got into the habit of saying "darn," of which his mother naturally did not approve.

"Dear," she said to the little boy, "here is 10 cents. It is yours if you will promise me not to say 'darn' again."

"All right, mother," he said as he took the money; "I promise."

As he lovingly fingered the money a hopeful look came into his eyes and he said, "Say, mother, I know a word that's worth 50 cents."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Was Suspicious.

A Scotchman at the dentist's was told that he must take gas. While the dentist was getting it ready the Scot began to count his money.

The dentist saiid somewhat testily, "You need not pay until the tooth is out."

"I ken that," said the Scotchman, "but as ye're about to make me sleep I jist want to see how I stand."—Harper's Monthly.

Very Real.

"What I like about you, dear," said George in a smothered tone of voice, "is that you're just yourself."

George was right, except for about a peck of some one else's hair, a wire jimmy, a small pharmacy of paint and powder and seven bushels of nature's only rivals.—Minnesota Minnehaha.

A Leader.

"Didn't you tell me Faro Joe was one of the leading citizens of Crimson Gulch?"

"Well," answered Broncho Bob, "he was. When he left town he led the vigilance committee by a quarter of a mile clean to the next county."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Hard to Portray.

"I don't think the book will dramatize well."

"Why not?"

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but that kind of combats don't go well on the stage."—Houston Chronicle.

Rube Audience.

Usher—Ladies, the audience wishes you to keep still during this performance.

Ladies—Heavens! Is it possible that the audience hasn't heard this old opera before?—Cleveland Leader.

As Usual.

He played the "kitty" to the end,
And then the jack pots came.
So now his wife does laundry work.
She's paying for his game.

A Historic Influence.

"It's a long time since Mrs. O'Leary's cow started the Chicago fire by kicking over a lamp."

"Yes, and Chicago beef has been creating more or less excitement ever since."—Washington Star.

The Only Way.

He—I hear that you won your breach of promise suit. Did you get all of the $15,000?

She—Of course. I married my lawyer.—Baltimore American.

IT CAME HANDY

By ROCKFORD KING

The history of gold mining regions repeats itself. First we have the land worth from nothing up to a few dollars an acre. Then some one digs a hole in the ground to put in a post, scoops out a cellar for a house, or something like that, and finds in the dirt taken out indications of the precious metal. He doesn't say anything to anybody, but goes off and gets it assayed. The report being favorable, he lets it be known that he has gold on his property. Those who strike indications pre-empt claims and organize companies with a few dollars capital, most of which is spent for printing certificates of stock. Every foot of the ground in the vicinity is staked out for mines, which cross and recross one another at every conceivable angle. There are thousands of these pieces of paper, nearly all worthless.

When the Clear Creek region of Colorado was in such a stage as this a man whom I shall call Peter Anderson, a young lawyer from the south, settled in Denver and hung out his shingle. He had a very frugal, patient wife, who was a real helpmate to him. She never permitted anything to be wasted, no matter how little value it possessed, and when her husband rallied her on saving worthless things she would say cheerily, "It may come in handy just in the nick of time."

The principal law practiced in Colorado at that time was with the revolver; consequently Peter Anderson found little practice in his profession. But money was easily borrowed, and the Andersons managed to keep body and soul together by small loans. The husband found it dull sitting in his office waiting for clients, so he spent most of his time in a neighboring billiard room playing pool. He told his wife that this was a good way to make acquaintances and thus get business. She said she thought he was right.

The members of such communities are inveterate gamblers. Refreshments and the price of the game were to be paid for by the loser. In addition to this, the players, all of whom were possessed of worthless mining stocks, would put them up to be absorbed by the winner. A number of these certificates came into Peter Anderson's possession, but none of them ever found their way back to the persons from whom he won them. Every night after he had gone to sleep his wife would get up, search his pockets, take out what mining shares she found there and lock them up in an old trunk she kept in the garret. She never looked at the names of the companies they represented or bothered her head as to their value. Indeed, they were worthless or they would not have come so easily into her husband's possession. Every night his pockets were searched and emptied, but in the morning he would not miss his loss. If his wife had taken a few coins he might have noticed it, but mining stocks were quite a different matter. When he went round to the billiard room in the evening he would think that he had won some shares the night before, but, finding none in his pocket, fancy he had been mistaken. He was a very good pool player and had no difficulty in borrowing a few shares to begin on. Usually he would win, pay off the loan and go on playing on his own capital. If he left the place with stocks in his pocket, the next morning they would be deposited, as usual, in Mrs. Anderson's trunk.

But the pool players didn't bring Anderson any law business, and the wolf was continually snarling about his door. However, the wolves in such communities are usually coyotes, comparatively harmless, for any man will give or lend any other man if he has anything he doesn't need at the moment. Nevertheless Anderson's condition was not attractive, and except when he was playing pool he was very dispirited.

One day there was a big strike up on Clear creek. A mining company had opened a vein that paid many hundreds of dollars to the ton. Peter Anderson when he went home that night told his wife about the strike, remarking, "Oh, how I wish I had some of the stock of the company!"

"I think you have, dear," said Mrs. Anderson, and she went up to her trunk and brought down an armful of mining share certificates. The two sorted them, tossing them when examined on the floor in their eager hunt for the one they coveted. Presently they came to a ten share certificate which alone would keep them for awhile. Then a fifty share turned up, then another ten, then a hundred, five hundred—indeed, all denominations. It was a good while before they got through the accumulated pile. When they did they figured up shares in the lucky company sufficient to give them a fortune of half a million dollars.

When the excitement of the find had died down a bit Anderson asked his wife where she had got all the certificates. Then she told him that she had robbed him of them, thinking that some of them might some day come in handy.

Anderson strolled downtown the next day, sold a few shares of his stock and went about paying small debts. That was the last of his playing pool for mining stocks, for he found plenty to do. The day came when he was sent to represent his state in the United States senate.

D. FOSTER UPDIKE'S AMUSEMENTS

THE HORSE SHOW. EXCUSE ME LADIES!
MY FIRST MONTH'S EXPERIENCE.

Did not have as much as four dollars to my name when I started, and the first day I went up into a lawyer's office to have my backers agreement signed, lawyer like, he had to give a voice about it, and scared my backer so much, that it is not signed yet. But it is as good as signed, for my actions have proven his advice to be worth about 30c, but please let me have the 30c. Now let me tell you why I love about one half the Plainfield lawyers. It is because I studied law under one of the best lawyers in Trenton and when I see you people paying for something that you don't get, jars me. Some of it is from pure dumbness,and some from pure devilishness. One or two of them got in my way unlawfully once, and they will go to jail just as soon as I get to them. This is what I have done: Disposed of 2 houses on East Seventh street, one on Madison avenue, one in Scotch Plains, one in Dunellen, two in Highland Park, 3½ acres of ground in New Brunswick. Have nine almost dealt for a Newark property (between Mr. Conover and myself) one farm and outfit at Middlebush, three farms at Pattenburg, one at Lebanon, and last but not least, a $27,000 farm near Clinton. Bought up-to-date Lakewood, sold two other parts there, and meet the Board of Trade at Easton next Tuesday to manage a tract of land, that I have not seen to lay out in building lots, and build up for the working class of people. They know in Easton as well as they do in Trenton.

Will it pay you to pay me $15 for advertising? I don't want to be bothered with any city property, if you don't, but just yet I can not expect farmers all over Jersey to do it.

By the way, I must not forget Mr. McDonough. In two weeks, without experience, he has written $28,000 of insurance, and he is not here to ask him how many houses he has rented. That ridiculous sign does it. D. Foster Updike.

gation they have no disposition to interfere. If, however, a contract such as was last suggested should be made, the company would have ample opportunity to secure another source of supply. Indeed, as your committee is informed, plans are now under way whereby the Company will shortly acquire such a source and within a few months it will be in a position to supply all of its customers other than Plainfield, without need of retaining the Netherwood source. The suggested plan received serious consideration by the company, but in the end the company concluded to decline that proposition also.

Your committee now feels that there is no alternative but to proceed at once to take such steps as the Council shall think best to provide the city with water from the natural source of supply within its borders by means of a plant to be owned and controlled by the city. They appreciate the magnitude of the enterprise and the trouble and delays necessarily incident thereto, but, after carcful consideration of the whole matter, and in the exercise of their best judgment, your committee is of the opinion that such steps should now be taken.

"Dated, Plainfield, June 5, 1911.

Mr. Holt, who presented a minority report in February, believing that it would be wise to sink a test well and look for an independent supply aside from the one at the Netherwood wells, also took exception to last night's action. He hoped the Council would take a broad view of the matter. He believed that it would be cheaper for the city to sink test wells in preferance to condemning the local water company plant and paying an unknown price for supply and equipment.

Mr. Holt said that according to the report of Mr. Fuertes, the expert, there is an abundance of water here independent of the water company's supply, and if this is so it would be best to draw on that instead of paying a big price for the one at Netherwood, in addition to securing the equipment. He said that the city has an opportunity to get a public playgrounds here and he thought it would be better to try and find water there. In this way it would be possible for the city to have perpetual pleasure and profit. He then moved to amend the resolution, substituting the word "minority" for "majority" in the report.

Replying to Mr. Holt, Mr. Mygatt said that the water company had refused to consider a proposition of any kind for purchase, and in taking up condemnation proceedings the city would be permitted to eliminate anything not thought to be necessary, either equipment or supply, and in his opinion two plants might prove disastrous to the city. For this reason he hoped the amendment would not prevail. The amendment was lost, Mr. Holt alone voting in the affirmative.

PUPILS PERFORM

Recitations and Songs are Given at the Seminary Commencement.

CHILDREN PERFORM WELL.

Four Choruses, the Selections Being From Eugene Field's Works—List of Those Who Had a Part in Entertainment.

The Commencement exercises of The Seminary yesterday was a delightful occasion for those present, including the pupils and guests. A wisteria arbor arranger at one end of the assembly room made an attractive setting for the young performers.

The program, excepting four choruses, comprised selections from Eugene Field. This was of unusual interest, showing an appreciation of the child's viewpoint. The children evidently enjoyed their parts as much as the audience. The singing by the chorus called forth approval from the audience.

The swing song by Catherine McClymont, Harriet Morgan, Cornelia Wright and Rae Stevens and the Japanese Lullaby given by Marie and Louise Sill, dressed as Japanese girls, were especially noteworthy. "The Drum," a recitation in which the small boys carried drums and guns, marched soldier-like, was enthusiastically received.

Elizabeth Benton, Margaret Tyler and Margaret Kimball were especially successful in their recitations, enunciating distinctly and with good expression. A French song and game given by the smaller children showed careful training; the children speaking their parts with good French accent. The program:

Hark, Hark, the Lark, Schubert, senior and junior classes; Barcarolle from Tales of Hofmann, Offenbach, senior class; French song and game, Les Enfants et le Petit Oiseau, Frances Shaw, Susie Taylor, Mabel Taylor, Lillie Wright and Mary Wright; The Dinky Bird, Eugene Field, Maude White; The Rock-a-by Lady, Eugene Field, Phoebe Moore, Elsie Monro, Helen Western; The Duel, Eugene Field, Augusta Clawson; Swing Song, Eugene Field, Catherine MacClymont, Harriet Morgan, Cornelia Wright, Rae Stephen; The Sugar Plum Tree, Eugene Field, Carolyn Hyde; Nightfall in Dordrecht, Eugene Field, Winifred Titus; song, The Japanese Lullaby, Eugene Field, Marie and Louise Sill; The Shut Eye Train, Eugene Field, Dorothy White.

Intry-Mintry, Eugene Fields, Virginia Glover, Mary Elizabeth Genung, Cornelia Wright, Jack Stephen, Rae Stephen; Heigho, My Dearie, Eugene Field, Helen Lucry; The Night Wind, Eugene Field, Elizabeth Benton; The Drum, Eugene Field, Robert Chester, William Davison, William Tyler, Douglas Maithy, Jack Stephen, Rae Stephen; Fairy and Child, Eugene Field, Carol Benton; The Fly Away Horse, Eugene Field, Margaret Tyler; Jest 'Fore Christmas, Eugene Field, Elsa Palmer; song, The Norse Lullaby, Eugene Field, Helen Newman, Catherine Olof, Mary Elizabeth Genung; See'n Things, Eugene Field, Margaret Kimball; Two part song, Evening Winds, Abt, junior class; two part song, Lullaby, Brahms, senior and junior classes.

Those who attend the baseball game between the ministers and doctors at Crescent Oval on Saturday, June 17, will be privileged to do all the "guying" they want to but 'Cap.' But, oh, there will be some fun for you ought to see those two teams at a practice. It's enough to make the veteran fan laugh tears.

Captain Hedges says that Crescent Oval was selected because of its close proximity to the hospital but he adds that he doesn't think that the umpire, Judge William N. Runyon, will have to be taken there. Mayor Moy has been selected by Captain Maguire to pitch the first ball and then the sport will start.

YOUTHFUL THIEVES

Booty is Recovered and Pair of Offenders are Held For Grand Jury.

JOHN THORP'S HOME ENTERED.

John McNichols is Placed in County Jail and Edward Whitney Paroled in Father's Custody—Get Silverware.

Youthful burglars made a good haul at the residence of John Thorpe, on Marshall place, in the Netherwood section, last night, but the loot has been recovered and the offenders are in custody. The prisoners arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning in police court were John McNichols, aged fifteen, of No. 1115 Nesquehoning avenue, Easton, and Edward Whitney, aged nineteen, of East Sixth street. Both were held for the action of the grand jury, McNichols being sent to the Union county jail and Whitney paroled in the custody of his father, who is a respected citizen.

According to the police, McNichols who is a wayward youth, jumped off a freight train here yesterday and meeting Whitney spent the afternoon about town. During the evening the police say, McNichols induced Whitney to go with him to the Thorpe home where they stole some rare old silverware, a bicycle, a suit of clothes and some collars and neckwear. Laden down with the booty they made their way to the business section, where they were met by Bert Vail and Frank Powers, two youths residing on East Sixth street. Powers and Vail, together with Whitney's brother, who appeared on the scene at that time, grabbed McNichols and held him until the police arrived. The thief's partner made a getaway and spent most of the night in Dunellen, but this morning was brought to police headquarters by his father.

After the hearing before Judge DeMeza, Police Chief Kiely telegraphed McNichols' father, who is an employ of the Lehigh Valley railroad. The latter is said to be a respected resident of Easton. Young Whitney is said to be incorrigable.

BRODHEAD DINNER

Boom For State Senate Nomination Launched at Testimonial Banquet For Him.

BEARDSLEY FOR ASSEMBLY.

E. H. Geran, G. W. V. Moy, S. S. Swackhamer and R. E. Mayham Among Speakers—A Gift for Guest of Honor.

Assemblyman Calvin E. Brodhead, of this city, was tendered a testimonial banquet at the Hotel Waldorf last night in recognition of his work in the lower branch of the State Legislature, last winter, at which time a good sized boom was launched in the interest of his candidacy for State Senator to succeed Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, while the candidacy of TenEyck R. Beardsley, of Fanwood, the toastmaster of the evening, was mentioned as a possible candidate for the Assembly nomination. During the evening Patrick J. Reville, on behalf of a number of the guests, presented Assemblyman Brodhead with a handsome silver-mounted cane, suitably engraved.

Following a fine dinner prepared by Henry Windham, and served in excellent style, Mr. Reville, as chairman of the banquet committee read several letters of regret from specially invited guests, who could not attend, including United States Senator James E. Martine, Assemblyman E. E. Kenney, speaker of the Assembly; State Senator George A. Silzer, of New Brunswick, and Mayor A. A. Stein, of Elizabeth. Each one in a letter praised Assemblyman Brodhead and heartily endorsed his candidacy for the State Senator, which was received with hearty applause. TenEyck R. Beardsley was then introduced as the toastmaster of the evening.

Mr. Beardsley spoke briefly and presented Assemblyman Elmer H. Geran, the author of the Geran election law. While he was expected to speak concerning the new law, the hour was so late that he had scarcely time to touch more than one or two features of the measure, explaining briefly who will be entitled to vote at a primary and election. It was his opinion that the law will result in each voter knowing each candidate and his qualifications and compel parties to name the best possible men for office.

Taking his cue from the first page of the menu card, which bore the words: "He Made Good," Assemblyman Geran endorsed his colleague's candidacy and always praised his work in the last session of the Legislature. He said that Assemblyman Brodhead proved in the last session that he was always on the side of the people, and that there was not a man in the Legislature more able to look after the interests of the people. None was more honest, in fact, he was so straight that he leaned backward.

Mr. Geran always accepted the opportunity to praise Governor Woodrow Wilson, adding that he has proved himself to be a born leader and that he has the interests of the people of New Jersey and the United States continually on his mind and heart. The speaker briefly reviewed the changes that have been occuring politically throughout the country, stating that the people are trying to regain control of affairs which for so long a time have been in the hands of the bosses.

Ray E. Mayham, of Rahway, the next speaker, said that he wanted to add words of appreciation to those expressed in the interest of Assemblyman Brodhead and to state that should he be a candidate for the State Senate, he felt sure that Union county would give its united support. He admitted that he did not vote for Governor Wilson because he did not like the men who were responsible for his nomination, but when he

This Boiler is a Coal Saver

Why? Because it is a BOYNTON and has the BOYNTON square fire pot, which increases fire surface about 25% over other boilers of like diameter. The BOYNTON "square pot" is the greatest improvement yet devised in heating systems. It is square at the corners, hence clears free of cinders and ash each time the grate is turned. That means a live fire, always, and plenty of draft. See your dealer about the

LIEUT. PALMER WED BUT WILL HOLD PLACE.

Washington, June 7.—A precedent of many years' standing has been broken by President Taft in the case of Lieutenant-Commander Leigh C. Palmer, U. S. N., of Bound Brook, who, for the past two years, has been an aide to the President. White House custom decrees that aides to the President be unmarried men, but in the case of Lieutenant-Commander Palmer, who was married on Saturday, an exception will be made.

The marriage of the latter to Mrs. Bessie Draper McKeldin, of Atlanta, Ga., took place at the bridegroom's country home, Stony Crest, Bound Brook, so that the officer's father, who is unable to travel, might be present. Owing to the recent death of the bride's parents, the ceremony was a quiet one.

Lieutenant-Commander Palmer served throughout the Cuban campaign aboard the United States steamer New York and Vesuvius. It was while attending a house party on the Hudson, after his return from Santiago, that he met his bride.

GOLF.

An item of news calculated to interest golfers planning to compete at Englewood next month in the open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association is that the course of the Englewood Country Club will be stiffened up considerably between now and the middle of July. Arrangements have been made to put in a dozen traps, and work to this end will be started on Monday. In brief, the new trouble will be about as follows:

Pit to left of second green, another to the left of the third green and another to the left of the fifth. At the right of the sixth and seventh greens traps are planned, and a new one is to go in to the left of No. 9. Part of the bunker to the left of the tenth green will be taken away and a new trap added on the right. There will be a new one on the right of the eleventh and another on the left of the thirteenth. A trap will be placed to the right of the fourteenth and one more behind the fifteenth green. It is also expected that a trench-like formation will be dug on the home green at the base of the terrace.

In the metropolitan open at Deal last summer Alec Smith, the national open champion, managed to win after being hard pressed by J. J. McDermott. The latter, now located at Atlantic City, will be a competitor at Englewood, as will a number of other well known professionals located at various points throughout the East.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gee, of Third place, have gone to Cazenovia, N. Y.

Mrs. J. E. Tompkins, of Crescent avenue, has gone to Plymouth, Mass., for the summer.

TOWN WINS IN MILK DISPUTE

Trenton, June 7.—In sustaining the ordinance passed by Montclair regulating the sale of milk within that municipality, the Supreme Court yesterday upheld in the broadest sense the right of a municipality to make regulations for the preservation of the health of the community.

The decision was handed down by Justice Swayze in the certiorari proceedings instituted by Borden's Condensed Milk Company against the Board of Health of Montclair. The milk company obtains at least a portion of its product from Chenango county, N. Y., where the dairymen refuse to have their herds put under the tuberculin test.

It was this feature of the ordinance that met with particular opposition from the milk company since it resulted in a prohibition against the sale of its milk in the municipality. The most difficult question presented to the court was the contention that the ordinance was violative of the constitutional provisions against taking property without due process of law and giving to Congress the right to regulate interstate commerce.

Justice Swayze held that the ordinance in effect did deprive the defendant company of property and that in some instances it might interfere with interstate commerce. In the circumstances, however, he concluded that in the exercise of police powers the action of the Board of Health should be sustained.

The following sentences from the opinion of Justice Swayze indicate the general principles established by the decision:

"Boards of health are empowered by the act of 1897 and by the pure food law of 1907, taken in conjunction with the act of 1887, to prohibit the sale of milk from diseased cows.

"Whether cows from which such a municipality is supplied with milk are diseased, is a question that may in the first instance be determined by the local Board of Health.

"In determining whether cows from which a municipality is supplied with milk are diseased, the method of diagnosis adopted by the local board of health should be one that is well recognized, thoroughly approved and as reliable as any.

"A local board of health may prohibit the sale within the municipality of milk from cows that react to the 'Tuberclin' test."

D. N. Groendyke, of Mercer avenue, has gone to Magnolia, Mass., for the summer.

Mrs. W. R. Lewis, of East Sixth street, has gone to Paterson, where she will visit for two months.

FILE CAVEAT AGAINST PROBATING HER WILL

The will of Mrs. R. Willard Ware was to have been probated in Surrogate Parrot's office, Elizabeth, yesterday, but because Miss Elsie Case, of Newark, a cousin, filed objections, the document was held up for the present. The nature of the objections offered by Miss Case cannot be learned, as no information is obtainable in the surrogate's office aside from the fact that they were made.

Mrs. Ware, who was a resident of this city for nearly thirty years, died within the past ten days. So far as known she has no relatives here, and the fact that she had a cousin in Newark only became known through her objections to the probating of the will.

SHE MUST BE WIDOW TO KEEP A FORTUNE.

Frank W. Edwards, late of Bayonne, whose will was admitted to probate yesterday by Surrogate Egan of Hudson county, bequeathed his estate in trust to his wife, Clara L. Edwards to apply the interest to her own use so long as she remains a widow. If she remarries she is to get $20,000 and the balance of the estate is to be divided equally between four sons and a daughter, the latter, Mrs. Florence Edwards Ring, of 98 West Thirty-fourth street, Bayonne.

The will bears the date of March 19, 1909. The testator died May 13 last.

CORSET THWARTED A MURDER EFFORT

A corset steel saved the life of Mrs. Anna Rolof, of Greater Elizabeth, from death when George Brodsser stabbed her with a pair of carpenters' compasses as she tried to stop him and Teddy Zimmerman from robbing the store of John Wagner, in Klem street, in that city. The boys were arrested by Constable Harris and brought to the Town Hall, Linden.

Brodesser was sent to the county jail under $500 bail and $100 for stealing fourteen packages of cigarettes. Zimmerman was reprimanded and released. Both of the boys were absent from school. They determined to get some cigarettes. They went to the store of John Wagner. Finding the store closed young Brodesser produced a key. He found that is would open the door. The boys then went into the store to search for the cigarettes.

It was during the search that they were discovered by Mrs. Rolof, who lives next door. She ordered them out. Young Brodesser pulled out the compasses and stabbed her in the side near the heart. Only the steel ribs in her corsets saved her from possible death.

In a fit of temper the boy hit his sister, Helen, aged 12 years, with the fork, but fortunately did not injure her to any extent. He disappeared from home after the incident. Young Hannon has figured in several scrapes and refuses to go to school or sleep at home.

found the Governor turning on those who sought to dictate his policies, he promptly gave his support to the administration.

Mr. Geran said that the little help he was able to give to United States Senator James E. Martine, was worth all that he had ever done for his party. He believed Governor Wilson to be the man of the hour and destined to become President of the United States.

"Opportunity" was the toast assigned to Mayor G. W. V. Moy, who by the way was given a hearty reception, but it was growing late and his remarks were brief. He said that Governor Woodrow Wilson was the first Democratic Governor he ever voted for and he was glad of it. Mr. Moy returning to his toast said that opportunity without ambition amounts to nothing, and it not only rests with the individual, but with political parties as well. The Democratic party had a great opportunity last Fall, but if it had made a mistake it would be difficult to say what the result might have been. There are opportunities for good and evil and it rests with each one as to how they are improved.

It was at this point the Assemblyman Brodhead was presented with a cane, and it was a complete surprise to him. Mr. Reville in making the presentation said that he hoped the cane would always guide him in the path of rectitude and that God might grant him long life to enjoy its usefulness.

Responding to the chairman's words, Mr. Brodhead said that he could not find words to express his feeling of appreciation and that the memory of the affair would always be sweet. Although the banquet was a testimonial to him, in a larger sense it was a Progressive Democratic gathering, and he noticed some Progressive Republicans present. He thought there was not much difference between the two. Mr. Brodhead thanked those who had presented his candidacy for the State Senator, adding that he did not seek the office.

"That office has been ably filled," said Mr. Brodhead, " by such men as Voorhees, Cross and Ackerman and the man who succeeds to that office will indeed be given a high honor. I do not seek the office. I would rather see a man of eminence succeed to it. I consider it to be a great honor to be an Assemblyman and I considered it a still greater honor to be privileged to nominate James E. Martine for the exalted office he now holds. The Democratic party is more and more becoming the interpreter of the people's will and may it always be so in the future."

S. S. Swackhamer was the last speaker of the evening and he simply gave added endorsement to Mr. Brodhead's candidacy for the Sate Senate, adding that he had shown by his work the past year that he would fill any office to which he might be elected honestly and fearlessly.

Congressman Eugene F. Kinhead and Assemblyman Hugh J. McLoughlin were also among those who failed to appear and speak as announced.

The banquet was held in Mr. Windham's large new dining room, a portion of which was built yesterday for the occasion. The room was attractively decorated with American flags and flowers, while a fine picture of Governor Wilson was displayed. The committee of arrangements comprised Patrick J. Reville, chairman; John F. Connelly, vice-chairman; Edward T. Lynch, treasurer; secretary, Frank Shattle, and the reception committee comprised James E. Prindle, chairman; Jeremiah Callahan, Edward Fluck and John J. Hickey. The guests were as follows:

Assemblymen Calvin E. Brodhead, Elmer H. Geran and TenEyck Beardsley, Mayor George W. V. Moy, Ray E. Mayham, president of the State Federation of Democratic Clubs; S. S. PRESS AG'T ANDERSON SWEARS TO ALL THIS

Rehearsals for the out-door production of an Al Fresco performance to be presented tomorrow, Friday and Saturday nights, have frequently resulted in slight accidents to the participants and last night two received injuries that were quite serious, one almost resulting in a fatality. Edward Bodin, one of the principals, was the near-victim of the latter and but for his presence of mind and timely assistance would have been precipitated over a cliff to the rocks below, a distance of fully seventy-five feet. In the second mishap Lewis Snowden slipped and fell into a camp fire and received several severe burns.

The wet condition of the grounds, last night, was responsible for both accidents. In the first, Mr. Bodin and Mr. Snowden were going through a scene and was struggling with all the realism of a bloodthirsty Sioux He sudenly lost his footing and slipped from Snowden's grasp, the next instant falling over the edge of the steep declivity. The watchers were almost paralyzed with fear but breathed sighs of relief when they noted him catch hold of a tough and resisting tree root. It held him long enough to allow Snowden and others to haul him to safety. It was a portrayal that would have won thunders of applause from spectators, but Mr. Bodin declares he does not care to repeat it. He was somewhat weak in the knees after the rescue, yet pulled himself together in a few moments and continued the rehearsal.

Mr. Snowden's accident occurred during a scene in which he escapes from the torture post. A blazing fire was in front of him and making a misstep after the bonds had been loosened he fell squarely among the flames rolling completely over. His hands were burned and his back slightly scorched, having been protected by clothing. He was given "first aid" treatment at a nearby residence.

Comedy Bill at Proctor's.

"Handkerchief No. 15," a fine comedy sektch, full of good laughs, will be one of the headliners at Proctor's theatre, tomorrow and the rest of the week. It is presented by St. John, Bridges & Co. Williamson & O'Connor, a clever pair of blackface comedians, will offer a lot of nonsense, the Four Southern Singers in a refined musical sketch and Fannie Fonfolder, a slack wire performer, will complete the bill.

Cherry Stealers Fined.

Andrew Judge, white, and George Jackson, colored, were arraigned in the borough court this morning, charged by residents of Grove street with stealing cherries, breaking tree limbs and general nuisance. They were fined $2 each and given until Saturday to pay it. The Judge boy is under parole for his part in the borough lead pipe robberies a short time ago.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 11, 1911.

Topic.—Why I love Christ—I Pet. i, 3-25. (Honorary members' meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Peter is often called the apostle of hope. Hope occupies the central place in his writings, which faith does in those of Paul and love in those of John. But, while hope was a living power in the heart of the apostle, the grace of love also had a large place both in his heart and life. In his well known interview with the risen Lord he had been called upon three times to answer the question, "Lovest thou me?" and in each instance he had asserted that there existed in his heart the warmest affection for his Master and Lord. "Thou knowest that I love Thee," was his thrice repeated answer, and even in the Greek word used for love he expressed the depth and warmth of his love. Moreover, Peter recognized and commended the love which the Christians of Asia Minor, to whom he wrote, had for Jesus Christ. Though they had not seen His gracious face and had not known Him after the flesh, yet they loved Him—"whom, having not seen, ye love?" And why did they love Christ? For the same reasons that we and all who love Christ do so.

1. We love Christ because we know Him. It is true that it is love to one whom we have not seen with the physical sight, and yet we know him through the study of His life while upon earth and by the inner knowledge of spiritual communion with Him. And "to know Him is to love Him." No one can rightly study the life of Christ and understand His mission into this world of sin and woe and look upon the sufferings which He endured that this mission might be fulfilled without having his heart go out to the Saviour in great and overwhelming love. And when to this knowledge through history there is added that which comes through experience by spiritual fellowship and communion with Him that love is immeasurably increased. Then we, too, can say:

Yet, though I have not seen and still Must rest in faith alone,
I love Thee, dearest Lord, and will,
Unseen, but not unknown.

2. We love Christ because He first loved us. "We love Him because He first loved us." This is the testimony of John, the beloved disciple and the apostle of love. And it finds a response in each and every loving Christian heart. It was Christ's love for us that led Him to die for us upon the cross, and therefore no one need ever doubt the love of Christ. Love thus manifested is above the realm of doubt. "Love begets love." Christ's love to us begets love in us, love for Him and love for those who are His. We all know from experience that it was the love of Christ for us that kindled within our breasts the flame of love for Christ, and nothing so revives a drooping love for Christ as to sit beneath the cross and to look upon His sufferings and to remember that He bore the cross and shame for us because He loved us.

INDECISION.

There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision and for whom the drinking of every cup, the time of rising and going to bed every day and the beginning of every bit of work are subjects of volitional deliberation. Full half the time of such a man goes to the deciding or regretting of matters that ought to be so ingrained in him as practically not to exist for his consciousness at all.

Noodle Dishes.

Contrary to general supposition, noodles are also used for dishes othes than soup. Noodle soup in itself, however, is a dish relished by nearly everybody regardless of nationality. The noodles must, of course, first be boiled by the housewife, after which they may be served in various ways. The Germans often serve noodles with German prunes. Noodles may also be served with milk seasoned to suit the taste with salt and butter. They may be served with chili. The Italians take the cooked noodles, add seasoned tomatoes and bake for half an hour. Noodles make an excellent dessert by pouring melted butter over them and adding chopped nuts or fruit.—Baker's Weekly.

Lotteries.

Lotteries were features in the Roman saturnalia and in the banquets of the aristocratic Romans, the object in both cases being amusement. Some of the emperors adopted lotteries on a grand scale. Nero's prizes were sometimes a house and at others a slave. Heliogabalus introduced the element of absurdity. One prize would be perhaps a golden vase and the next six flies. In the sixteenth century the lottery was adopted in Italy to encourage the sale of goods. The first recognized lottery in France was in 1656, and soon it became a popular mode of raising money for state purposes. In England the earliest sanctioned lottery was for the repair of harbors in 1569.

The Durands and Meyers.

In France the name employed to designate one of a very large number of men, as Smith is sometimes figuratively used with us, is Durand, the commonest name in the French directories.

In Berlin and other cities of north Germany "Herr Meyer" is the equivalent of "Mr. Smith." In other parts of Germany the name of Schulz or Schulze is the most common. German police authorities, who keep a sharp eye on everybody, have much trouble to distinguish all the Schulzes who have the same given name. One Schulze, who received a public office in Berlin, was inscribed on the police rolls as "Hermann Schulze LV." On the same roll there were a Lehmann XIX. and a Neumann XIV.—Harper's.

The Medicine Bottle.

"Awkwardness in pouring medicine from a bottle cost me $2," a man said. "Because I poured it out on the label side and got the number of the prescription and the date blurred the druggist couldn't refill it, and I had to give the doctor another call. I got no sympathy from the druggist.

"'But you had to learn your lesson,' he said. 'Nearly everybody does. It seems second nature for everybody except nurses, doctors and druggists to pour medicine from the label side of a bottle. The professionals never do. They always pour from the opposite side and keep the label clean. Laymen, after they have paid the price of a consultation for the experience, also adopt that method."—New York Press.

The Wedding Cake Pagoda.

At Mingun on the right bank of the Irrawaddy river, about five miles from Mandalay, in Burma, there stands a peculiar pagoda, known as "the wedding cake pagoda" because it looks like a marvelously magnified bridal cake. It was built in the early part of the nineteenth century and is in thoroughly good preservation, only a few of the images inside having been broken. The extreme height to the top of the minaret is eighty feet and the circumference about 600 feet. The pagoda stands back from the river some 300 feet and is hidden from it by a grove of teak trees. Close to it is the famous Mingun bell.—Wide World Magazine.

The Well Connected Onion.

The onion, strange as it may seem, comes of an aristocratic family, from the stock of which have sprung many notable scions and lovely offshoots. The humble onion is own cousin to the stately lily, whether the lovely Lenten lily, the lily of the valley or the fair floating water lily, all these being of the great liliaceous race. The onion has other notable connections. It is also cousin to the daffodil, or narcissus, and it is even allied to the gigantic dragon tree of Tenerife, which bears little trace of the seemingly frail lily tribe, but is nevertheless a monstrous lily. Thus it is plain the onion is of illustrious origin, though to the ordinary observer there is nothing classical or romantic about it.—Exchange.

The Limbs in Walking.

It is pointed out that in walking or running the arms and legs produce a "balancing" like that of the reciprocating and revolving parts of a locomotive. The movements of the legs react upon the trunk and tend to rotate it in alternate directions about a vertical axis, but the swinging of the arms, each in unison with the opposite leg, produces an opposing mechanical couple, the effect of which is to rotate the trunk in the other direction, thus balancing, in part at least, the rotating action of the legs.

APPRECIATION.

Do you notice the innumerable acts of those in your home performed for your benefit or happiness? Nothing is more ungracious than passing over without remark and apparently without thought the many little efforts and attentions which are intended to sweeten domestic life.

Eating Apples.

The wholesome art of eating apples is all but unknown among us. Now and then some quiet soul will choose his apple with the care that another man chooses his manipulated cigar and relish it with the tang of summer heats and windy days. But we buy apples as we buy baskets of coal—we buy them in the mass, caring only that they are of certain sizes and colors. Then we dump them into some waste corner or musty cellar, open to mice and to furnace heat and to currents of air, and when the skins have toughened into leather and the fragrance has given place to odor of ashes and of decay we cut them up into dumplings and pies and so work them off.—L. H. Bailey in Collier's Weekly.

Got Rid of the "Hurdles."

Dr. Gregory of St. Paul's, London, reformed many abuses at the great cathedral, among them payment for admission, lazy officials and sleepy vergers. The fact that St. Paul's is nowadays much more truly a place of worship than a show place is principally due to the dean's enthusiasm for reform. In the days when people actually had to pay to enter the cathedral the dean found a verger erecting a barrier of hurdles to keep back the visitors.

"What are you preparing for?" asked Dr. Gregory. "Is it to be a cattle show?"

And there were no more hurdles in St. Paul's.—London M. A. P.

Every Precaution Taken.

During a smallpox epidemic in Alabama special precautions against the disease were taken in the mining camps. In one of these camps the president of the mining company paid a visit of inspection and came upon an old negro leaning against the side of a building.

"Jake," asked the president, "are you afraid of the smallpox out here?"

"Some may be, sah," Jake replied. "As fo' me, I ain't scahed. I's jest gwine toh get me some lime an' limate mah house, an' den de doctah, he's comin' up an' 'sassinate mah fambly, so dat den, sah, if we do git de smallpox 'twon't be nothin' but de celluloid."—Woman's Home Companion.

A Unique Comment.

An illiterate Irishman had just been convicted of cold blooded murder, and the death sentence was about to be pronounced upon him. All through the trial he had shown little interest in what had been going on, had not seemed to realize any of the proceedings and had not opened his mouth to any one but his counsel.

To pass sentence upon him the court ordered him to stand. He stood, blinking at those around him.

"Have you anything to say," droned the judge impressively, "why the sentence of death should not be pronounced upon you at this time?"

Whereupon the Irishman whispered to his counsel, who was standing by:

"Ain't he th' gloomy divil?"

Killed His Testimony.

Early in his career Sir John Simon was counsel for the defense in a case which turned upon the identification of the prisoner. The day before the trial Sir John entered a small shop and asked for a packet of pins. "We don't sell them," said the tradesman. "Go to So-and-so's." The next day the tradesman appeared as a witness and swore to the identity of the prisoner. "Do you always remember faces?" asked Sir John. "Always," said the witness stoutly. "Have you ever seen me before?" "Never," said the witness. "Would it surprise you to learn that I entered your shop yesterday and asked for a packet of pins?" The witness collapsed, and the case was won.—London Ideas.

Conquering the Atlantic.

Whether the ocean traveler is rich or poor, he can no more realize the contrast between his experience and that of the first men who crossed the Atlantic than the tourist gliding over a storm swept moor in a closed motor-car can feel the misery of a tramp staggering over it in open rags. The Atlantic is as cruel as ever—a treacherous, gloomy and violent sea—but so completely is it baffled and shut out, so smoothly ridden over, that the old traveler, hardly conscious of its being, is half inclined to think its character reformed. What higher praise can be given and what less praise is due to our modern shipbuilders? — London Times.

The Sea Otter's Cabbage.

Off the Alaskan coast and among the Aleutian islands grows a great brown seaweed called the sea otter's cabbage. On the surface of the water floats a barrel shaped air vessel six or seven feet long, from which grows a mass of foliage consisting of forty or fifty great fronds, each one of which may be from thirty to fifty feet in length. Upon the air vessel the sea otter lurks while it pursues its vocation of fishing for a living. The whole floating mass is anchored by a slender cordlike stalk that is attached to the rocks far below. This anchor line often exceeds 300 feet in length and is so strong and slender that sections of it are cured and used by the Aleutian islanders as fishing lines.

Dead Game.

Bricklayer (to mate who had just had a hodful of bricks fall on his feet)—Dropt 'em on yer toe? That's nothin'. Why, I seen a bloke get killed stone dead an' 'e never made such a bloomin' fuss as you're doin'.—London Tit-Bits.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES.

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Plainfield women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Back ache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy aprpoache of gravel, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used. Here's proof of their merit in a Plainfield woman's words:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "You may continue to publish my endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills which I gave in August, 1905. I endured much misery from backache which was caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and when I arose in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain in my back always made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians but their medicine did not help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store, that I had any hope of getting rid of my trouble. This preparation made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since. I use Doan's Kidney Pills once in awhile, however, and they keep my kidneys in good working order."

Know His Man.

George Bubb, better known as Bubb Doddington, one of the wits of the eighteenth century, always dined well and always liked to doze after the repast. Falling asleep one day after dinner with Sir Richard Temple and Lord Cobham, the latter reproached Doddington with his drowsiness. Doddington denied having been asleep and to prove he had not offered to repeat all Lord Cobham had been saying. Cobham challenged him to do so. Doddington repeated a story, and Lord Cobham owned he had been telling it. "Well," said Doddington, "and yet I did not hear a word of it, but I went to sleep because I knew that about this time of the day you would tell that story."

A Seat in Parliament.

Lord Chesterfield in 1767 lamented the increased price of seats in the British parliament. There was a boom in trade, and prices went up. Chesterfield was ambitious for his son, and when Chatham's promise of a seat came to nothing he went marketing. And he failed to find a single bargain. "I spoke to a borough jobber," he wrote to his son, "and offered five and twenty hundred pounds for a secure seat in parliament, but he laughed at my offer and said there was no such thing as a borough to be had now, for the rich East and West Indians had secured them all at the rate of £3,000 at least, but many at £4,000 and two or three that he knew at £5,000. This, I confess, has vexed me a good deal."

The Wild Camel of Spain.

Who would imagine that there are wild camels in Spain, and in a part of Spain which is flooded during a great part of the year? Yet the thing is vouched for by the authors of "Unexplored Spain." The explanation is that "the animals were introduced to Spain in 1829 by the Marquis of Villafranca, with the object of employing them in transport and agriculture, as they are commonly used on the opposite shores of Africa. But local difficulties ensued, chiefly arising from the intense fear and repugnance of horses toward camels, which resulted in numerous accidents, and eventually the bactrians were set free in the marisma, where in they have since lived at large and bred under wholly wild conditions."

Antiquity of Tobacco.

Le Tabac informs us that the idea that tobacco has only been known in Europe since the discovery of America is incorrect. In fact, the Medes and Persians a long time before our era smoked narghiles, as ancient sculptures prove. A philologist has suggested that the Greeks and Romans smoked tobacco, at least in their colonies. In the Malay archipelago the use of cigars and cigarettes is said to date much further back than the discovery of America. Le Tabac further says that the word cigar seems to show that tobacco did not originate in the West Indies, but is most likely derived from sakara, an Arab word meaning smoke.

Wood In Egyptian Stonework.

Probably the oldest timber in the world which has been subjected to the use of man is that found in the ancient temples of Egypt in connection with the stonework, which is known to be at least 4,000 years old. This, the only wood used in the construction of the temples, is in the form of ties holding the end of one stone to another. When two blocks were laid in place an excavation about an inch deep was made in each block, in which a tie shaped like an hourglass is driven. It is therefore very difficult to force any stone from its position.

The Sea a Deceiver.

Like the land, the sea has its flowers, but the most brilliant of the marine flowers bloom not upon plants, but upon animals. The living corals of tropical seas present a display of floral beauty that in richness and vividness of color and variety and grace of form rivals the splendor of a garden of flowers. The resemblance to vegetal blossoms is so complete that some persons find it difficult to believe that the brilliant display contains no element of plant life, but is wholly animal in its organization. — Pittsburg Dispatch.

Stood the Test.

The hour was 1 a. m.

Inside the dimly lighted hallway stood Mrs. Dorkins, with a grim smile on her face.

The front door was bolted.

"John," she said in cutting accents, "you have been dissipating at the club again."

"Maria," spoke a voice outside rapidly, clearly and distinctly, "he blew lugubriously on the blooming bugle!"

Instantly she unfastened and opened the door.

Mr. Dorkins had not been dissipating.—Chicago Tribune.

Not Like His Brother.

Lord North disliked music, but in spite of this King George III. tried on one occasion to persuade him to attend a series of concerts that were being held under his majesty's patronage; but, no—Lord North refused to go. With all respect to his majesty, he declined most emphatically.

"But," protested the king, "your brother, the bishop, never misses one of them."

"Sir," North retorted, "if I were as deaf as my brother, the bishop, I would never miss one of them either."

Absentminded.

"Butterfinger is awfully absentminded."

"What is his latest?"

"He was driving a nail and hammered his thumb. He howled and put the nail in his mouth and tried to fling his thumb on the floor."

The Olive Tree.

It is said that under favorable conditions the olive tree lives to be over 4,000 years old.

TWO MEN SLIGHTLY INJURED IN RUNAWAY.

Superintendent George Andrews, of the Public Service electric light department, and Edward Schorb, an employe, were slightly injured in a runaway accident in the Netherwood district, this morning. The horse attached to a runabout in which they were seated took fright at an automobile at East Seventh street and Lebile at East Seventh street and Ledash. It struck a heap of dirt at the corner as it turned into Seventh street and both men were thrown out. Andrews received a hard blow on the knees and Schorb landed on his face, sustaining several severe cuts and contusions. They were taken home in a cab. Mr. Andrews was able to be at his office this afternoon but was feeling very sore because of bad bruises.

The horse continued down Seventh street and overturned the runabout at Woodland avenue. It was caught directly afterward by Joseph Manhattan. The rig was slightly damaged.

MAY'S MAIL TOTALS OVER 846,000 PIECES

The employes of the local postoffice, in accordance with instructions from Washington given to all Postmasters, have completed their count of all mail handled at the office from May 1 to 31, and the figures tell an interesting story as regards to the great amount of business transacted here. The total number of pieces of mail handled during the thirty-one days was 846-360, and when it is considered that all this mail was handled at least twice and in many cases more times, one can get an idea of the amount of work required.

The total number of pieces of mail sent out of town from the local office was 30,827, while the total number of pieces of mail received at the office for delivery was 515,533. The total number of pieces of mail collected from the letter-boxes was 165,289 and the total number of pieces of mail delivered by letter-carriers was 439,909.

While all of the employes were engaged in this work, the task of compiling the figures and tabulating them developed upon Ernest A. Millard and he found it no easy job. The report also contains the number of minutes required to handle all this mass of mail. The report was complete today and will be sent at once to Washington.

Baltimore, June 7.—With President Taft, former President Roosevelt, Vice-President Sherman, Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court, Governor Crothers and hundreds of men prominent in every walk of life present, the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood of Cardinal Gibbons was celebrated here yesterday.

It is a dual observance, this being also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the elevation of the guest of honor to the cardinalate.

Cardinal Gibbons offered a mass of thanksgiving yesterday morning at the cathedral, the services being attended by a number of intimate clerical and lay friends and relatives. The more formal part of the celebration was held at the Fifth Regiment Armory yesterday afternoon, where the public reception took place, with Governor Crothers presiding.

After the reception at the armory in the afternoon, Mayor Preston entertained the cardinal in his house at dinner. Other guests were Vice-President Sherman, Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court, Ambassador James Bryce, of Great Britain; Senator Elihu Root, Speaker Champ Clark. Members of the Cabinet MacVeagh and Nabel; Senators Bacon, of Georgia; Foster, of Louisiana; Penrose, of Pennsylvania; Martine, of New Jersey; Taylor, of Tennessee; Cummins, of Iowa; Du Pont, of Delaware; Gallinger, of New Hampshire; Guggenheim, of Colorado; LaFollette, of Wisconsin; Brown, of Nebraska; Newlands, of Nevada; John Sharp Williams, of Texas; O'Gorman, of New York, and Senators Rayner and Smith, of Maryland; Secretary of the Senate Bennett, Governor Crothers and Representatives Underwood and Mann.

President Taft was not able to attend the dinner, owing to a previous engagement.

Mrs. William Sayres.

Word has been received from Detroit, Mich, of the death of Mrs. William Sayres, a former teacher in the Plainfield High School. To the older graduates Mrs. Sayres will be remembered as Miss Anna Stevens and her enabling influence and efficiency as a teacher have left a lasting memorial to her. Mrs. Sayres taught the sophomore class from 1874 to 1882, after which she was sent to China as a missionary, where she married the Rev. William Sayres. After years of faithful service she with her husband and children returned to this country and has resided in Detroit, Mich. Besides her husband, four sons and one daughter survive her.

President's Son Guest.

F. B. Newell, general export agent of the Washburn, Crosby Co., has returned to his home on West Seventh street, from a three weeks' business trip to Cuba, Porto Rico and San Domingo. Mr. and Mrs. Newell will entertain at dinner Friday night Senors Barraque and Gomez, the latter the son of President Gomez, of Cuba, who is enroute for the coronation ceremonies of King Edward. He is one of the three Cuban representatives.

MISS EDNA CORIELL NOW MISS P. F. PARK

Miss Edna Coriell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Coriell, of Dunellen, and Philo Francis Park, of Chatham, N. Y., were married at the home of the bride's parents on Front street, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Ernest R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church and was witnessed by a gathering of fifty relatives and friends. The guests came from Plainfield, Orange, Bound Brook, Eatontown and Chatham.

A bay window of the parlor was the scene of the nuptial event and it was graced with palms, ferns and cut flowers in a combination of green and white. The same color scheme was maintained in the decorations throughout as arranged by Wadley, of Plainfield. Miss Anna Ace, of Stroudsburg, Pa., was maid of honor and Abner S. Coriell, brother of the bride, was best man. The Lohengrin wedding march was played by Morton H. Tank, of Chatham, as the bridal party entered the room. Miss Coriell was given away by her father.

Miss Coriell's gown was of white marquisette over white satin. She carried a bouquet of bride roses, gardenias and lillies-of-the-valley. The maid of honor wore pink silk nulle over pink satin. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The ceremony was followed by a reception which afforded the guests an opportunity to extend congratulations, supper was served in conclusion. Mr. and Mrs. Park left in the evening for an extended tour and on returning will make their home in Bound Brook where the groom is employed. Mrs. Park is one of Dunellen's best known young women and also has a wide acquaintance in this city. She received a large number of very handsome presents, the collection including silverware, cut glass, bric-a-brac and furniture.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF DISTRICT COURT

Today marks the fifth anniversary of the District court and the number of cases dispised of there long ago justified its existance. The court was opened June 12, 1906, Judge William Newcorn presiding over its sessions since that time. It is the general opinion among lawyers who practice in this court that the rulings have been manifesly fair and it it also said to be a matter of considerable pride that few appeals have been taken.

Horace G. Adams, as clerk of the court, has also rendered efficient service throughout the five years, keeping a complete record of all cases in a way that has reflected credit upon his ability. Judge Newcorn's term as Judge will expire this year, and it is expected that Governor Wilson will name a Democrat for the position.

PLAN INSTALLATION SERVICES FOR REV. E. C. CONOVER.

Change Date for Annual Meeting

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church, at a business meeting last night, decided to change the date for the annual meeting and election from the second Wednesday in October to the second Wednesday in April, which will bring the meeting at the close of the fiscal year. This is usually the time for the holding of such meetings in other churches. The other business of the evening was of a routine nature.

Miss Arnold, the Principal Toasted—Pleasing Program of Speeches—Officers of Association Elected for the Year.

The alumnae luncheon was held at The Seminary, yesterday afternoon, with 115 graduates present. The rooms were decorated artistically with oak leaves and peonies, forming a background for the tables which were decorated with large baskets of roses and ferns. Mrs. Leighton Calkins, who introduced the speakers, compared The Seminary to King George's domain, for as the sun does not set on his possessions, neither does it set on the graduates of The Seminary, who are in Turkey, the Philippines, Japan, England, Canada and Western United States.

The next speaker, principal emeritus and beloved honorary member of the association, Miss Kenyon, was greeted with wild enthusiasm. In her address, Miss Kenyon welcomed back her youngest graduate of the day before, her oldest graduate of forty-one years ago, not forgetting those who intervened. Miss Kenyon touched on the mental and physical progress the world has made and the pride she felt in the many Seminary girls who have entered practically all fields of work and won distinction and success. At the end of Miss Kenyon's speech, all standing, drank her health and gave three rousing cheers.

Six girls sang, "Roses Blow," written by Miss Kenyon for the graduating class of 1891. Then followed a greeting by the absent members written at their request by Miss Mabelle Phillips and delivered by Mrs. Laurens H. VanBuren. Miss Jean Wharton read to the association a "wail from the non-elect." written by the Class of 1912, who are not yet eligible. Miss Edith Griscom spoke for the alumni association, followed bw Mrs. Richard Duyckinck, whose utterances convulsed hearers.

The last speech was by Mrs. James E. Kimball, whose toast, "The Seminary," told of the deep love and respect the old pupils felt for the school and the faculty. When the speech-making was over, Mrs. Eugene LaTourette proposed a toast to her classmate, Miss Arnold, the present principal of The Seminary, in whom she took a just pride. Great credit is due for the success of the affair to Mrs. Laurens H. VanBuren, chairman of the luncheon committee.

Mrs. Daniel Runkle was chairman of the decorating committee, assisted by Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Elvere Kenyon. Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard had charge of the dressing rooms, assisted by Mrs. Frank Clark. Miss Margaret Leal arranged the speeches and the committee on seating comprised Mrs. Eugene Hatch and Miss Arnold, assisted by Miss Alice Titus.

Wadley supplied the baskets of flowers and donated many of the flowers. At the speakers' table sat Miss Kenyon, Miss Arnold, Mrs. Leighton Calkins, as toastmaster; Mrs. Laurens H. VanBuren, Mrs. Charles Smith, one of the oldest graduates, Miss Jean Wharton, the youngest graduate and Miss Florence Stuart. The officers of the association are as follows:

President, Mrs. Leighton Calkins; first vice-president, Miss Florence Stuart; second vice-president, Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard; treasurer, Mrs. W. S. Tyler; secretary, Miss Edith Griscom.

MISS MARIE MOFFETT PERITONITIS VICTIM.

Miss Marie Moffett, aged fifteen years, daughter of Mrs. Maud Moffett and the late William E. Moffett, of Elmwood place, died yesterday afternoon at Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation for peritonitis. The young woman was taken ill about a week ago and her condition was such yesterday that she was hurried to the hospital in the hope that prompt treatment might save her life. Her condition was found to be too serious and she passed away soon afterwards.

Miss Moffett was an exceptionally bright young woman and her death is a severe loss to a widowed mother. For sometime she had been employed in one of the local stores as a saleswoman. The funeral will be held at the late home, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

EDWARD B. VOORHEES' FUNERAL TOMORROW

Arrangements were made yesterday afternoon for the funeral of Dr. Edward Burnett Voorhees, director of the New Jersey State Experiment Station and professor of agriculture in Rutgers College, who died Tuesday night. It will be held at the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. President William H S. Demarest, of Rutgers College, will preside at the services and deliver the address. The Rev. Dr. J. Preston Searle, of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, will offer a prayer. The Rev. Dr. John A. Ingham, pastor of the church, will have charge of the rest of the services.

A meeting of the faculty of Rutgers College has been called for today to take action on and to arrange to attend the funeral. Professor Demarest announced the death to the student body yesterday and said that the loss to the college and to the State was a very heavy one.

During Mr. Voorhees' illness Dr. Jacob G. Lipman has been acting director and he will most likely now be installed permanently in that position.

Mrs. Melissa Noel Injured.

Mrs. Melissa Noel, aged fifty-five, years, of 26 Duer street, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon, suffering from injuries received by falling down stairs at her home. It was thought that she had broken some bones, but two X-ray examinations has failed to show this to be the case. However, another X-ray test will be made this afternoon. Mrs. Noel slipped while descending the stairs and fell a distance of about ten feet, landing on her side. She received a number of bruises from the fall.

Came Back for More.

Andrew Johnson was fined $3 in the borough court this morning on a charge of drunkenness. He was before Recorder Dolliver on the same charge yesterday morning and was released on suspended sentence but immediately went out and tanked up again. He was gathered in last night much the worse for wear.

LIBRARY GROWING

Annual Report Shows There Are 44,714 Volumes in Public Institution.

FICTION IS MOST POPULAR.

Two Endowed Departments—Year's Total Circulation 77,863—Each Book Has Been Read Twice at Least.

By the annual report of the Board of Directors of the Public Library presented at the annual meeting, the year just closed has been the most active since the library's founding in 1881. There are 44,714 volumes, 36,416 of which are circulating, and by the total yearly circulation figures, 77,863, exceeding last year by 8,237 volumes. Each book available for circulation has gone out 2 plus times. From the yearly satistical tables the three most used departments by adults are fiction, fine arts and literature, while the young people desire fiction, history and travel.

While the Library maintains no established branches it circulates books to the public through other sources than the main building. At the five public school deposit stations 3,923 books circulated, 846 at the Potter Printing Press works, and 481 at the Jefferson public school station which is maintained for the accommodation of anyone living in the West End and through the courtesy of the Plainfield Board of Education the school building is open every Friday evening. The week-day evening circulation of books from the main building is proving to be an appraciated accommodation and as the new hours are realized more fully an increase in evening circulation, especially during the summer months, will result.

The Public Library is fortunate in having two splendidly endowed departments, the Babcock Scientific Library numbering 8,933 volumes, from which 2,104 volumes circulated during the year. Many of the Babcock purchases are Scientific journals and transactions and proceedings of scientific societies which make this department one of the strongest scientifically in the State

The Mason W. Tyler department of American started about two years ago now has 614 volumes of valuable histories, biographies, works of our celebrated statesmen, etc., and already this department is being appreciated, and before many years will make our library prominent along these lines. The circulating department of music scores, vocal scores of the operas, songs, etc., has been largely drawn upon by music lovers, 2,698 volumes having been distributed. A year ago the library printed a complete catalog of the department, copies of which are free for distribution.

A special feature during the past year were the bulletins worked up for the special day celebrations at the public schools and those outlining the library's material for courses of study for different city clubs. Through the courtesy of The Daily Press and Courier-News lists of the monthly additions have appeared from time to time in the local papers. With the prospects of a new building made possible by the gift of $50,000 from Andrew Carnegie, better accommodations, not only for reference and reading room use, but for the housing of the books will result and patrons will in every way have better service.

Royal Council Nominates.

Royal Council, No. 77, O. U. A. M. held an important meeting in the rooms in Junior Hall last night. Officers were nominated for election on June 21 and considerable rivalry resulted. Arrangements were made for a "ladies" night on July 5, the Good and Welfare committee being instructed to arrange a suitable program. Games and other amusements were enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

Change of Venue Not Granted.

The petition of Harvey Thomas, editor and the Atlantic City Review Company, of Atlantic City, for a change of venue from Atlantic county for trial of the indictments found against them for liable in connection with the recent election there, was denied yesterday at Trenton, in an opinion filed in the Supreme Court.

Court Vacation Dates.

Judge William Newcorn at today's session of the District Court, announced the summer vacation dates for the court as follows: July 13 and 27; August 10, 24, 31 and September 14. Judgment was given in three minor cases this morning and several cases were put over.

The party will go first to Wilkes-Barre, where they will remain until tomorrow morning. They will reach Wilkes-Barre about 2 o'clock this afternoon and will then make an inspection of several mines. They will be entertained tonight by the mine operators at the above place. Tomorrow morning they will go to Mauch Chunk and visit the mines there and be entertained at dinner by the mnie operators, returning in time to reach Plainfield about 6 o'clock tomorrow night. MEADOWVIEW KENNELS WINNING MORE HONORS

The annual dog show under the auspices of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America, which closed at Mineola, last night, was perhaps the largest and most successful in its history. This show is considered the blue ribbon event of the country. As the entrance fee is the highest, the class of dogs shown were the best. There were about one thousand dogs exhibited.

At this show the Meadowview Kennels, owned by A. G. Hooley, were again at the front, winning reserve winners in dogs and winners and reserve winners in bitches, as well as several first prizes; also the team and brace class, there being five braces in competition, as well as the special prize offered by the Ladies' Kennel Association of America for the best team of English setters in the show. Although it rained throughout the show the attendance was unprecedented there being at least 200 automobiles on the grounds yesterday.

"SALTAIRE" ATTRACTIVE SPOT NEAR BAY SHORE.

"Saltaire," an attractive tract of land which adjoins Fire Island State Park, which is opposite Bay Shore, is being developed by the Fire Island Beach Development Company, William Winans Moore & Co., being the owners. Mr. Moore is a resident of this city, where he is well-known. Attention is called to the advertisement of the company in this issue on page eight.

The company is developing a tract comprising about 250 acres or five thousand lots, situated one mile east of the Fire Island Light House and less than one-half mile from New York State Park. It is directly opposite Bay Shore, which is one hour from the Pennsylvania Terminal. The tract is especially adapted for bungalow improvement, being highly restricted and entirely co-operative, furnishing a resort far enough away from New York city and yet near enough to reach it easily.

Persons interested in this excellent proposition are advised to communicate with William Winans Moore & Company, Marbridge Building, Broadway and 34th street. Downtown office, 115 Broadway, suite 1411, 'phone 62 Cortlandt.

Wireless Association to Meet.

The Plainfield Wireless Association will meet at the Y. M. C. A., tomorrow night, to elect a secretary and a trustee. The former secretary, Charles G. August, recently removed to Philadelphia. All the members are urged to attend.

HUNT FOR ASSETS

Stockholders Investigating the National Mining and Leasing Company Affairs.

MAYOR MOY AS CHAIRMAN.

Middlekauff's Concern Paid Big Dividends and Those Interested Gather Here to See What Shape Finances Are In.

The directors and stockholders of the National Mining and Leasing Company held a meeting this afternoon in the district court chamber, City building, to ascertain in what shape E. D. Middlekauff, who was killed in an auto accident on May 15, left the concern's affairs. Just where the assets are and what they amount to will be the chief matter for consideration. Most of the stock was disposed of by Middlekauff in New Jersey and the farmers in Hunterdon and Warren counties are said to be the principal holders.

Since the concern was incorporated in 1907, it has been paying large dividends. Middlekauff said that these dividends represented the earnings of the company's property in the west. For two years at least, it is reported, the stockholders have been getting the unusually high dividene of eighteen per cent. per annum, generally paying in monthly installments. From March 1, 1907 to January 1, 1911, it is reported that the dividends aggregated $37,000.

The National Mining and Leasing Company, in which Middlekauff was the chief figure, is said to be a holding comjany for the following concerns: The Window Mountain Copper Mining Company, Luna county, New Mexico; the Jersey Bell Copper Mining Company, Grant county, New Mexico; the Cathleen Mining Company, Arkansas; the Joplin Reduction Company, Joplin, Mo.; the Wyoming Oil and Development Company, Wyoming.

Mayor George W. V. Moy, holding the proxy for some stockholders, was chosen to be chairman at the meeting this afternoon. There were other lawyers present in similar capacity as well as some fifty stockholders from Hunterdon, Warren and other counties. The minutes of all the meetings of directors since the company was form in 1907 were ordered read and this proceeding consumed an hour's time. Jasper Cadmus was the first one called to tell about the company's affairs. He stated that he is acting president, having succeeded temporarily a Mr. Fisher, of New York, who resigned about a year or so ago. Mr. Moy asked him many questions as to the finances of the enterprise.

PROTESTING AGAINST BOATING PROHIBITION.

A large delegation of citizens attended the monthly meeting of the Piscataway township committee at New Market last evening, to protest against the action of the Middlesex Water Company, in prohibiting boating and fishing on Spring Lake. It is the contention that this is public property and that the company's rights have ceased inasmuch as they have stopped operating the grist mill. The matter was referred to the township counsel, W. A. Coddington. Judge William E. Smith and Phillip Smith have been served with papers to appear before Vice-Chancellor Howell at Newark and show cause as to why they are using Spring Lake.

MISS EDITH VAN DYKE BRIDE OF NELSON WILEY.

Miss Edith A. Van Dyke, of Linden avenue, and Nelson J. Wiley, of East Fifth street, were married last night at the parsonage of Grace M. E. church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles C. Caine, the pastor, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Lowrie, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, acted as attendants. A reception followed at Mr. and Mrs. Lowrie's home on Linden avenue.

Mr. Wiley is an employe at the local office of the U. S. Express Co. and both he and his bride have many friends in both the city and borough. They will make their home in North Plainfield.

A Sunday School Meeting.

A meeting in the interest of Sunday school work was held in Grace M. E. church last night. Mrs. F. J. Miller, of Somerville, gave a talk on Sunday School work in general, and James E. Church, of the borough, spoke on the organization of adult Bible classes. The attendance was large considering the weather.

Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs—

TIZ Cured Her Quick.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

President Taft will today review the parade of Sunday-school children in Brooklyn.

Commissioner Lederle came out in favor of securing more seaside parks in New York.

Mayor Gaynor welcomed the Cottonseed Crushers' Convention delegates to New York city.

W. E. D. Stokes, owner of the Ansonia, New York, was shot by two women in their apartment.

Nearly fifteen hundred students received diplomas at the commencement exercises of Columbia University, New York.

The report on subways will not be ready today, but will be considered at a special meeting of the Board of Estimate, of New York, on Monday.

The steamship and banana monopolies in Nicaragua were reported smashed, independent lines and an open market being now in full operation.

Richard Parr was sued for $25,000 reward by a lawyer for services in getting the $100,000 reward for the man who revealed the sugar fraud.

Maurice Rouvier, twice Prime Minister of France and one of the foremost French authorities on public finances, died at the age of sixty-nine years.

Germany again warned France to respect the sovereignty of Morocco and pointed out the danger of following a militarist policy against the Moorish government.

James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, accompanied the Detroit Board of Commerce on its annual cruise of Michigan ports, termed the "reciprocity cruise" this year.

The Bronx won the borough prize in the parade of the Street Cleaning Department, which was reviewed by the Mayor, Commissioner Edwards and other officials of New York.

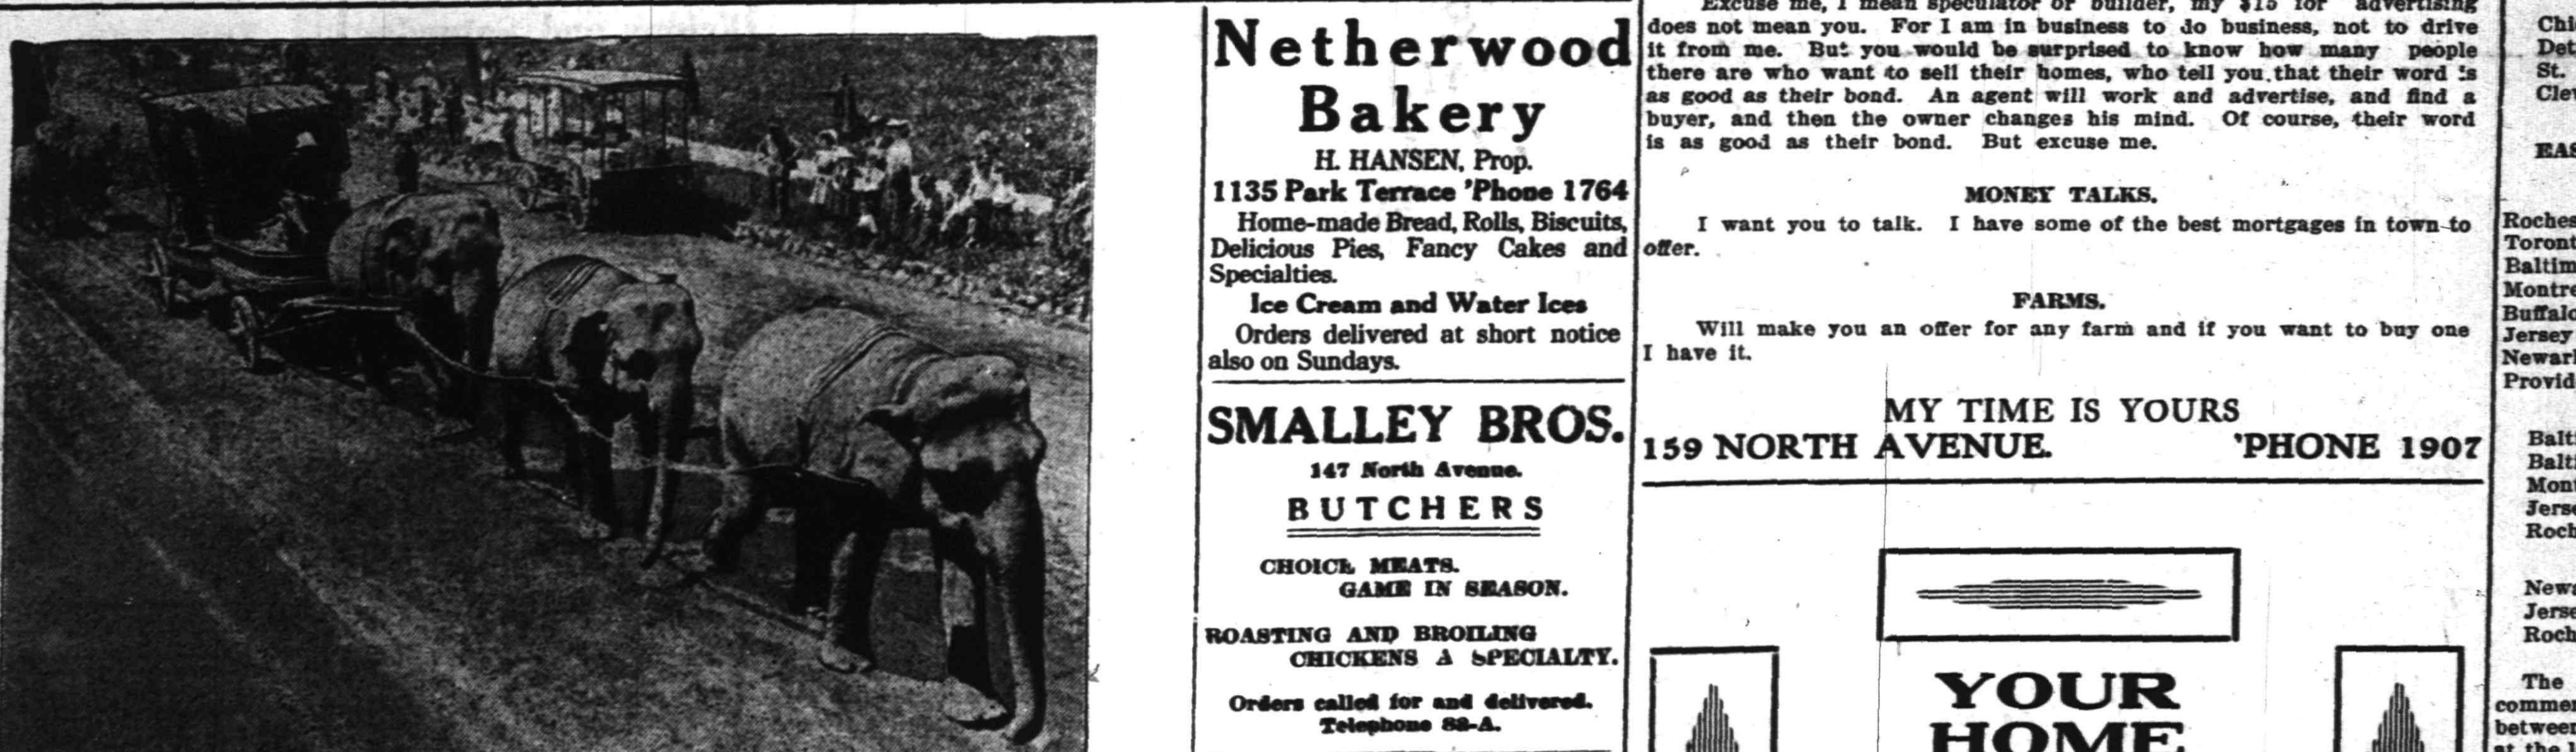
The Clinton Twice-a-Week, in commenting on the baseball game between High Bridge and Westfield at the latter place, on Saturday says:

"Every man in Westfield must have a horseshoe around his neck and his pockets filled with rabbits feet, for everything in the luck line went their way on Saturday, while it looked as though the High Bridgers could not win unless every man on the Westfield team dropped dead. Blackwell pitched a great game and should have won under ordinary circumstances. Only four hits were secured off him and only one of these went outside the diamond, the others being bunts which could not be fielded in time on the slow muddy diamond."

The same newspaper also contains the following item of interest to Plainfield fans: "There will not be much kicking on the umpires in the league. Dalley was on the dead level."

Hopatcong Trolley Service.
Morristown, June 8.—A half-hour trolley service between Morristown and Lake Hopatcong started today. Hitherto passengers have been obliged to go to Dover and wait for a car to the lake. The cars for Hopatcong will start from the park in Morristown quarter of and quarter after each hour. The small car between the park and the depot will run on the same schedule as before, as will the car between Morris Plains and the State capital. Eight cars will be put in service between Morristown and Lake Hoptacong.

Max Neumann, of Spooner avenue, leaves tomorrow for Bremen on the Steamship George Washington, of the North German Lloyd Line, having secured passage through the agency of Mulford Estil, of Park avenue.



The Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Circus Parade.

FOREPAUGH & SELLS BIG CIRCUS HERE TOMORROW.

One can gain an idea of the immensity of the Adam Forepaugh & Sells Brothers United Shows by the amount of paraphernalia carried. It takes railroad cars of the combined length of two and three-quarters miles to transport it. The main tent has a seating capacity of 11,000 people. Sixteen chefs prepare every day 2,600 meals for the people. It takes 20 tons of hay to feed the horses and elephants for one day, while eight hindquarters and four forequarters of fresh beef are consumed by the animals and people. Over 1,500 people are on the payroll, while about 1,600 are directly or indirectly dependent on the show for a livelihood. The menagerie contains many dens and cages of rare wild animals. The circus performance is given in three rings, on two elevated stages, together with the lengthy "runs" for the automobile Double Somersault Thriller.

The trained animals are more than a circus in themselves. The menagerie is a complete collection brought together from the jungles and everglades of remote corners of the world.

The parade will leave the show grounds about 10 o'clock tomorrow morning and will pass through the principal streets. The afternoon performance will commence at 2 o'clock sharp, and the night show at 8. The doors open for the inspection of the menagerie one hour earlier. There is naught left of the older Forepaugh and Sells Brothers shows. 1911 finds nothing but the name or title left and a $3,000,000 circus rebuilt around same. Tomorrow will be "Circus Day," in Plainfield. Downtown ticket office will be at Schreiner Bros.' drug store, corner Park avenue and West Second street.

DRUGGISTS CONVENE AT SHORE NEXT WEEK

Then will follow in order credentials, reception of delegates, reception of officers of Traveling Men's Auxiliary, reports from the secretary, treasurer, membership committee, secretary of the board of pharmacy, treasurer of the board of pharmacy, publication and nominating committees, committee on place of meeting and the committee on publications. This will conclude the morning session.

In the afternoon there will be reports as follows: Membership committee, delegates and queries. The reading and discussion of papers and the report of the trade interest committee will come next.

Thursday morning will be taken up with hearing reports from the legislative committee. That afternoon more reports will be in order. They will be received from the historian, committee on memorials, committee on United States pharmacopia, committee on adulterations and the committee on propaganda.

On Friday, the order of business will be as follows: Report of committee on membership of the A. Ph. A., report of the committee on president's address, report of the committee for place of meeting in 1912, report of the executive committee, election of new members, miscellaneous business, report of nominating committee, election and installation of officers and the appointment of delegates and local committees by the newly elected president.

The local committee in charge of the arrangements is made up of Bloomfield Hulick, S. D. Woolley, J. F. Davidson, W. H. Farley, F. F. Coleman, Charles J. Black and W. Pitt Rich.

The entertainment provided for the druggists consists of a bowling match for the women, an automobile ride over the famous Rumson road, a boat ride on Deal lake and a concert by Creatore's band in the Beach Casino.

Mrs. Harry Goeller, of Pittsburg, Pa., is visiting Mr. Goeller's mother, Mrs. Henry Bergen, of Arlington avenue.

SUMMIT AND MILBURN TO BUILD SEWER SOON

Summit, June 8.—Plans were filed for the sewer line to be constructed jointly by this city and Milburn Township in the Morris turnpike, and a resolution was passed authorizing the giving of notice that the work is to be done at Tuesday night's meeting of the Common Council.

The cost to this city for the building of the sewer, which is to benefit the northeasterly section of this city and the Brantwood section of Milburn, is estimated at $13,500.

Ordinances providing for the construction of sidewalks on both sides of Park avenue, between Orchard street and Springfield avenue; the sidewalk in Ashwood avenue, and the macadamizing of South street and the construction of sidewalks therein were adopted.

A contract for the construction of the Fernwood road sidewalk was awarded to Michael Garafano, of this city, for $1,097.50. An ordinance was also adopted providing for the building of the sewer system in the west section of the city.

It had been expected that the yearly appropriations for the city would be passed on, but the committees of Council were unable to get the budget in shape. The certificate from the Board of School Eesimate for a bond issue of $80,000 for the erection and furnishing of Brayton School was received and referred to the finance committee.

Prior to the meeting the members held a conference with O. G. Schultz, of the Morris County Traction Company. It is understood the councilmen insist on a definite proposition being submitted relative to the route of the line from Maple street to the boundary line between this city and Chatham before action in condemnation proceedings is taken by the city.

The traction company desires to build its line in Summit avenue, between Park avenue and Springfield avenue, and along the Boulevard to Morris avenue. Many business men along Springfield avenue want the trolley in this thoroughfare, but the residents of the Boulevard oppose a franchise for this route.

Mayor Vreeland and the members of the Council are, it is understood, opposed to this route and will insist on the line being built from Maple street, in Park avenue, to Morris avenue and thence to the city line.

ASK $10,000 MORE FOR COUNTY'S ROADS

The county roads committee of the Union county Board of Freeholders, accompanied by County Engineer Bauer, went to Trenton Tuesday morning and called upon State Road Commissioner Stevens in an effort to have the county's apportionment of the State automobile fund increased $10,000. While the committee returned without a decided answer from Col. Stevens it is very likely, nevertheless, that the desired increase will be given this county.

The committee informed Col Stevens, as a reason for the extra appropriation that is contemplates improving St. George avenue, from Summit street to Grand stree, Rahway, with amiesite and that as such improvement had not been provided for in the regular appropriation by the freeholders it would be necessary to get the money from the State. This stretch of roadway is one and onehalf miles in length, and the proposed work will cost about $14,000.

Col. Stevens told the committeemen that the State automobile fund will be greater than it first expected on account of the provisions in the law regarding Pennsylvania and Delaware autoists. The six-day license provision had been eliminated as regarding these States and autoists must get out new licenses if they wish to travel in New Jersey. This will give this State more money. The committee was told that Union county might get some of the increase and that possibly it will be given the $10,000 which is needed here.

A the last meeting of the Board of Freeholders $53,500 was appropriated for good roads; the State had previously given the county $20,000 from the automobile fund. This placed the amount of money to be expended upon county roads this year at $73,500, not figuring upon the $10,000 which was asked Tuesday.

Those who went to Trenton were Director Cady, of the Board of Freeholders; Chairman Krouse, of the Road Committee ;Freeholders, Meisel, Smith, Wilbur, Swain and County Engineer Bauer.

Plan Cake and Candy Sale.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, at its monthly meeting, yesterday, decided to hold a cake and candy sale, on Saturday afternoon, June 24, the place to be arranged and announced later. The members are not quite sure as to whether the affair will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle, or the home of another member. At the sale ice cream and strawberries will also be on sale.

LARGEST U. S. FLAG IS MADE IN JERSEY

As an institution for teaching patriotism the Public Library in Jersey City has always had a prominent place. The pamphlet on the "American Flag' consists of eight pages of closely printed information concerning the origin and history of the flag.

The pamphlet opens with a naccount of the flags used in primitive times and among ancient peoples. The oft disputed question as to the origin of the Stars and Stripes is discussed and various explanations are given. The story of Betsy Ross making the first flag is also told, but with the caution that many good authorities question the truth of the tale.

The first time the flag was used appears to have been at the siege of Fort Stanwix, in New York, in August, 1777. The garrison was without a flag, but they improvised one by cutting up their shirts and uniforms and so obtained enough red, white and blue material to make a star-spangled banner.

An account is given of the changes in the number of stripes and stars until 1818, when the present design of thirteen stripes and a star for each State was adopted and is still in force. It is a curious fact that no law has ever been made regarding the arrangement of the stars in the flag.

There is also much information about special flags and signal flags. Under the heading "State Flags" an account is given of the flag and State seal of New Jersey. The part entitled "Flag Legislation" is interesting. It will be a surprise to many to learn that there is no national law to prevent or punish the desecration of our flag.

The custom of flying the flag on schools and other public buildings is comparatively recent. It was not until 1889 that it became general. President Harrison inaugurated the custom of flying the flag every day on all Federal buildings.

Flag Day was first recognized by the schools in New York in 1889, but its general observance seems to have been started by the Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames in 1893. Its celebration is also largely due to the efforts of the American Flag Association organized in 1898.

The library brochure gives an interesting description of flag making at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Under the heading "Some Notable Flags" is described the flag made by Miss Josephine Mulford, of Madison, N. J., said to be the largest ever made. The largest flag ever flown in Jersey City was the Dewey flag, raised September 23, 1899, in Bayside Park.

Mrs. Burdick, wife of Dr. Charles M. Burdick, accompanied by her son, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Smith, of Madison avenue; also her brother, Frank H. Smith, of Sixth street and Madison avenue.

HATBAG FOR TRAVELING.

The season for traveling is once more nearly upon us, and our hats, if not broader, are higher than ever. Of course, you may ask the porter for a paper bag to hold your hat on the train. But how often will it fit?

Try, instead, laying the hat on a sheet of stout brown paper, so as to get the correct size. Then make the paper into a large envelope by gathering the two sides in the middle and pasting them down. Slit up the sides about two inches and turn these down to form the closed ends, but before pasting them cut away the inner part of the turned-up ends and snip the corners to give a neat edge.

Do the same with the top of the bag, but, of course, do not paste down the flap. Sew to each side of the bag cord or plaited twine handles by which to hold the bag. The whole may be folded and tucked in a corner of your suitcase.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance Society will meet as usual Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the church at Craig place and Duer street. Rev. Thomas Francis, of Jersey City, will have charge of the Bible lesson.

MISS WRAY'S TALK ON SAVING SINNERS

One of the most helpful and enthusiastic meetings of the kind held in the city in a long time took place at the Park avenue Baptist church last night, when Miss Sarah Wray, superintendent of the Eighth Avenue Mission in New York, conducted the usual weekly prayer service. The auditorium was filled to its capacity with people of all denominations attracted by the announcement that the great worker and some of her converts would tell of the rescues from sin and degradation too a new life and usefulness. Former City Judge William N. Runyon presided at the piano and the singing by the audience was a feature of the program. The people sang as though they really enjoyed it and not as a matter of form, a fact noted and commented upon by the visitors.

The meeting was presided over by George E. Hall, superintendent of Sunday school, who intraduced Miss Wray to the audience. She selected her text from Hebrews: "He is able to save to the uttermost," and by quoting personal experiences and reminescences illustrated the truth of her theme. Miss Wray was at one time an adjutant in the Salvation Army, a field which brought her in contact with the lowest element of New York's great flotsam and jetsam. No level was too low for some of the unfortunates to sink to, bu the Word of God had been carried to them by means of the mission and they had shaken off fetters to become men in every sense of the word. She impressed upon her hearers that a helping hand at any time may mean the recovery of a lost soul, that a good citizen may devolve from a drink-sodden frame and failure on first attempt does not necessarily mean defeat in redeeming the fallen.

Miss Wray was accompanied by nine of her mission converts who were called upon to testify. They told in a most absorbing manner the stories of their lives, relating the facts without mincing words. Some of them were humorous, others pathetic but all a verification of Miss Wray's text. One of the speakers is now a New York policeman attached to an uptown precinct. When he concluded his address, the mission superintendent said she did not think it would be telling tales out of school to relate an instance which concerned him. She told how some friends of hers went looking for the officer while he was on duty, but not knowing him personally, decided to address the first bluecoat they met in the precinct and ask his name. Soon after they discovered a patrolman with a Bible in his hands expounding the doctrine of Christ to an intoxicated individual who seemed to be greatly affected by this new and entirely original duty of the law's representative. The policeman was the mission's convert.

The Sunday school orchestra, in charge of Arthur Mosher, rendered musical accompaniments and two young women with Miss Wray, the Misses Woldack and Pereira, rendered vocal solos.

GREENBROOK DISTRICT VOTES AGAINST LIGHTS.

The various lighting districts in North Plainfield township held elections Tuesday afternoon for inspectors and appropriations. Greenbrook district voted against any expenditure and as a result there will be no street lights in that section after the present contract expires.

The Scotch Plains district also voted its usual appropriation and elected trustees.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

At the regular monthly meeting of the borough Board of Education, Tuesday night, it was reported that all details had been completed for the commencement exercises on June 15. Superintendent H. C. Krebs, of the North Plainfield School, will make the address and the pupils will provide a program. Two refractory pupils appeared before the board and were given to understand that their deportment would have to be improved. They readily promised to do better.

Michael Moynihan and H. S. Garretson, of the borough, were among those who left this morning on the retail coal dealers excursion to the Wyoming Valley coal fields near Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The delegation numbered fifty in all and the members will be entertained by the mine operators in that section.

The wedding of Miss Mabel I. Hand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Hand, of Orange, to Abner S. Coriell, of the borough, will take place at the home of the former's parents on Thursday, June 22.

The Levering and Garrigues Company has filed an appeal with the State Board of Taxation in its protest against the $50,000 tax assessment imposed by Assessor LaRue, for Piscataway township.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church held the last meeting of the season at Mrs. A. F. Samson's home, Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Anna Ace, of Stroudsburg, Pa., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Craig, of Front street.

Ben Dodwell is able to be about again after an illness of a week.

Paul Brakeley is visiting friends in Baltimore.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF TRINITY'S JR.C.E.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held its closing exercises in the lecture room of the church, yesterday afternoon. There were ninety of the 102 members enrolled present to enjoy the affair. Mrs. Lafayette Rosentiehl, the assistant superintendent, was in charge owing to the absence of Mrs. R. V. Kinney, superintendent, who is detained at home by illness.

The children repeated a portion of the program given at the Chinese supper held recently at the church, including the motion song, and all proved very interesting to Mrs. Gilbert Reid, a returned missionary from China, who addressed the Juniors. Mrs. Reid described the customs and habits of the Chinese people in a delightful manner so that the youngest child present could understand. She also disabused the minds of the children that the Chinese were all a bad lot of people. She explained that there are a great many high-class natives, highly educated and progressive. Mrs. Reid gave encouraging news of the progress of the work to carry the gospel to the Chinese.

In the membership contest between the "blues" and "gold" the latter lost and in consequence was obliged to provide the refreshments for the meeting. Among the interested persons present was Mrs. Cornelius Schenck. The society will not meet again until September.

Three More Elks.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E. conferred the initiatory degree on three candidates at its meeting last night. Former Mayor Lloyd, of Westfield, was elected to membership. The business session was followed by a social and supper.

Ball Game Postponed.

The ball game scheduled to take place yesterday afternoon between the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School teams was postponed because of rain. It will take place Saturday afternoon.

Elect Commissioners.

Thomas Duffy, William Ledden and William Kelly were elected lighting commissioners in District No. 2 last night and the sum of $580 was appropriated for lights for the coming year.

Nelson G. Haas has taken a position as a special representative of the Plainfield Business College. He will be an assistant to Hugh B. Sweeney, the registrar, who is at Muhlenberg Hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Sweeney was doing nicely this morning.

GOVERNOR ADVOCATES RULE BY COMMISSION

Governor Woodrow Wilson was cheered last night in the auditorium of the High School, Bayone, by fifteen hundred men and women when he declared that government by commission is going to be adopted throughout the country and that he believed Bayonne will be the first city in the State to decide for the new order of things.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Government by Commission Association and all political parties and factions were represented. The Governor was accompanied by his secretary, Philip Tumulty, and Senator James E. Fielder. He said: "I have come here tonight because I believe in government by the people.

"For fifteen years I have been interested in this question which you are to vote on next Tusday. Many cities have adopted it, and I have not heard that the people were sorry. Commission government was discovered by force of necessity. I have no patience with political machines and believe they were invented to torment us. We alone are responsible for such machines. Ninety-nine out of one hundred men vote with ignorance as to the ability and character of nine-tenths of the candidates. While we have been electing we have not been selecting, and now we are going to start to select. The intelligent electorate has permitted itself to be fooled. While at Princeton I did not know half the men I voted for and I regularly made a fool and dupe of myself. I have learned there is nothing in that to feel chesty about. Both machines are about the same. You are going to get commission government, and then you will not have one official board working against another.

"While we are a religious people, we have depended altogether too much on Providence. The devil sat up all night to devise the present plan of government for cities, and so arranged it that the people could not tell who was going on or who to hold responsible. It was made as complicated as possible. Neither you nor I can make a machine run the way it was not intended to be run. I want it to be up to somebody in particular to give us good government. The men you elect to office are going to be straight as a gun barrel, and the people will be looking down into the barrel."

The Governor denied that the police or firemen would suffer by commission government, and said they will be free from being made the spoils of office, as they are at present. He said when people are followed about by a spot light they are going to behave. In referring to those opposing commission government, he said:

"I am sorry for those who are sidestepping. I pity cowards and espise liars. I am sorry for the men who are fooling themselves. The people are going to recover their own. I think you in Bayonne are going to have the pleasure of doing this thing first. The American people are sitting up and nobody is going to fool them again. They know the game, and have their guns ready. What dignity is there in holding office and going around like a squirrel in a cage? Under commission government there will be rignity for every man in office, and they will be compelled to give good, clean and honest government. I am for commission government, from one end of the gamut to the other. We have not been voting beyond the surface and merely pricked the bubble, but did not draw blood. You are going to vote for a board of governors and call time on them if they do not do right. You will be in charge of your own business. I have been teaching that the referendum and recall would not work, but the duce of it is they do work. Objections to commission government are very important, only they are not true. We have enough men to man the deck of our ship and we will win."

Truant in Court.

For the second time within a month, Albert Brown, of Duer street, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver, this morning, charged with habitual turancy. His promises to reform have proved worthless and he was released in the custody of his father to appear in the Juvenile Court at Somerville tomorrow morning.

J. Henry Crane Retained.

Antonio Perogino, of Murray Hill, indicted for atrocious assault on Frank Cerelli, of the same place, has retained Counsellor J. H. Crane to defend him. His trial has been set for Thursday, June 22 in the county court at Elizabeth.

TODAY'S DUTY.

Do today's duty, fight today's temptations, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you cannot see and could not understand if you saw them. God gives us nights to shut down the curtain of darkness on our little days. We cannot see beyond. Short horizons make life easier and give us one of the blessed secrets of a brave, true, holy living.

The Romans as Fighters.

The Roman became the greatest soldier in the world simply because he made soldiering his one supreme aim and business. The Romans studied war just as the Greeks studied art, the men of the middle ages theology, the Egyptians the art of agriculture. They despised literature, art, philosophy, commerce and even luxury and set their whole heart on becoming fighters and conquerors. In that way they developed very naturally the genius and means for successful warfare which made them the masters of the world. There was nothing miraculous in the prowess of the legions. It was the natural result of their undivided effort, protracted through generations.—New York American.

Herbert Spencer at the Derby.

Sir Francis Galton met Carlyle twice. On the first occasion, he says, Carlyle surprised him by his "unexpectedly courteous, even polished manner, but he became more like his ordinary self later on. On the second occasion he seemed to me the greatest bore that a country house could tolerate." But Carlyle amused him by gravely hopping up and down in order to keep warm.

Galton was the only man who ever got Herbert Spencer to the Derby. Spencer said that the crowd of men on the grass looked like flies on a plate and that the Derby was just like what he expected it to be.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Sinecure.

One whose admiration for work is so intense that he often thinks of doing some himself was discoursing on how he intended to acquire vast amounts of brawn at the earliest possible moment.

"What are you going to do?" was asked.

"Go right up into the country and get a job as a log chopper," replied the other, just as if he meant it. His friend gazed at him sardonically.

"I'll go right up with you," he said, "and get a job as a log."—New York Times.

He Was Only One.

A soldier who had just enlisted was placed on guard over a cannon. It was not long before he abandoned his post and went to a tavern not far off, where he indulged in the flowing bowl.

"Fellow, why did you abandon your post?" exclaimed the captain, who happened to put in an appearance.

"Captain," was the reply of the incipient son of Mars, "I've tried to lift that cannon, and I'm satisfied no one can carry it away, and if more than one of the enemy comes after it I can't keep them off."

A Product of Peru.

One day in the course of study the teacher had occasion to give a description of the republic of Peru. After describing its natural features, people, commerce, industries, products, etc., he gave his class a test to find how much they remembered of what he had told them. Having received satisfactory replies to a number of his questions, he asked, 'Now, who can tell me what the principal products of Peru are?" Instantly there came from somewhere in the rear of the room the answer "Prunes."—Philadelphia Record.

The Llama.

In Bolivia, one of the highest inhabitated countries on the globe—La Paz, the capital, being 12,000 feet above the sea level—much use is made of that graceful and invaluable pack animal the llama, which will travel farther and with even less food than the burro, but will not carry more than 150 pounds. The llama in some respects resembles the camel, kneeling in camel fashion to receive its load, and it will not rise if more than 150 pounds are placed on its back; moreover, the weight must be evenly distributed over its back and sides.

Pretzels.

Bretzels they are called in Germany, pretzels in this country, though in form and appearance they are just alike. In Germany, as an inquirer was surprised to learn, bretzels or pretzels are sold and eaten soft, fresh baked. Some pretzels are sold in their soft, fresh baked condition in this country, but the great bulk of them are kiln dried sufficiently to make them brittle.—New York Sun.

Glass Cups.

The first glass cups were made at Alexandria. Some were colored like Bohemian glass and decorated with glass pastes, imitating precious stones and cameos. Some were opaline, others clear as crystal and still others formed of opaque layers welded together like the famous Portland vase, in which the white upper layer had been cut away like a cameo, leaving a blue ground around the figures.

What She Was.

Mrs. Ellenbert—Is Mrs. Smith her husband's second wife? Ellenbert—No. Why did you think she was? Mrs. Ellenbert—Why, I have heard several people say he had been married before. Ellenbert—He has been married before, but that doesn't make the present Mrs. Smith his second wife. He has been married twice before.—Chicago News.

A Bit of Savage Warfare.

One of the amenities of savage warfare is mentioned in Major C. G. Bruce's "Twenty Years in the Himalaya." In the old days, when the two tribes were at war, the Hunza men caught the Nagyris at a disadvantage, beat them and took prisoner nearly the whole of their force. Now, they did not want to keep them prisoners and feed them—they had scarcely enough food for themselves—nor did they want to make an end of them, so they just stripped them of arms and clothing and sent them home absolutely in a state of nature. This was considered far more shameful to the Nagyris than if they had all been killed in the fight.

Charles Lamb in British Museum.

The British museum reading room was a favorite resort of Charles Lamb in the days following his retirement from the East India House. "I am going through a course of reading at the museum," he writes to Bernard Barton in 1826, "the Garrick plays, out of part of which I formed my 'Specimens.' I have 2,000 to go through and in a few weeks have dispatch'd the tythe of 'em. It is a sort of office to me; hours 10 to 4, the same. It does me good. Man must have regular occupation that has been used to it." Mary Lamb expressed her delight in her brother's fondness for the museum "as occupying his time and keeping him from his walks, which she seemed to think overlong."

Didn't Take His Own Medicine.

The late Jarvis B. Edson was at one time connected with a manufacturing concern in Berkshire county, Mass., which produced a plastic material like celluloid known as zylonite. Among the articles which the factory turned out were collars and cuffs, the superiority of which Mr. Edson was discussing one evening at a business men's gathering. "But I see," said one of the men, "that you don't wear them, good as they may be." "No," said Edson; "I'm like our friend Blank. He makes coffin trimmings, but doesn't use them to any great extent. Manufacturers try to find out what the market wants regardless of their personal likes."—Exchange.

One Woman's Way.

A West Philadelphia woman is still smarting over the "compliment" that a guest paid her when she was hostess at an entertainment a week ago. The West Philadelphia woman, whose name is not Brown, prides herself especially on her coffee, and she made some of her best for this occasion.

Among the guests was a woman who makes it a practice always to compliment persons with whom she comes in contact. She says it makes others feel pleasant and doesn't hurt her. During the refreshments this guest turned to the woman whose name is not Brown and said:

"Your tea is so delicious! May I have another cup?"—Philadelphia Times.

Satisfied Her Curiosity.

A bright boy who was a pupil in one of the earliest institutions for the blind, says Fanny Crosby in her "Life Story," was vastly bored by the foolish questions asked by visitors whom he had to escort about the school. The climax was reached when he took them to the dining hall.

"Dear me!" exclaimed a wondering dame. "How do you blind folks ever manage to see the way to your mouths?"

"Well, ma'am," replied the boy solemnly, "each of us hitches one end of a string to his tongue and the other to the leg of his chair. By following that he manages to prevent the victuals losing their way."

Windmill Signals in Holland.

In certain parts of Holland births, marriages and deaths are frequently announced by the windmills. When a miller gets married he stops the mill with the arms of the wheel in an oblique position and the sails unfurled. His friends and guests often do likewise with their mills in token of the ceremony. To indicate a birth the wheel is stopped with the arms in a slanting position, but at a more acute angle than for a marriage, and with the two upper sails unfurled. Should a miller die, the sails of his mill are all unfurled and the wheel is turned round until the arms assume an upright cross, in which position they are left until after the funeral has taken place.

An English Wart Charmer.

Of all country charms against disease the greatest is the wart charm. This writer knows a man in a little village not far from Windsor whose power to cause warts to disappear brings sufferers to him from many miles round. He simply looks at the warts, says something to himself, and after a few weeks his "patient" finds they have all disappeared. You must, however, be careful to tell him the exact number of these excrescences you possess, for if you have, say, ten and declare only nine the nine will vanish, leaving one which the wart doctor is powerless to remove. As in bridge, the declaration is the important point. —London Chronicle.

Why Boys Are Brave.

To his teacher's request that he give the class ideas on the subject of "bravery" little Johnny delivered himself of the following:

"Some boys is brave because they always plays with little boys, and some boys is brave because their legs is too short to run away, but most boys is brave because somebody's lookin'."—Brooklyn Life.

The Pigeon's Flight.

A pigeon has been known to fly a thousand miles in two days, six hours and seventeen minutes.

Have You Seen the Englander Bed Couch

Crowds around our big corner window indicate an acute interest in anything that serves to minimize the household labors.

The object of interest in this corner show window is the Englander Bed Couch. A lady in the window shows how easily the couch can be converted into a big, roomy double bed and how just as easily it can be again converted into a couch.

It is all very simple—a simple raising or lowering of a lever does the trick and there is nothing to get out of order.

The frame is made wholly of metal, all parts are nicely bronzed, and it has extra long, helical springs and National fabric; also woven wire. There is a mattress that goes with this couch bed of extra thickness, filled with pure long fibered, felted cotton which will not mat or lump, and which with the soft springs insures a comfortable bed always.

Englander Couch Beds are sold at $12 to $21.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

If you have faith preach it. If you have doubts bury them. If you have joy share it. If you have sorrow bear it. Find the bright side of things and help others to get sight of it also. This is the only and surest way to be cheerful and happy.

Fairly Warned.

The other day Mrs. Penhecker's younger sister was married, and a day or two after the wedding the husband said, "Now, darling, I don't believe in bearing malice, and if ever I have any necessity to say anything unkind or to make use of any hard words to you I will always take them back again as soon as I have cooled down."

"You needn't take that trouble, my dear," replied his wife, smiling sweetly, "for if you ever use any hard words to me I'll always give them back to you at once."

Cherries in Switzerland.

In medieval times there was no private ownership in cherry trees in Switzerland. They belonged to the community, and there were special regulations as to their picking. At Altstatten, in the canton of Zurich, this custom was still in vogue early in the last century. At some places a special bell was rung to indicate that the cherries were ripe. Then it was first come first served.

A Soapy Lake.

There is a soapy lake in Nicaragua. This sheet of water, the Lake of Nejpa, contains a strong solution of bicarbonate of potash, bicarbonate of soda and sulphate of magnesia. The water, when rubbed against any greasy object, at once forms a lather. It is used as a hair wash and enjoys a local reputation as a cure for external and internal complaints.

Just Provocation.

Patience—How did you rip the sleeves of your new dress, dear?

Patrice—Raising my hands suddenly.

"But you shouldn't raise your hands suddenly when you have on such a right fitting gown."

"Well, I guess you wouldn't stop to think of your gown if somebody at a function whispered in your ear that the rat in your hair was showing.—Yonkers Statesman.

Ostrich Plumes.

In each wing of an ostrich twenty-six long white plumes grow to maturity in eight months. In the male these are pure white, while those of the female shade to ecru or gray. The short feathers are plucked for tips, and each wing furnishes seventy-five of these. The tail feathers are of a deep old ivory color, and sixty-five of these have a commercial value.

Then He Went Mad.

Mildred—Papa, will our new mamma go mad after awhile?

Father—What a question! Why do you think such a thing?

Mildred—Well, I heard her tell the cook yesterday that she got badly bitten when she married you!

Proper and Common.

"What is the difference," said the teacher, "between a proper noun and a common noun?" The answer was not devoid of logic, but rather unexpected. "A proper noun is a noun used properly, and a common noun is a noun used commonly."—Judge.

Sponge Cake.

For a quick and easy sponge cake use two cupfuls of sugar, four eggs, two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three-fourths of a cupful of boiling water. After mixing the ingredients in the usual way bake in a moderate oven.

Her Fear.

Maud—What makes you so awfully nervous, dear?

Clara—Why, Fred is to have an interview with papa this afternoon.

"Oh! And are you afraid your father will not give his consent?"

"No. I fear Fred won't show up."

Plaster Casts.

To cleanse a soiled plaster cast it should be coated with a thick starch paste, prepared by pouring starch, mixed in cold water, into boiling water. When the paste is dry it is readily detached from the plaster and brings the dirt off with it.

Warming.

First Beggar—That guy I just struck is a durn sight more liberal wid his advice than he is wid his money. Second Beggar—What talk did he have? First Beggar—I said I was cold, an' he told me ter go to blazes.—Boston Transcript.

A Healthful Suggestion.

"I think a trip to Europe would fix your wife, but maybe I'd better call a consultation. What other doctors would you prefer?"

"I would suggest a couple of dressmakers, doc."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

POULTRY

WHEAT BRAN FOR POULTRY.

It Is Most Beneficial For Laying Hens as Well as Developing Chicks.

The dry feed theory for poultry was in vogue some years ago, and it gradually spread to other sections. Many, however, never gave it much thought until they saw the progress their neighbors' flocks were making. Here is a typical experience of a man who at first doubted the efficacy of wheat bran. He writes:

After feeding this sort of dry feed for some time we became convinced that the wheat bran was the most helpful feature of the mixture, and so we are now feeding the latter only, in connection with grain in litter, and we find that it makes a good ration for the hens. The hens like the wheat bran, and they eat of it largely, and it gives them a good full craw to take to roost with them at night, which is digested by morning to their benefit in egg formation and thus in wosking a betterment in the whole flock in the way of laying. Not only is the wheat bran diet good for laying hens, but it is also beneficial in developing the growth of the young stock. Experienced breeders who raise hundreds of chickens annually keep this kind of feed accessible to their young chickens all the time, and they claim it is splendid in its feather and bone forming effects on the growing chicks. We kept our mixture of wheat bran and corn hearts before our young chickens all the time last season, and we could see its beneficial effects in their development. They all seemed to be satisfied with the provision made for them and to grow very uniformly. There were no undersized runts or weaklings among them, for every one of them had a chance to eat at any hour or any minute during the day, and so there were no empty craws.

That wheat bran is a comparatively cheap feed every one knows, and for this reason it is acceptable aside from its beneficial effects.

Keep One Variety of Corn.

It is best, as a general thing, to have but one variety of corn and keep it from mixing with other varieties. It is a very difficult matter to keep varieties from mixing when several are grown on the same farm or where different strains or varieties are grown on adjoining farms. Seed breeders realize these difficulties and always plant corn on a portion of the farm that is removed from other cornfields.

Provide Plenty of Feed.

One of the first steps in making the farm profitable is to provide plenty of feed for the animals and supplies for the family table. The first crop that should have consideration in this rotation is corn. Without an abundance of corn it is a difficult matter to make the farm life independent and the rotation suitable to a progressive system of management.

Feeding Value of Corn.

There is much difference in the feeding value of corn, and this should have more thought. Corn should be valued according to the protein, carbohydrates and fat that it contains. A careful study of the kernel will enable you to determine with a reasonable degree of accuracy the feeding value of the ear. Study your corn variety and breed it up.

Late Plowing Dangerous.

Late plowing is responsible for more destruction of vegetable matter than any other fault on the farm. Those who wait until the last minute to turn the soil find it impracticable to turn under the stalks; hence they are raked and burned. This is certain to impoverish the soil and may drive your children from the farm.

Select Good Seed.

Select a seed breeding plat for your corn and make preliminary arrangements to improve the yield of your strain. The first essential in making larger crops is to plant better seed. You can never be altogether sure that the seed is better without breeding better plants from which to save seed.

Sunshine Kills Disease.

Plenty of glass on the south side of the poultry house will tend to promote the healthfulness of the flock, for sunshine is death to any disease that may be lurking in any damp poultry house. Give the fowls plenty of sunshine, fresh air and exercise and they won't need any doctoring.

Singular Wills.

One of the most singular wills ever recorded was that of a British sailor, who requested his executors to give his wife a shilling to buy hazelnuts, as she had always preferred cracking them to mending his stockings. More subtle, however, was the sarcasm of a will proved in 1830, in which a wife was left $2,500, but was to enjoy it only after her death in order that "she may be buried suitably as my widow." A French merchant bequeathed a large fortune to a woman of his acquaintance to show his gratitude for her refusal to marry him years before.

Emma Eames and Impresario.

Emma Eames never willingly sang the role of Micaela in "Carmen," though in star casts the part is properly given to a soprano of the first rank. One night, while sitting in her dressing room waiting for the second act (in which Micaela does not appear) to pass, Maurice Grau, the impresario, entered. Mme. Eames looked him over critically and said savagely:

"Upon my word, you must be a very rich man to afford to pay me my salary to sing such a part!"—Minneapolis Journal.

Could Have Shot Washington.

"It was once in my power to have shot General Washington," said a British soldier to an American as they were discussing the events of the great struggle after peace had come.

"Why did you not shoot him, then?" asked the American. "You ought to have done so for the benefit of your countrymen."

"The death of Washington would not have been for their benefit," replied the Englishman. "We depended upon him to use our prisoners kindly, and we'd sooner have shot an officer of our own!"

The Flying Dutchman.

Few sailors are able to tell the legend of the Flying Dutchman, though they look out for the phantom ship in all waters. It is the Cape of Good Hope alone which the spectral vessel is supposed to haunt, however, since Mynheer Vanderdecken swore that he would double the cape in the teeth of the tempest "even if he sailed until the day of judgment." So mynheer must go on sailing, waiting and ever waiting, until the end of the world, but he and his ship are invisible to men, except to the crews of doomed vessels.

A Hopeless Case.

There was a brilliant reception at the house of Mrs. Amory. Among the guests was a certain Mr. Mackenzie, a man of grave and somewhat taciturn demeanor, whom several of the young ladies present had tried to engage in conversation, but with little success.

One of them spoke to the hostess about him.

"He seems to be rather uneasy and out of place at a party like this," she said.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Amory, with a bright smile; "he can't talk anything but sense."

The Pygmy Hippopotamus.

The little black people of Africa, so dramatically described by Stanley, are not the only pygmies produced by that wonderful continent. In Liberia and Sierra Leone are found pygmy hippopotamuses. These animals are described as being more like pigs in their habits than like their gigantic relatives. A good mudhole is quite sufficient for them. They seem to prefer solitude in their native haunts, going about singly, and when two are seen in company they almost invariably consist of a mother and her calf.

Hard to Please.

"Some women," said Mr. Hewligus "are awfully hard to please. I'm making my wife a birthday present of $1,000, and yet she doesn't seem to appreciate it."

"Great Scott!" said the other man. "In cash?"

"Same thing," answered Mr. Hewligus. "I told her the other day I was going to get my life insured for that amount of money and give her the policy, and all she said was, 'But think, Henry, how long I may have to wait for it!'"—Chicago Tribune.

Morocco Leather.

Sumac, the powdered leaf of the sumac plant, the finest varieties of which grow in Sicily, is used in tanning goatskins, and sumac gives a clear, white tannage, unaffected by the action of light and therefore suitable for dyeing into colors where permanence of shade is desired. A genuine "morocco" is goatskin tanned with pure sumac, but there are many upholsterers who could not give this definition offhand. Goatskins dyed with babool pods or similar barks are only imitation moroccos, although it takes an expert to discover the difference. Long wear, of course, reveals the deception. Roan leathers are sumac tanned sheepskins.—Manchester Guardian.

Chemical Prints.

Here is a way to take a picture in the dark: Draw a picture on a piece of paper, using sulphate of quinine in making the outlines. Expose the paper to the sun for a few minutes, then place the paper face down on a piece of sensitive paper, like that used by photographers, and place the two sheets between the leaves of a book. If the sheets are removed from the book a few hours later, you will find that an exact reproduction of the drawing will have been impressed on the sensitive paper. Designs of any sort can be copied in this way, or you may trace over a printed picture or design with sulphate of quinine and by the same process produce a faithful copy of the print.

BI-WEEKLY PAY NOW FOR RAILROAD MEN

Four bills were signed by Governor Wilson yesterday, two of them being measures upon which he gave public hearings Monday afternoon, following his return from the West.

One of them was Senator Silzer's measure requiring railroad companies to pay the wages of their employes every two weeks. Railroad men have sought the enactment of such legislation for many years, declaring that this method of pay would permit them to purchase by cash instead of on time, and thereby save them money.

The other bill was that of Senator Osborne abolishing contract labor at the State Prison and other penal or reformatory institutions. The law provides for the creation of a board of control and supervision of the convicts' work and for the disposal of the products of such labor, the board to consist of the Commissioner of Charaties and Corrections, the warden of the prison, superintendent of the reformatory and two other persons to be named by the Governor, and to serve without compensation.

The other bills to become law are those authorizing the appointment of a recorder of townships of thirty-five hundred population, and requiring pawnbrokers and second-hand dealers to furnish the Chief of Police daily records of goods received.

At the Plainfield Rescue Mission tonight at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. rooms, the missionary class of the First M. E. church will be in charge. There will be special music.

'AL FRESCO' SHOW

"The Indian Legend of Watchung" is Portrayed by the Village Folk.

MOUNTAIN SLOPE THE SCENE.

"Mayor" Anderson Appears in the Role of "One Feather"—Big Crowd Enjoys the Realistic Performance.

"The Indian Legend of Watchung" known and treasured by the old settlers of Washington Valley but unfamiliar to the present generation, was graphically told in pantomime at Watchung last night amid a natural background of cliffs, crags and wooded slope, transformed into a veritable fariyland by hundreds of electric lights, the historic events of the section were re-enacted with a vividness that transported the spectators back hundreds of years. The seating accommodations were barely able to accommodate the crowd that flocked to witness the al fresco production.

Twelve scenes are required to portray the story and a large number of participants are in each, most of them residents of Watchung. Indians, scouts, settlers, hunters, women and children are seen and the mimnicing actors showed long preparations and rehearsal. The performance was admirable in every way and will probably be witnessed by capacity crowds.

While all the scenes are very striking, there are two particularly well given were on the duel between "Deer Prong" the Indian scout, represented by Edward Bodin, and the white scout, Lewis Snowden, and the battle between the Indians and white. They brought round after round of applause.

The cast of characters were as follows:

One Feather, chief of Watchung indians, W. de LaR. Anderson; Blue Wolf, sub-Chief, E. T. Canning; Deer Prong, tribal scout, Edward Bodin; Lame Dog, medicine man, John Mobus; Broves, Messrs. Spear, Cahoone, Wheeler, Underhill, Olyphant, Haff, Kielblock, D. Demler, W. Demler, Gunn, Patte, McQuade, Hughes, Cleaves, Maul, Schmidt, Marfing, Triano and Featherstone; Squaws, Mmes. Kennedy, Cahoone, Groszman, Bodin, Titus, Patte, Mils, Koons, McQuade, Titus and Hance; Indian Children, Masters Snowden, Perret, Texier, Triano, Mobus, Myers, Mils. Bartles, Eaton, Titus, Giddis.

Whites—Capt. Michelson, leader of settlers, Lewis Snowden; Wetumpka, indian princess, Mrs. W. de laR. Anderson or Mrs. M. H. Cleaves; Men—Messrs. Leurssen, Groszmann, Herrman, Mobus, Kennedy, Hance, Moldenke, Schmidt, Gunn, Neier, Bodin; Women—Mmes. Snoden Wheeler, Mobus, Schmidt; Children—Masters Moldenke, Mobus, Myers, Schmidt, Miles, Titus, Myers.

The legend was put in pantomime form by W. delaR. Anderson, who was told it many years ago by the late Ephriam Ackor, grandfather of the present Ephriam Ackor, of Watchung. He was then in his ninetieth year. The production was arranged by Mr. Anderson, and is being given under the auspices of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Association and the Watchung Chemical Engine Company jointly.

J. J. KULP SUCCUMBS TO SCARLET FEVER.

Word was received here last night of the death of John J. Kulp, aged seven years, son of John J. Kulp, of Monticello, N. Y., and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of Grove street, whose mother did about ten days ago. Scarlet fever was the cause of death.

The boy had been making a brave fight for life for four weeks. Before Mrs. Kulp's illness she was at her son's bedside day and night, when she was taken with nervous prostration from which she died. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at Monticello, N. Y., at 2 o'clock.

Who Owns Brindle Pup?

There is now in the possession of the agent at the Fanwood Station of the New Jersey Central, a brindle pup, which was put off the 9:35 New York train on Wednesday morning. The woman who had the dog on the train can get the same by calling at the Fanwood Station or by seeing Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, S. P. C. A. agent, and saving herself some trouble.

Announce Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter M. Smith, of East Bound Brook, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Harriet Amelia Smith and Alexander DeWitt Galloway, of this city. The wedding will take place Wednesday evening, June 28, at the home of the bride's parents.

COMMISSION GOV'T PROMOTERS PLANS

Further steps toward promoting an interest in the plan for a commission form of government in this city were taken at a meeting of citizens held in the Coward building on Park avenue last night. Mayor G. W. V. Moy told of the porgress being made in securing signatures to the number of petitions now in circulation, and this was most encouraging. It now appears as though there will be no trouble in geting the required 20 per cent. of the voters at the last election. Those who have taken an interest in this matter want it understood that it is strictly non-partisan.

There is no attempt on the part of those who have undertaken to circulate petitions to trespass on the rights of a special committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to investigate the proposition.

There was also an informal discussion of a ticket to be placed in the field at the municipal election in the fall, but nothing definite was decided upon. No date was fixed for another meeting, but one will probably be held within a week or so to receive further reports concerning the petitions in circulation for the commission form of government.

MRS. FERNALD'S TALK ON MAKING A HOME.

Under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. a successful parlor meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. W. Spicer, on Central avenue, when Mrs. M. J. Fernald, formerly of this city, but now of Washington, gave an interesting talk on "Home Making." She described what goes to make up a happy and useful home, and concluding with a strong denunciation of the needless expenditure of money for liquor, which if spent in the home would make it an ideal place, instead of an undesirable place as is often the case.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercises in charge of Mrs. T. C. Bodine and Mrs. Sara Wardner. After the talk by Mrs. Fernald refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed by the women.

Plans for Special Talks.

Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, is inaugurating a series of Sunday night talks on religion in every day life. The speakers will be lay members of the church who will give in their own their experience of religion not merely from the standpoint of the man in the pew, but from that of the worker at his work.

Infant Baptism at Trinity.

In conection with the Children's Day exercises to be held at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning, there will be infant baptism by the pastor, Rev. J. Y. Broek.

CIRCUS IS IN TOWN

Forepaugh and Sell's Big Three Ring Show Gives two Performances Today.

FIVE HUNDRED PERFORMERS.

Lots of Thrillers and a Big Bunch of Clowns—Some Great Acts —The Best Show of the Season.

The Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' Circus is her today and without a doubt it is the largest and best appointed "big show" that has ever stopped here. Two performances are given, one at 2 o'clock and the other at 8 o'clock on the show grounds, Second street and Leland avenue on the main line trolley. For fifty years there has not been the slightest change in the features of a circus parade until this year. The Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' Big United Shows have departed from the path-beaten lines of the past. Circus day now takes on an entirely new significence. It cost the management $1,000,000 to devise and build new attractions and up-to-date policy of the best of all shows.

The great crowds of today viewed the superb free street parade and voted it the best they had ever seen. The parade was unlike the conventional displays of heretofore. It was an entirely new form of entertainment. It was a veritable world's fair on wheels. The wonders and the people of every civilized nation and many savage lands contribute to its variety of attraction.

It is only natural to expect this show, above all others to have a great parade, yet all who saw it were pleased far beyond their fondest hopes. Its wealth and its splendor are the direct results of years of travel through five continents, where it is as well-known as in its native land. The former brilliant parades of this big show but merely suggest the splendor of this season's free street spectacle. In keeping with the parade there is an entirely new program under the main tent. The talent has been selectd from many countries; it is abundant and a novelty, displaying few things to recall the past. Of thrillers there are at least a dozen—all sure fine sensations of the first degree. It requires a company of five hundred performers to give the many acts; there were many clowns to provide the sauce of comedy.

All in all the Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' Shows offer the biggest and best circus exhibition ever seen here.

WALLER IN THE BOX FOR 'US' TOMORROW

"Red" Waller, the one-time foe of Plainfield baseball, will pitch for the local team against Somerville on Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon. Waller, who was considered one of the best pitchers in this part of the State was the thorn in the flesh for Plainfield in the old days and now he is coming back with the glad hand and he is going to pitch his head off tomorrow to defeat Plainfield's old rivals, Somerville.

Waller will have a good team behind him, and Nelson will be at the receiving end. The only changes will be that Frick will be at third in place of Dalton and Brown will cover right field in place of Ballin for this game. Otherwise the lineup will be as usual. Clinton, the star twirler, will be in the box for Somerville, and will probably have one or two new men in the lineup in place of Wolf and Jung. The game will be called promptly at 3:30 o'clock. R. H. B. Dalley will be the umpire. The team will lineup as follows:

Plainfield—Frick, 3b; Brown, rf; Driscoll, 1b; Hartman, ss; Harter, lf; Nelson, c; Waller, p; Cosgrove, cf; Martin, 2b.

Somerville—Swanson, 3b; Gordon, lf; Wolf, cf; McDonald, 1b; Grimes, rf; Gribbon, 2b; Jung, ss; Torpey, c; Clinton, p.

The other two games in the league tomorrow will be Scotch Plains at Westfield and Bound Brook at High Bridge.

Miss McLean Will Not Speak.

Owing to the critical illness of her sister, Miss Mary McLean, who, for many years has been a missionary worker among the Hopi Indians in Arizona, will not give her talk on 'Hopi Indians," at the home of Miss Anna Boice, on Park avenue, tomorrow afternoon.

—Neuman Bros. will offer tomorrow 1,000 quarts of the finest Jersey strawberries, two quarts for 25 cents and 15 cents a quart.

HIS POCKET PICKED ON A TROLLEY CAR

Ira Hurlbert, of West Front street, while on his way to the circus this afternoon aboard a main line trolley, was relieved of $18, all the money he had on his person and he was unable to pay even his carefare. Mrs. Hurlbert reported the matter to the police, but there is not the slightest chance of finding the money.

Mr. Hurlbert boarded the trolley near his home and the car being overcrowded at the time, the conductor did not reach him until several minutes afterward. In the meantime, Mr. Hurlbert says that he remembers being jostled about, and he believes that that is when he lost his roll. Although the police are on the lookout for pickpockets, it behooves everyone to take extra precaution while the circus is in town.

MISS CONNAUGHTON ELMER HUSSEY'S BRIDE

Miss Norah Connaughton, of East Seventh street, and Elmer J. Hussey, of Newburgh, N. Y., were married in St. Mary's church Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Bogan in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends from New York, Newark, Newburgh, Elizabeth and other places beside the city and borough. Miss Delia Reilly, of West Eighh street, and Cornelius Hussey, brother of the groom, was best man.

The wedding was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's brother-in-law, Martin Cunniff, of East Seventh street. At its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Hussey left for Washington to spend a week. On returning they will make their home at Fourth street and Lee place. The groom is a machinist and is employed in one of the local shops.

Township Meeting

At the regular meeting of the North Plainfield township committee yesterday afternoon, Frank Moore, was appointed police officer for Washington Rock and adjacent territory, and Nelson Headley was appointed special officer for the Greenbrook section. An appropriation of $100 was recently made for special police duty. The Township Improvement Association offered to rent the committee offices in its building at Watchung for $72 with out maintenance. The offer was held in abeyance until a figure could be set on rental with all necessaries.

In the Borough Court.

William Emmons, arrested for drunkenness and disordedly conduct, was sentenced to ten days in jail by Recorder Dolliver this morning. William Hooper, colored, arrested on the same charge, was fined $5 or five days. He took the latter. A $4 cash bail bond put up by Louis Rubin, arrested yesterday for peddling without a license, was ordered forfeited as he did not put in an appearance.

Charged With Assault.

Grant Leivers, of 418 Grove street, was arrested this morning on the complaint of his wife, by Sergeant Herbert L. Overbaugh, on a charge of assault. Mrs. Leivers did not appear in court against her husband, this morning and the case was put over until tomorrow. It is said that the assault was the result of an argument. Mr. Leivers took exception to statements made by his wife.

Notice to the Public.

The "Peoples" men's clothing department after occupying the upstairs floors of 131 East Front street for the past nine years, have moved and are now doing business downstairs in the largest, lightest and finest "fitted up" store in the city of Plainfield. Special bargains in every department for Saturday. Cash or credit. Adelberg's. •••

Charged With the Theft of Linen.

Anna Sabina and Angeline Longo, both of this city, were arraigned before Judge Atwater in the Union County Court this morning, to plead to a charge of stealing about $20 worth of linen at the home of Lizzie Monack, in this city, on April 17 last. The two women entered a plea of not guilty and the trial was fixed for June 27.

Opens Another Store.

Frank Wagner, the newspaper and stationery dealer, who has a store at the North avenue entrance to the City Market, today opened a similar store at the East Second street entrance to the market, where a full line of stationery, novelties, and all newspapers will be on sale.

PROBE MINING CO.

Stockholders Name Committee to Investigate Nat. Mining and Leasing Co.

MIDDLEKAUFF'S 40 PER CENT.

Those Who Got Big Dividends Raise Fund to Ascertain if Concern Has Any Funds—Lawyers Are Conspicuous.

The stockholders and bondholders of the National Mining and Leasing Company, who met in the District court, yesterday, to take steps toward an investigation of the company's affairs, as exclusively told in The Daily Press, raised a considerable sum of money with which to conduct the investigation and a committee comprising Messrs. Doyle, Loveland, W. H. Abbott, Charles L. Moffett and Den. J. Galbraith was elected to make the investigation.

The meeting was called yesterday by Den. J. Galbraith, William H. Callahan and W. H. Abbott, who sent a printed letter to all the stockholders. In this letter the three stockholders say:

"From an inspection of the papers and effects of the National Mining and Leasing Company, in the office of the company, deem the affairs of the company to be in such a precarious condition that immediate action on the part of the stockholders and bondholders is necessary to protect their interests."

The letter further states: "Said meeting is called for the purpose of raising a fund to investigate and determine what action may be deemed advisable and proper to protect the stock and bondholders and bring the guilty parties, if any, to justice."

The examination yesterday disclosed the fact that Elisworth D. Middlekauff, who was the organizer of the company, was allowed 40 per cent. on all stock sold by himself. Jasper Cadmus, the acting president, was examined, and it is said that he admitted having sold some stock for the company.

The committee elected yesterday will ascertain if possible in whose names the company's property is at present; also the condition of affairs. There is an impression that there are no tangible assets, and it is said that the dividends were paid out of the capital stock. It is also reported that the 18 per cent. dividend per annum was paid out of the earnings of the company's property.

Mayor G. W. V. Moy, who represents a number of stockholders, was chairman of the meeting yesterday. Others present for stockholders were Judge W. G. DeMeza, Judge W. A. Coddington, of this city; James L. Griggs, of Somerville; Asa Suydam, of Bound Brook, and James P. Powers, of Elizabeth.

MORTGAGE BURNED AT Y.W.C.A. LAWN FETE

The lawn fete and reception conducted by the Silver Bay Club at the Y. W. C. A. last night, proved a great success. The attendance was very large and everyone enjoyed the program. Comic songs furnished by Kenneth Clark, of Princeton, were a feature and received merited applause. Most of them were original while several were college compositions. He furnished his own accompaniment.

A number on the program of great importance to the members was the burning of the mortgage on the association building, recently cancelled. This was done in the reception room by Mrs. F. G. Mead. In connection with the burning, Mrs. Mead announced that the association had just secured a small piece of property directly in the rear of the present grounds which completes the lot. Ice cream and cake were served in conclusion.

The proceeds of the fete will be used to defray the expenses of the delegates to the Silver Bay conference. The club members were divided in two sides selling tickets each seeking to dispose of the most. One side was headed by Miss Helen George and the other by Miss Florence Prior.

The groom is a member of Mr. Ashley's former parish and the two have been close friends for several years.

Miss Quinn wore a gown of white nulle over silk and carried a bouquet of bride roses. Her attendant was attired in a becoming costume of pink. WHY WATER CO. WOULDN'T SELL

President Bergen's Letters to Councilmanic Committee Chairman Reveal the Reasons.

Why the Plainfield-Union water company declined to make any agreement to dispose of its plant in the Netherwood section to the city of Plainfield is told in a letter received from Frank Bergen, the president, by Councilman Mygatt, chairman of the special water committee and now made public for the first time. As they will be read with interest by every taxpayers, particularly the property owners, they are herewith reproduced in full:

April 18th, 1911.

Mr. Frederick E. Mygatt, Chairman Special Water Committee, Plainfield, New Jersey.

My Dear Sir:

At your request I have considered your suggestion that a clause be inserted in the proposed contract between the water company and Plainfield giving the city an option to purchase the water works in the city at a certain price, or at a price to be fixed hereafter by agreement or arbitration.

I am not willing to advise the company to do so because I think it would be unwise and perhaps disastrous to Plainfield and to other towns in its vicinity.

There are now at least five water companies and a still larger number of municipalities in Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties, some of which now have and others could obtain a right to pump water for public use within the territory of Plainfield or just outside. To induce those companies and municipalities to relinquish that right in order that Plainfield may obtain a monopoly of the water supply at Netherwood, which probably does not originate in the city, appears to me to be impossible.

It has been necessary for me to consider this subject a great deal during the past twenty years, and I am convinced that it would be worse than deplorable for the towns and companies to engage in a struggle with one another for the limited supply of water now within their reach instead of co-operating, as they must do ultimately, in making provision for an adequate supply for all.

During the past forty years numerous efforts have been made by towns along the Central Railroad in Union county, acting separately, to obtain a water supply, and in very instance the result was a failure. It is easy to start an agitation on the subject, because the difficulties are not obvious at first sight. Twenty years ago the Plainfield and Union water companies, after hesitating for more than twenty years, undertook to provide a supply for all the towns between Elizabeth and Dunellen, and have succeeded so far in doing so. The shortcomings of the companies have been very trifling compared with the difficulties of the task.

Since 1890 the rapid growth of the towns, induced largely by the companies, has increased the difficulties and also the importance of the work. Besides, recent changes in the laws, both by statutes and judicial decisions, which affect muncipalities and water companies alike have added troublesome obstacles that must be overcome.

A few years ago the Plainfield and Union water companies were consolidated in order to obtain additional strength to cope with the problem, and the consolidated company is now trying, as you know, to solve it, but with out as much encouragement as I think it deserves.

These are the facts, stated generally, which support my view that it would be injurious to all of the towns in which the company supplies water, and to the company also to take a step backwards and diminish their ability to manage successfully a very serious matter.

Very truly yours,

FRANK BERGEN,

President Plainfield-Union Water Water Company.

May 29, 1911.

Mr. Frederick E. Mygatt, Chairman Special Water Committee, Plainfield, New Jersey.

My Dear Sir:—

I have again considered and discussed with my associates in the water company the suggestion that a contract be made with Plainfield containing a provision for a sale to the city of the works in the city at the end of the term. Such a provision, it seems to me, cannot be carried out. The reasons for this conclusion are

WESTFIELD.

The American Concrete Steel Company, awarded the contract for heating the new schoolhouse on Broad street, has withdrawn its bid for the work and declines to take up the fulfilment of the concract on the ground that they considered that the building was to be of concrete when they made their bid for the work. The matter has been referred to the town attorney, Paul Q. Oliver, who is to report on the action to be taken in the matter. There was $900 difference between the bid on which the heating contract was awarded and the next lowest bidder. The Board of Education will, if possible, make the company carry out the contract.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Alpers and William J. Harman, of Pulaski, Va., took place last evening at the Congregational church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Samuel L. Loomis. The maid of honor was Miss Catherine Alpers, sister of the bride. The bridemaids were Miss Edith Copperthwait, Miss Grace Philips, Miss Vina Vail and Miss Lois Stearnes. The best man was Fred J. Loughon, a cousin of the groom. After the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Alpers, at 305 Elm street.

SOMERVILLE.

The closing meeting for the summer of the Home Missionary and Aid Society was held Wednesday afternoon in the chapel of the Second Reformed church. The subject of the paper, "Our Country; What is the Outlook?" The women decided to put an addition to the church and make a new kitchen possible. The work will be begun at once. Numerous pledges were made by the women of the society, so as to bring in money during the summer.

The Penny Reapers connected with St. John's Episcopal church will picnic at Chimney Rock this afternoon, taking their supper with them.

Beginning with Sunday, June 18, it is expected the union services of the Baptist and Methodist congregations will be held alternately in the evening, each pastor preaching in the other's church. This will be the program for six weeks.

OPEN GENERAL SYNOD SESSION

Asbury Park, June 9.—The General Synod of the Reformed church in America opened its annual session yesterday afternoon in the Reformed church. The attendance this year will not be as large as formerly, as it was decided last year to cut down the representation from 278 to 188. Instead of representatives being chosen in proportion to the classis, they are selected in proportion to church communicants.

The presiding officer is Rev. Dr. DeJong, vice-president of the synod. He takes the place of Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, formerly of the North Reformed church of Newark, who is now a Presbyterian pastor in Nashville, Tenn.

The election of a permanent and a stated clerk, it is not expected, will develop any opposition to the selection of Rev. Henry Lockwood, of East Millstone, to the former position, and Rev. Dr. Dehart, of Raritan, for the latter place.

The leading candidate for president is Rev. Dr. P. T. Pockman, of the First Reformed church of New Brunswick, who will resign from his pastorate next December after completing twenty-five years of service. The New Jersey delegates are strongly supporting Dr. Pockman.

The classis of Greene, N. Y., has a candidate in Rev. F. V. VanVranken, of Leeds, who is about to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation from the New Brunswick Theological Seminary. Dr. Van Vranken has the support of many of the New York delegates.

Last night the synodical sermon was preached by Dr. De Jong. Later the new president appointed his committees, and this work required several hours.

The classis of Newark is represented by the following: Rev. Albertus T. Broek, Rev. John Y. Broek, Rev. C. E. Waldron, Rev. George S. Bishop, Elders Joseph Garrabrant, E. I. Condit, A. L. Force, George S. Hobart, Rev. Carl Girtaner, Rev. William Stuart, Rev. Henry Merle Mellen, Rev. Uriah McClinchie, Philip Bach, H. T. Gray, F. N. Stranahan and J. S. Mundy.

PERSONAL.

John Voorhees, of Iowa, is visiting relatives in this city for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Edgar, of Fairview avenue, are sojourning at Asbury Park.

Harry DeMeza, of Summit avenue, has returned from a week's fishing trip at Swartzwood Lake.

J. Allen Wilson, of Philadelphia, has returned after spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Wilson, of Grove street.

SUES HER SON FOR PROPERTY

Aged and crippled with rheumatism, but mentally alert, Mrs. Caroline M. Johnson, of 11 Court street, Newark, took the stand in Vice-Chancellor Stevens' court yesterday as her own chief witness in a suit against her son. Many of her answers were given in quaint fashion. She seeks to control the setting aside of a deed purporting to convey three properties on Spruce, Emmet and Cottage streets, respectively.

The son is William F. Johnson, who lives with his wife at 13 Cottage street, one of the properties he is alleged to have gotten from his mother without any consideration. The three properties were conveyed November 15, 1904, at which time the complainant lived with her son. She left her son's home to go to the Home for the Incurables, from where she eventually went to her present boarding place.

In the course of her testimony, Mrs. Johnson was asked by William Hamilton Osborne, her counsel, about her subsequent relations with her son, and her reply was:

"I never laid eyes on him again and he has never been to see me."

Mrs. Johnson denied all knowledge of either the deed conveying the properties to her son, as well as of another of the same date reconveying to her a life interest in the properties.

The Spruce street property was afterward sold for $5,500 and $4,500 of the proceeds used to liquidate two mortgages on the Cottage and Emmet street properties respectively.

In her bill, Mrs. Johnson asks also for an accounting for the rents and profits of the several properties.

It came out that Mrs. Johnson claimed some interest in coal lands in West Virginia, from which she, however, derived no income.

"Maybe when we get honest legislatures and honest lawyers I will get what belongs to me," she volunteered.

LITERARY.

The June Metropolitan—"Theodore Roosevelt—Please Answer," by M. E. Stone, Jr., goes deeply and curiously into the Panama scandal, and demands of the ex-President to give the true facts of the matter as he alone knows them. "Love and the Woman's Movement," by Havelock Ellis, discusses in a fresh, interesting way the romantic masculine attitude toward women and the various changes in this attitude which are being brought about by the emancipation of the weaker sex.

Scribner's Magazine for June begins a new narrative by General Funston, whose remarkable articles on his adventures in Cuba made such an impression. General Funston has the knack of depicting military adventures so vividly that they have the charm of romance. The new series deals with his "Philippine Experiences," and in this number he tells of "The Making of a Regiment"—the famous Twentieth Kansas. The humors and annoyances of putting into shape a regiment of raw recruits are gayly told by General Funston. Then follows the journey to the Philippines and the first experiences of the regiment under fire. F. C. Yohn illustrates this series. Henry van Dyke, during his recent year of academic lecturing in France, read contemporary French prose and verse with a deepened sense of its beauty. A professor at the Sorbonne called his attention to the work of a French poet, then living, whose name is unknown in this country, Auguste Angellier.

Ellis Parker Butler, Molly Elliot Seawell, Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, Kate Masterson, Thomas L. Masson, Burton Egbert Stevenson and a dozen other well-known writers are among the contributors to the June Lippincott's, which is one of the strongest issues this enterprising publication has ever gotten out. The complete novel is "The Privateer," an adorable tale of the Southland, wonderful in its word-painting, fascinating in its style. This is the first long story by the author, Eleanor Mercein Kelly, whose short-stories, however, have been attracting a great deal of attention.

The June Strand upholds its reputation for being one of the most varied magazines published. An article which should especially attract women is one called "The Creation of a Venus." In order to build up this perfection of feminine beauty an English artist has taken the most perfect feature from a number of famous beauties and "created" a modern Venus of suprassing loveliness.

The June Wide World is a sterling number and contains a mass of interesting and instructive information regarding the four quarters of the globe. H. Hesketh Prichard continues his enthralling account of the famous journey he made "Across Unknown Labrador;" Major Stykes has another paper on "The Wilds of Persia" and Mrs. Fred Maturin contributes a third article descriptive of her "Trek Beyond the Zambesi."

The National Post, the new fortnightly, announces its birth and intentions in straightforward fashion. "The taste before magazine journalism today," it says in its opening editorial, "is nothing less than the focusing of the strivings of the American people toward a better-organized system of life and thought in a better-managed and kindlier nation."

FOR TRAVELING.

Many a girl who travels has found it impossible to gratify her longing for dainty underwear because of the uncertainties of laundrying. After having it returned a few times torn and spoiled she has settled down to the plain garments, devoid of any of the irresistible little feminine touches. For her the silk crepe idea will be positive joy, for she can retire to her hotel bathroom and with the assistance of a cake of gaad, pure soap may restore her lingerie to its pristine glory and loveliness.

The new garments come in every weight from the heaviest silk crepe to the flimsiest crepe de chine, built into nightgowns, chemise, corset covers, combinations and petticoats. They are shown in white and colors and many elaborately embridered in self-tone silk.

Another idea of the troveler or the girl away from home is the Italian silk undergarment. It is most familiar as an undervest, but so popular and practical has it proven that it has been extended to cover the entire lingerie wardrobe.

WOMEN ARE PUNCTUAL.

Women are more punctual than men in keeping appointments. It is a very rare thing, indeed, for a woman to be late at, for instance, a dinner engagement.

One has only to wait in the lounge or vestibule of a fashionable restaurant from 7 to 8 p. m. to notice the large number of women waiting for their husbands or friends to come to dinner.

They may be seen waiting patiently, although their husbands are twenty minutes overdue—it is an experience they are accustomed to.

One may notice the unpunctual men hurrying up one by one, making the usual excuses—"detained at the office" or "important business engagement"—and the quiet resignation of the wives.

Young men are particularly unpunctual, even when they are meeting their fiancees. But women, old or young, usually arrive before time when they have made an appointment.

Men have a very deficient sense of time when the appointment is not a strictly business one. They put things off to the last minute and then "hurry up," with the result that they are at least fifteen minutes late.

At theatres the same kind of thing may be observed—the patient wife in the vestibule waiting for the unpunctual husband.

Messina Risen From Ruins.

Messina is growing rapidly. Two years ago it had but 3,000 inhabitants, dwellers among the ruins. Now it has 60,000—20,000 in houses and 40,000 in cantonments. If no earthquake interrupts its progress it hopes to be in a few years the same busy and beautiful city it was. It takes more than an earthquake to wipe out a city situated on a great trade route.—Boston Transcript.

WHY WOULDN'T SELL

too numerous and voluminous for full statement in a letter, but I am not willing to decline again to comply with your wishes without stating some of the reasons why it is necessary to do so. Among them are these:

The company by its charters was authorized to supply water everywhere in Union county, and in part of Somerset and Middlesex counties, and has supplied water for nearly twenty years in nine municipalities in those counties.

To sell its source of supply to one of those towns without having first made adequate provision for the others, would probably be an illegal act. I do not think the company can discriminate between localities, any more than it can between individuals, that depend on it for a supply of water. But if lawful to do so, it certainly would be unjust. Besides, such a course would violate contract obligations of the company.

Aside, however, from these legal objections there are practical difficulties in the way, growing out of the following facts, which I think cannot be overcome.

The population of Union county along the Central railroad has increased rapidly in recent years, and every available source of water fit for domestic use has been developed, and nearly all are now taxed to the extent of their capacity. The same thing is true in Middlesex county.

The supply now available will probably last five years, and may last ten years, but it is doubtful. During that time a plan must be formulated and carried out to obtain a supply for the future from some distant source.

Such a plan would require the expenditure of a large sum of money, too large to be provided by any one or even by a few of the towns now supplied by the water company.

The only possible way to solve the problem successfully, that I can see is for substantially all of the towns to support the company in its efforts to do so, or to provide a supply for the future in a way to be devised and agreed upon among themselves.

If any one or a few of the towns should attempt to appropriate the water supply at Netherwood exclusively, it would precipitate a disastrous struggle and involve loss of time that ought to be employed in working along the lines I have indicated, or in executing some wiser plan at least as comprehensive. To let this matter drift until a public calamity forces co-operation would be inexcusable, and those who are familiar with the situation ought to inform the public of the facts.

The water company has the financial resources and the legal authority to produce a supply of water sufficient for the territory covered by its franchises, although the difficulties of doing so have been very much increased in recent years. But if the towns decide, either expressly or tacitly, to depend on the company hereafter I think their decision should be substantially unanimous and clearly understood. In the present state of uncertainty on this point it is impossible for the company to determine what course it should pursue.

Very truly yours,
FRANK BERGEN,
President Plainfield-Union Water Company.

Will Hold a Parlor Meeting.

Mrs. Ferguson, a returned missionary from Madras, India, will address a parlor meeting at the home of Rev. F. St. John Fitch, on Park avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, under the auspices of the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church. All women interested are invited to attend.

Choice.

I would not wise nor wealthy be,
I ask not much of fame,
I care not what was left to me
No high and noble name;
I crave not power, no, not I,
Nor pride which hath its fall;
In fact, my longings do not lie
Along these lines at all!

I'd play no superficial part
To gain mankind's applause
It I might be in mind and heart
Exempt from nature's laws,
So that no fault could e'er be found
In my perfected ways
And men the whole great world around
Would name me but to praise.

MUM OVER HIS LONG ABSENCE

Jamesburg, June 8.—The return to his home Wednesday of Charles C. Emens, who disappeared from here March 29 last, led Frank Pettee to confront Emens and demand that he tell the whereabouts of Mrs. Pette. According to Pettee, his wife left here the same day Emens vanished. To his question as to where Mrs. Pettee was, Emens, it is declared by Pettee, asserted that he knew nothing of her whereabouts. He said that his return home was hastened by the report reaching him that his name was coupled with that of Mrs. Pettee.

It was a stormy interview that took place between Emens and Peteee, the latter declaring that he would never drop the matter until the mystery was solved.

When Mrs. Pettee left here she took along her three-year-old son, Harvey. Emen's family, with the members of which he has now become reconciled, consisted of a wife and two daughters.

The first inkling as to the whereabouts of Emens was revealed in a letter he sent to Aaron Savidge, of Railroad avenue, in which he expressed the desire to know how his family managed to exist, whether his wife would welcome his return home and if Frank H. Pownall would again re-employ him. The letter set forth that Emens had become disabled by a fall and that he had been bedridden for six weeks. He also sent a letter to his daughter, Blanche. The letter was postmarked Pittsburg.

As a result of that postmark Pettee went to Pittsburg, and, aided by the police, is trying to locate his wife and boy.

Emens, when asked for a statement, refused to talk.

Emens was one of Jamesburg's best known young men. He was manager of the Frank H. Pownall Iron Foundry, a member of the Board of Education, receiving the highest vote ever given a candidate for office here; a member of the Royal Arcanum, Mechanics' Home Council, Jr. Order American Mechanics, and ex-chief of the fire department.

LOVELY AFTERNOON DRESS.

There is one shade of red for which no two salesmen give us the same name. It is not vividly bright, yet rich and full of life, exceedingly soft in tone, blending well with many colors and shades. There are dark toned luscious shades. There are dark toned luscious cherries of such a color, yet cerise gives an impression of something more vivid.

The heavy filets, Venetians and and combinations are used upon the flimsiest of stuffs, and though guimpes are as a rule exceedingly sheer, the great makers do not hesitate to introduce a guimpe of heavy lace when their fancy suggests such a whim.

A charming afternoon dress is in black and white striped silk, with a black taffeat overdress and touches of cherry color. Nearly every dress has revers of some kind or another, many have quite long sleeves, even the evening dresses, and the gleam of the arm under the net of some soft shade is very subtle.

Taffeta is to come back with a rush and is to be the silk par excellence another season. Of course, it is a taffeta little like the old silk called by that name, a silk wonderfully supple and light and shimmering, yet with teffeta weave and quality quite distinct from the satin crepe to which we have been so faithful.

Orphans at the Circus.

Through a courtesy of John G. Sheehy, of the Forepaugh & Sells shows, extended to The Daily Press, all the youngsters at the Children's Home enjoyed the afternoon performance of the big three ring circus this afternoon. The children were taken to and from in a stage provided by Charles J. Fisk.

Democrats Endorse a Ticket.

The Downtown Democratic Club, of Elizabeth, at a largely attended meeting in G. A. R. Hall, Elizabeth, last night, endorsed Fire Commisioner J. J. Collins, cousin of Gen. D. F. Collins, for sheriff; J. J. Manning for State Senator and J. S. Lowden, for the Assembly. They are all of Elizabeth.

Back from Honymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Clarkson, whose marriage took place at the Scotch Plains Baptist church parsonage on Tuesday night, have returned from their honeymoon trip and are residing on South avenue. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews performed the ceremony.

French Giant Is Nine and One-half Feet, and German Midget Is Twenty-eight Inches High.

Berlin.—This is a vivid illustration of the saying "Extremes meet."

Standing in full military regalia is Joseph Dusere, the French giant, who in his stocking feet measures no less than nine feet and a half in height.

But whom is he smiling at so benignly? Let us look closely. This young man whom we see perched on a chair, which in its turn is standing on a table, is one whom they call Prince Atom. Quite an appropriate name, isn't it? For be it known when Prince Atom rises in his full princely height he measures just twenty-eight inches.

Prince Atom is sixteen years old, and when the troubles of this world besiege him he just goes over to see his friend Dusere, who is twenty-six and therefore so much more experienced in the ways of the world, and seeks his advice. Even now we can see him whispering into the giant's ear. Perhaps he has done something naughty and is seeking the big fellow's protection.

WOMAN CIVIL WAR CAPTAIN.

Was Commissioned by Jefferson Davis and Is Sole Survivor of Nurses and Physicians Then Active.

Richmond, Va.—Captain Sallie L. Tompkins, the only woman commissioned by the Confederate States and sole survivor of the physicians and nurses who ministered to the dying and wounded in the old Robertson hospital during the civil war, stood on the site garbed in her old nurse's outfit and unveiled the tablet placed there by the Confederate Memorial society.

The matter of Miss Tompkins' commission is of interest. Several private hospitals had sprung up here, and, realizing the importance of having the ill and wounded immediately under government control, these were ordered closed. An investigation of the Roberts hospital followed, with the result of its establishment as the government hospital, while to avert an infringement of orders the secretary of war drew up a commission for its head, Miss Tompkins, and she was made a captain of cavalry, the commission being duly signed by Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy.

The precious paper was mislaid some years ago by Miss Tompkins, but recently was found in an old trunk. It now hangs framed on the walls of the Confederate museum here and is a treasured relic.

TO BUY MARK TWAIN'S HOME.

Missouri Legislature Also Asked to Appropriate Money For a Monument to Great American Humorist.

Jefferson City, Mo.—One and perhaps two measures will be introduced in the general assembly early in the session, calculated, if adopted, to commemorate and honor Mark Twain.

Senator Frank McAllister of Monroe will present a measure for purchasing the boyhood home of Samuel L. Clemens, which now stands within the corporate limits of Hannibal. Representative Frank Sosey of Marion has prepared a bill appropriating $10,000 for the erection of a monument to the humorist.

Judge Roy, secretary of the Hannibal Commercial club, said that if the legislature will provide for a monument the citizens of Hannibal will furnish the most conspicuous point in that city as a site.

This will probably be "Lover's Leap," a big bluff overlooking the Mississippi river, which is close to the cave Mr. Clemens made famous in "Tom Sawyer."

Uncle Sam's Good Memory.

Chardon, O.—"Uncle Sam has a good memory," says Orlando B. Chamberlin of Chardon, who has just received a check for $88.50 as compensation for clothes while serving in the civil war.

Mr. Chamberlin enlisted in the Thirty-fourth New York infantry at the age of seventeen years on June 1, 1861. He was wounded April 29, 1863. He then re-enlisted Dec. 29, 1863, in the Fourteenth New York artillery. He was the first man to carry a regimental flag into the crater at Petersburg, at which battle he was taken prisoner. He was released in Richmond May 29, 1865.

Mr. Chamberlin made application for his clothes account nearly two years ago and the bill, nearly fifty years old, has now been settled.

AVERS FORCEPS SEWED IN HER

Atlantic City, June 9.—Charging that Dr. Emery Marvel, of this city, who conducts a private hospital at 1801 Pacific avenue, left a pair of forceps sewed up inside her abdomen after performing an operation, Mrs. Eva Folsom, wife of Rev. J. E. R. Folsom, assistant secretary of the Baptist State Convention, has instituted suit in the Supreme Court at Trenton for $35,000 damages.

The operation was performed in September, 1908, in this city, where all the parties concerned reside. Mrs. Folsom alleged following her recovery from the operation she was attacked with severe pains, which she suffered until 1910, when a second operation was performed by Dr. J. L. Bear, head surgeon of the Cooper Hospital, Camden, and the forceps were disclosed. She nows sues jointly with her husband for the pain and inconvenience caused by the alleged neglect of the Atlantic City physician.

Dr. Marvel admitted Wednesday night he had received notice of the suit. He also admitted performing the operation upon the woman, but would make no further statement, referring all inquiries to his counsel, Coulombe & Sooy. Later the following statement was issued in his behalf:

"Mrs. Folsom has been an invalid since 1897. About 1902 she was operated upon by the same physician who afterward found the surgical instrument in her abdomen, two years after Dr. Marvel operated upon her.

"Dr. Marvel can prove the instrument found was not of his usage and could not be used in an operation of the character he performed. A physician is supposed to use every precaution. Of course, there are cases in which a physician can use his own judgment as to haste. This was not one of these, but it can be proved that Dr. Marvel used every care and all the time required."

The Minister and his wife, who reside at 2 States avenue, this city would not discuss the matter.

Edward J. LaPorte, formerly of Plainfield, but now of New York, is visiting his father, A. E. LaPorte, of Jackson avenue.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has received the following letter from Dr. Paul W. Harrison, the church missionary at Muscat, Arabia, which was read to the congregation on Sunday:

Muscat, Arabia, May 4th, 1911.
Dear Mr. Broek:

Just back from a three mile trip inland; we had a good time and sold 1,200 copies of the Scriptures, saw many new places and did some medical work. The opportunity is very great in some ways, even if hearts do seem to be hard.

Congratulations on all the material prosperity of Trinity; may its spiritual prosperity be even greater.

Yours,
P. W. HARRISON.

HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATED BY PRINCETON CHARTER

The Princeton Charter Club baseball team from Princeton defeated the Plainfield High School nine in a one-sided contest on Crescent Oval, yesterday afternoon by a score of 17 to 6. VanDeventer pitched a good game for the first three innings, only three men facing him in each period. The locals with two hits and the help of two passes scored two runs in the second inning.

Plainfield scored two runs in the third inning when, with two men on bases, Clarke got a three bagger. P. H. S. held the lead until the fourth inning, when VanDeventer weakened, allowing four runs, tieing the score, and after that they had things their own way. Clarke went into the box in the seventh, but could not hold the Princeton boys down. The score:

AN OWL STORY.

Showing the Tyranous Effect of Habit Upon This Most Singular Bird.

An English publication tells this interesting story of an owl:

A vague figure appeared out of the clouds, traveling against the wind toward the spire and looking more like a ragged piece of newspaper whirled about the heavens than any living thing. It was a white owl, and after watching him for some time I came to the conclusion that he was trying to get to the vane of the spire. A very idle ambition it seemed, for, although he succeeded again and again in getting to within a few yards of the point aimed at, he was on each occasion struck by a fresh violent gust and driven back to a great distance, often quite out of sight in the gloom. But presently he would reappear, still struggling to reach the vane. A crazy bird!

But I could not help admiring his pluck and greatly wondered what his secret motive in aiming at that windy perch could be. And at last, after so many defeats, he succeeded and grasped the metal crossbar with his crooked talons. The wind with all its fury could not tear him from it, and after a little flapping he was able to pull himself up, and then, bending down, he deliberately wiped his beak on the bar and flew away.

This, then, had been his powerful, mysterious motive—just to wipe his beak, which he could very well have wiped on any branch or barn roof or fence and saved himself that tremendous labor. This was an extreme instance of that tyrannous effect of habit on a wild animal. Doubtless this bird had been accustomed after devouring his first mouse to fly to the vane, where he could rest for a few minutes, taking a general view of the place, and wipe his beak at the same time, and the habit had become so strong that he could not forego his visit even on so tempestuous an evening.

THE FOREST PEOPLE.

A Curious Scotch Settlement In the Heart of France.

Attention has been called in France to a little British settlement which still exists in the very heart of the country not far from Bourges, in the province of Berry. Its inhabitants have received the name Foretains, or forest people. Their history is a curious one.

In recognition of the services which John Stuart, constable of Scotland, rendered to the French nation one of its kings, Charles VII., 500 years ago granted him a park in the forest of Hautebrune and subsequently gave the Scotchmen whom he settled there the right also of feeding pigs and cutting wood in the adjacent royal forest of Allogny. They also were exempted from the payment of general taxes, salt tax or the dues levied by the neighboring town of Bourges, and finally a royal magistrate was appointed for their special benefit.

This magistrate used to sit booted and spurred, with his sword by his side, and for many years his decisions were given without appeal not only in all civil but in criminal cases as well which affected the proprietors or humbler inhabitants of the forest.

The Scotchmen cleared the forest of its old trees and planted instead orchards and then invited others of their countrymen to come and join them. Since then they have preserved something of their Scotch origin as well as their lofty, stalwart, active and vigorous form. They cultivate both beards and whiskers and both in accent and peculiarities of speech show their descent.

In dress they only differ from the inhabitants about them by wearing long leggings with spurs attached. Many of the names are Scotch or English, such as Talbot, Cromwell, Halliday and Godwin.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Going the Wrong Way.

A self conscious and egotistical young clergyman was called to a church in a small town in upper New York. After his first service the youthful minister asked one of the deacons, a big hearted but extremely plain spoken old fellow, what he thought of "this morning's effort."

The deacon was silent a few moments before replying. Finally he said:

"Well, I'll put it to ye in a kind of parable. It reminded me of Tom Dorgan's fust deer hunt, when he was green. He follered the deer's tracks all right, but he follered 'em all day in the wrong direction."

Love and a Shining Mark.

Percy—I came to ask you for the hand of your daughter.

Goldrox—Which one?

"Why, Elsie!"

"Oh, she's in school yet! She wouldn't think of such a thing."

"Well, Ethel, then."

"Oh, Ethel is too young!"

"Then give me Mary in marriage. She's old enough."

"Oh, yes; Mary is old enough to know better!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Practical View.

"So you believe in marrying for love?" asked the innocent maid.

"Yes, to a certain extent," replied the fair widow, "but marrying for love without a side issue of bread and butter is like sipping the froth from a glass of soda water."—Chicago News.

Literal.

Mistress—Do you clean rooms with alacrity? Applicant—I gin'rally prefers patent sweepers, mum.—Baltimore American.

Intelligence of Rats.

The fierceness of the rat and its great capacity for increase are enough to make it a formidable enemy, but with these qualities it combines intelligence. It is truly marvelous how one small head can carry all it knows. Every housekeeper realizes how hard it is to catch rats, because they are often too wise to enter traps, however tempting the bait.

Quite Clear.

The following notice is posted up in the signal box of a certain railway:

"Hereafter when trains moving in an opposite direction are approaching each other on separate lines conductors and engineers will be required to bring their respective trains to a dead halt before the point of meeting and be very careful not to proceed till each train has passed the other!"—London Express.

An Ancient City.

Rhodes still survives, a mediaeval city in all its defensive war gear of tower and curtain and keep. It is the city which the Knights of St. John erected in the midst of the Byzantines after they had been driven out of Jerusalem in the early fourteenth century. Probably few travelers realize how well preserved the tremendous fortifications and dwellings are.

Very Bad Habit.

A young mother asks us our opinion of "the alleged injurious effects of rocking on babies."

We must frankly say that we consider it a brutal practice. As the father of a great many babies, we never rocked on any of them intentionally, and we would probably be arrested if we expressed our full opinion of any woman who would presume to do so.—Lippincott's.

Her Case In Point.

One day a discussion arose in the nursery. Will said a thing was so. Mabel said it wasn't.

"But if I say it's so, it is so," said Will.

"Saying a thing is so doesn't make it so," answered Mabel stoutly. "Now, suppose you say you're a good boy. That doesn't make you one, does it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Had Heard of Him.

"Officer," said the whimsical tourist to the big, strapping policeman who had saved him from being run over by an automobile, "you remind me of a character in one of Kipling's stories. You've heard of Kipling?"

"Kip Ling?" said Officer Hooligan. "Sure! He runs a Chinese laundry about four blocks from where I live. Trot right along, sonny." — Chicago Tribune.

California's Big Trees.

The great trees of California, it has been said, began life before the earliest dawn of Chinese history and at the time of the deluge were older than the art of printing from type is today. Professor Charles E. Bessey, however, contends that even 2,000 years is a great overestimate, actual ring count of a tree twenty-five feet in diameter having indicated only 1,147 years.

Breaking It Gently.

"Dear sirs," begins a Babu business letter from Calcutta forwarded by a reader, "we conform our last respect of the 10th inst. and have none of favors to acknowledge. We beg to announce that a deep misty cloud hovered over us for eight days and did not clear itself away until it washed off our hands our most steady, energetic and pious Tunwi manager."—London Globe.

The Bravest Soldier.

Frederick the Great after a terrible engagement asked his officers who behaved most intrepidly during the engagement. The preference was unanimously given to himself.

"You are mistaken," said the monarch. "The bravest fellow was a fifer whom I passed twenty times during the engagement and who did not cease or vary a note the whole time."

Making It Pleasant For Him.

"Gentlemen," said the toastmaster at the banquet, "we have listened to some excellent orators this evening, and I am sure we have enjoyed their efforts very much. I have purposely kept one of our best speakers for the last, and after you have heard him I know you will be glad to go home. Gentlemen, I have the honor to present Mr. Ketchum A. Cummin, who will now address you."—Chicago Tribune.

Cain as a Baptismal Name.

"Cain is doubtless rare as a baptismal name," writes a correspondent, "but I know a man, a blacksmith at Leiston, who was named Cain Hammond." A reader in Portsmouth says: "I am reminded of the peculiar case of an old shipmate of mine, Mr. Cain Mahoney, who was a W. O. in the navy. His version of the misfortune was that his parents, who were Irish, desired that he should bear the name of Kean Mahoney, but the brogue produced the name which he afterward carried through life."—London News.

The Home of the Clove.

The principal source of the world's clove supply is Zanzibar and the neighboring island of Pemba, East Africa. A ten-year-old plantation should produce twenty pounds of cloves to the tree. Trees of twenty years frequently produce upward of 100 pounds each. Besides the buds, the stems are gathered and form an article of commerce, commanding one-fifth the price of cloves and having about the same percentage of strength. To this is due the fact that ground cloves can be bought at a lower price than the whole cloves.

SECTION 17.

Cement or Concrete Hollow Building Blocks.

(1) Moulded or cast hollow building blocks, of concrete, cement, or other hard incombustible material may be used for walls of any building not more than thirty-six feet in height, provided the materials are not stressed beyond the safe limits fixed by this section; provided that the use of terra cotta blocks for walls of any building shall be governed by the provisions of section 17½ of this ordinance.

(2) No such blocks shall be used until complete and satisfactory tests have been made by the manufacturer under the direction of the Inspector of Buildings, in accordance with the requirements of Sections 25 of this Code and until an approval for the use of such blocks has been obtained.

(3) No blocks shall be approved that do not at the age of twenty-eight days or less develop a compressive strength of at least one thousand five hundred pounds per square inch of net section.

(4) In no cases shall the hollow spaces of a block exceed thirty-three and one-third per centum of the cross section of the block.

(5) The thickness of the walls or webs of such blocks shall be not less than one-fourth of the heighth of the blocks, but in no case less than one inch thick.

(6) All such walls shall be laid in Portland cement mortar.

(7) Buildings of hollow cement or concrete blocks laid in cement mortar, shall be classed as non-fireproof construction when floors and roofs are of wood. The blocks shall not be less than six inches thick for a one story building; eight inches for the first story and six inches for the second story in a two story building; eight inches for the first and second stories and six inches for the third story in a three story building.

(8) Whenever girders or joists rest upon walls so that there is a concentrated load of over two tons, the blocks supporting the girders or joists shall be made solid by filling at least two contiguous blocks with cement concrete, mixed in proportion of one cement, two parts sand and four parts broken stone or gravel. Wherever walls are decreased in thickness, the top course of the thicker wall shall be made solid in the same manner.

(9) No cement or concrete blocks shall be loaded in excess of three hundred pounds per square inch of net and section in compression or one hundred pounds per square inch if laid on the side. All piers and buttresses that support loads in excess of five tons shall be filled solid with cement concrete. Lintels spanning over four feet six inches in the clear shall rest on blocks filled solid with concrete, or an equivalent in iron support.

(10) When used for curtain walls between supporting piers not over twenty feet apart, on centers not more than twelve feet in height between girders, cement or concrete blocks not less than eight inches in thickness, set in cement may be used, reinforcing by concrete filling to the extent necessary and directed by the Inspector.

(11) For foundations not over ten feet in height, of frame buildings and of buildings as per clause seven of this section, cement or concrete blocks set and if necessary, reinforced as above, not less than twelve inches thick may be used.

Section 2. That a new section be added to said ordinance to be numbered 17½ and to read as follows:

SECTION 17½.

Hollow Terra Cotta Blocks.

(1) Hard Burnt Terra Cotta Blocks may be used for walls of any building not more than forty feet in height, provided the materials are not stressed beyond the safe limits fixed in this section.

(2) No such blocks shall be used until complete and satisfactory tests have been made by the manufacturer under the directions of the Inspector of Buildings in accordance with the requirements of Section 25 of this Code, and until the approval for the use of such blocks has been obtained.

(3) No blocks shall be approved that do not develop a compressive strength of at least three thousand five hundred pounds per square inch of net section.

(4) In no cases shall the hollow spaces of a block exceed sixty per centum of the cross section of the block.

(5) The thickness of the shell shall be 13-16 of an inch and the webs ⅝ of an inch.

(6) All mortar used for laying up the Terra Cotta Blocks shall consist of a standard Portland cement and clean sharp sand, in the proportion of one part cement to three parts sand, well mixed to a smooth moderately stiff mortar. Lime, well slacked and not to exceed 10 per cent of the cement, by volume, will be allowed in the mortar.

(7) Buildings of Hollow Terra Cotta Blocks laid in cement mortar shall be classed as non-fireproof construction, when the floors and roof are of wood.

Thickness of walls shall be not less than is required by law for brick walls, except where Hollow Tile Blocks are used as a substitute for wood construction, the exterior walls shall be not less than the following thicknesses:

(e) The foundation walls shall be not less than 4 inches thicker than the first story walls, provided that no foundation wall shall be less than 12 inches thick.

Except for foundations not over 7 feet 6 inches in height of small frame houses of light construction, blocks 8 inches thick may be used in lengths not exceeding twenty linear feet between masonry cross walls or buttress piers of dimensions approved by the Inspector.

If the walls are exposed to the weather the blocks shall be of dense material, vitrified in burning, or they may be of dense material hard burned but not vitrified, covered on the exposed side with at least one inch of cement plaster. All blocks shall be dovetail scored to retain this coating.

(8) Whenever girders or joists rest upon walls so that there is a concentrated load of over ten tons, the blocks supporting the girders or joists shall be made solid by filling at least two contiguous blocks with cement mixed in proportion of one part cement, two parts sand and four parts broken stone or gravel Wherever walls are decreased in thickness, the top course of the thicker wall shall be made solid in the same manner.

(9) No hollow blocks shall be loaded in excess of one hundred pounds per square inch of net section in compression, if laid on the side, or in excess of three hundred pounds per square inch if set on end. INSTALL A PASTOR

Rev. Evarts C. Conover's Induction as Minister of the Temple Baptist Church.

MANY DIVINES PARTICIPATE.

Rev. Mr. Mathiews Delivers Sermon; Rev. Mr. Maguire Charge to People; Rev. Mr. Fletcher Charge to Congregation.

Rev. Evarts C. Conover was installed as pastor of the Temple Baptist church last night, with impressive exercises in which several pastors of the city had a part. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, was the moderator and not only conducted the opening exercises, reading Scripture and offering prayer, but also introducing the other speakers and in addition bringing the greetings of his church and congratulations of his people to the new pastor and the Temple Baptist church.

There was special music under the direction of W. A. Conger, organist, who was assisted by Elmer E. Wheeler, flute; Dr. J. F. Berg, 'cello, and Dyckman Winckler, violin. This was a feature, the orchestra rending special selections and also assisting in the singing of hymns.

Others who made addresses were Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, who delivered the sermon; Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, who delivered the charge to the people; Rev. Frank Fletcher, who delivered the charge to the new pastor; Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. Dr C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who spoke on behalf of their own and other churches; also extending a welcome to Mr. Conover to the city and the fellowship of the churches.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, who delivered a short sermon, said that he was glad to be present for the special reason that he went to school with Mr. Conover. He said that above the minister and the church there is one Christ, who is the Head of the Church.

"You may be full of enthusiasm," said the speaker, "but it needs direction. There must also be power behind it. The motive power of the Christian and the Church must be for Christ's sake. One must have the all-consuming passion of working for Christ. Out of the lives of common men with this power valiant things have been done for Christ When the message comes for Christ's sake, answer it.

"The most vital thing in the world today is the church and we must have allegiance to Christ. In the name of Christ I trust you will go forward for His sake.'

In charging the people, Mr. Maguire said that he wanted to speak of three great "P's", the first of which was "Pay up." This he said was essential, and don't forget that when you hire the pastor you do not hire his wife. She belongs to him and not the church. He is your minister for Christ's sake, but you are not his master by any means. Keep your hands and tongues off of his wife and every year appreciate your pastor's work by increasing his salary.

"The next is 'Push.' Put on the whole armor of God. Speak a good word for your pastor. Attend your own church. Don't go boarding at churches, we don't want you. Cheer your pastor continually and encourage him in his work. The next is 'Pray.' Don't come to church until you have prayed for God's blessing. Attend the services regularly. Every Sunday morning you see people sitting on their porches reading the Sunday newspapers. They cannot get the blessings of God in this way. If you live up to the three P's you will be a power under the banner of 'One Lord, One Faith and One Baptism.'"

Rev. Frank Fletcher extended a hearty welcome to the pastor, as he delivered the charge in a brief address. "I charge you when discouraged to seek the Higher Power," said the speaker. "In the short time that I served these people I learned to love them and you will find that they will rally to your support, and may God's richest blessing rest upon you and your people. It will I know if you come here with a full purpose of heart. I charge you not to swerve one inch from God's purpose.

Dr. Chambliss took occasion ot extend the greetings and congratulations of his church at this time. He said that he already loved the new pastor, that he could not look at him without having that love for him."

Rev. Dr. Herring spoke particularly of the "Law of Help," and cautioned the people not to expect too much of their pastor. Dr. Herring said that he thought he was the only

MAY STOP SUNDAY BASEBALL GAMES

Fanwood Township's committee will meet tonight to consider the question of prohibiting Sunday baseball at Scotch Plains. The members and officers of the baseball club say that if it can be shown that Sunday baseball is a nuisance they are willing to give up the game. On the other hand they claim that they have been assured that they would not be molested if the game was conduced in an orderly manner.

The neighbors are all interested and agree to allow the club to play under these conditions and they claim that the organization lives up to the agreements made. No complaints have been made by those in the vicinity of the diamond, it is asserted.

The Township Committee has found an old ordinance which forbids athletic meets, entertainments, dances or games of any kind without a license. The club, it is stated, is willing to take out such a license but the committee will not grant it according to the report. Counsel has been retained b ythe baseball team. A game is scheduled for tomorrow and if stopped a test case will be made in the courts, the fans say.

CONOVER IN THE BOX FOR MINISTERS' TEAM

A great baseball find has been made by Captain Maguire of the Ministers' nine which plays the Doctors' team on Crescent Oval, Saturday, June 17. He is Rev. E. C. Conover, the newly installed pastor of the Temple Baptist church. Mr. Conover is a dozen kinds of a good ball player. He learned the game at Bucknell University and when he was captain of the varsity nine on his team was none other than the famous "Christy" Matthewson, the world's greatest pitcher. Mr. Conover himself, who taught Matty much about the art, will be seen in the box for the preachers.

Behind the bat for the dominies, who claim that they will not let the amputators score a run, will be Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey. The latter will tell you how he stood behind the bat for erorless games in "them happy" college days.And believe us, he is some pitcher. When Mr. Conover gets his arm well tired out they will exchange places at the points.

At the practice this morning Captain Maguire announced also that Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson would occupy first bag; Rev. C. S. Kemble, second, and Rev. C. H. Mallery, third. Rev. Mr. Allen, who played on the Crozier team, will be at short. The outfield has not been selected.

"Those amputators will never discover home plate," said Captain Maguire after the practice this morning.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT THE BAPTIST CHURCHES.

The Children's Day exercies at the First Baptist church tomorrow will be held in the afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will preach at the morning service at 10:30. The regular evening service will be omitted as the congregation has been invited and urged to attend the service in the Crescent avenue church to hear Dr. Schauffler, the world-famous Bible school speaker.

The Sunday school of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold Children's Day exercises tomorrow morning. In the evening at 7:30 Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire will preach on the subject, "The Scarlet Cord."

Accepts Position as General Foreman with A. C. Thompson Auto Co.

Mr. H. L. Wlech, of New York, who has held the positions of general foreman and consulting engineer during the past eight years at Moore & Munger, Fiat Holtan Co., and The Darcq Co., of New York, has accepted a similar position with the A. C. Thompson Auto Co., of this city. Mr. Welch is way up in the automobile and mechanical line, and was considered one of the most expert automobile engineers in New York. With Mr. Welch in charge of the largest and one of the best equipped repair shops, assisted by a large number of the best automobile mechanics, the Thompson Auto Co. are now well equipped to turn out the most difficult and particular work in the shortest length of time. ***

Popular Opinion.

If the popular opinion of Limburger was sought the verdict would probably be—"don't like it for a scent." If you are seeking, however, for something "in good odor" in another commercial line, Geo. O. Stevens says his coal is "just the cheese." ***

BUS TIME SCHEDULE FOR NEW BRUNSWICK

An automobile passenger line running cars about once in two hours between New Brunswick and Plainfield, will start service next week, possibly on Monday. The chief backer of the enterprise is J. Hauvette-Michelin of the Michlein Tire Co., of Milltown.

A company has been organized to conduct this enterprise, known as the Brunswick Motor Co. It is a close corporation, with the authorized capital of $5,000, fully subscribed as follows: J. Hauvette-Michelin, $4,-800; Stephen Bridier, of Milltown, $100; John P. Murray, of Plainfield, $100.

The organizers will meet this afternoon to make their final plans. They have already secured two limousine cars for the service, which are an improved type of taxicab. The trips from New Brunswick will be started from in front of Schussler's on George street, where advance reservations may be made. The fare will be 50 cents each way, and the cars will make the trip in 35 minutes. If the patronage warrants, more cars will be put on.

The service will be widely different from that of the auto-bus lines tried in various parts of the country. The cars will be as comfortable and speedy as touring cars, and will be run absolutely on schedule.

M. L. Cramer, of the Michlin Co., had one of the cars in this city yesterday and took Mayor Moy for a ride in it. The Mayor was highly pleased with it , and rode to the grounds where Forepaugh's circus is showing.

The proposed schedule of the cars is as follows:

Leave New Brunswick, week days—8:50 and 10:10 a. m.; 1:30, 2:40, 4, 5:20 and 6:40 p. m. Sundays—8:50, 10:10 and 11:20 a. m. .. .. ..

Leave Plainfield Week days—9:30, 10:40 a. m.; 2:10, 3:20, 4:40, 6, and 7:20 p. m. Sundays—9:30 and 10:40 a. m. and 12 noon.

The cars are Renault limousines. Only one will be in service at the start, the other being held in reserve in case of accidents. The starting place at this city will be Armstrong's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

The cars will hold five passengers but four may reserve it to themselves for a trip.

CAMP MEETING SERVICE OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

A goodly number of persons enjoyed the first summer camp meeting held last evening by the Plainfield corps of the Salvation Army, at Wayside Park. The dance auditorius, situated in the cool and beautiful woods afforded an ideal spot for the service. Around the pavilion camp fires were burning, giving the appearance of the old time camp meetings of fifty years ago.

A varied program of instrumental music was rendered by a trio and vocal solos by Edward Brunn and Captain Lena Jackson. The old time gospel hymns sung heartily by the congregation made the woods resound. Adjutant Mrs. Jackson delivered a strong gospel address, taking for her text, Matt 9: 36, "When he saw the multitude he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd."

The suggestion that another meet- be held next Friday evening, met with approval and it was anounced for 8 o'clock.

Surprise Louis Bennett.

Louis Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. Benett, of Duer street, was given a surprise party at his home, last night by a company of twenty-five young friends. Games and music combined to afford a pleasant evening, after which all adjourned to the lawn which was attractively decorated with Japanese lanterns and tables and progressive games were played and refreshments were served out-of-doors.

VISIT COAL MINES

Local Dealers and Others Spent Two Days In Anthracite Region.

GATHERED AT A BANQUET.

Sugar Notch, Harvey's Lake, Mauch Chunk and Other Places in Penna Enjoyed by the Plainfield Pilgrims.

Members of the Plainfield Retail Coal Dealers' Credit Association to the number of about fifty, including several friends, returned home at 7 o'clock last night from a delightful two-days' trip to the coal mines of Pennsylvania. The party was enthusiastic over its trip and the fine entertainment provided by the mine operators for them while at Wilkes-Barre and Mauch Chunk. Those in the party included dealers from Roselle to Somerville as well.

The party arrived at Wilkes-Barre. Thursday afternoon about 2 o'clock and after witnessing the mining and preparation of coal at two collieries of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company, they went to Harvey's Lake and enjoyed a banquet. Hugh A. Todd, president of the association and Joseph Harrigan, chairman of the committee of arrangements, had charge of the party.

When the dealers arrived at Wilkes-Barre they were met by Messrs. Gardner and Curran, representatives of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Company and taken to the Nottingham breaker at Plymouth. Here a demonstration was given in the separation of coal before it is sent out to the consumer. At this colliery the work is done by modern machinery and the exhibition was a success. making an impression on those of the party who had never seen the inside of a coal breaker or mine.

The party was then escorted to No. 9 colliery at Sugar Notch, where they were met by the superintendents and taken through the mine and watched the mining of coal before it is sent to the breaker. Leaving the mine the dealers were conveyed in a special car to Harvey's Lake, where a banquet was served at the Oneonta. The banquet was served in the spacious dining room, Joseph Harrigan was toastmaster and made an interesting address.

Following an elaborate menu the speechmaking proved enjoyable. Mr. Harrigan, James F. Buckle, Mr. Todd and George O. Stevens, in responding in behalf of the association, thanked the officials of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company for their magnanimous entertainment. Mr. Curran responded in behalf of the company and said that he was glad to know that the efforts of the companys' representative had been appreciated.

Thursday night the party stopped at the Sterling Hotel and yesterday morning left on the 7:42 train for Mauch Chunk, where they were guests yesterday of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company. Boarding a special train of the company the dealers took a trip up through the Panther Valley section, where they again saw a practical demonstration of the workings of the coal mines made under the supervision of Carroll Moore, of New York general sales agent, who escorted the party. A fine dinner was enjoyed at the company's clubhouse at Lansford. A majority of the party are Elks and while in Pennsylvania they visited local members of the lodge.

TAR AND FEATHERS THREAT SENT CRITIC

An anonymous letter threatening tar and feathers has been received by former Mayor J. B. Furber, of Rahway, as an answer to his criticism of the Rahway fire department for intoxication at the recent blaze at the Royal Manufacturing Company's plant in that city.

Exception has been taken to the criticism by certain members of the department. The letter received by Mr. Furber follows:

"Dear James—The elimination committee of the fire department are about to apply the process to you. Your advertisements and circulation will be a thing of the past and you will fall with a thud. If necessary a little dynamite will raze your plant, and tar and feathers for you. Yours, COMMITTEE.

"P. S.—Montclair made it too warm for you. So will Rahway."

Protection Hose Company No. 2, at a special meeting Thursday night, resolved to contradict many of the stories in circulation regarding alleged matters at the fire and endeavor to discover from whence they came. Furber is the owner and editor of the Rahway News-Herald.

FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS DOES BIG BUSINESS

Thousands of people who witnessed the performance of the Forepaugh & Sells Brothers circus in this city yesterday, declared today that it was the best show of the kind that has been seen in Plainfield in years. For variety and excellence of acts, courteous treatment by officials and employes and general all-round business like methods, it had anything in the tented amusement field beat a mile. On the other hand the circus management declared themselves as well pleased with the patronage accorded. The "big top" had a fine matinee crowd and last night it was packed beyond the so-called capacity mark. Extra chairs were placed in all the aisles of the reserved sections and late-comers had to sit along the hippodrome track. The show came via High Bridge from Dover and left at 2 o'clock this morning for Long Branch, where it appears today.

To the old-time circus goer one of the most notable departments was the youth and vivaciousness of the women performers in the big show. The management must have cornered the market on pretty equestriennes and acrobats. The attendants, too, were a gentlemanly lot of fellows, who showed by their attention to patrons that they were on hand to do something beside getting "step lively" or crowding the kids together to make room for one more.

The three rings and two stadiums furnished plenty of diversion for over two hours. All the displays were splendid. To pick out any one particular one would be like showing partiality. It may be said, however, that the clowns were chock-full of new tricks and beyond all shadow of a doubt, the one who played a baseball game by himself will be remembered when verything else has faded away. He caused roar after roar of laughter in his ludicrous attempt to catch a sky-high fly, bat out hot liners and then finish up with an argument with the umpire. It was the kind of fun that makes a man grow young again.

Truly, the Forepaugh & Sells show was all to the good and will be a welcome visitor in summers to come.

It was largely attended by women from all parts of the State who were principally interested in the demonstration of practical housekeeping. Special trains conveyed large parties to Colonia, which is the home of last year's president of the Federation, Mrs. Patterson.

The demonstration is conducted by the art economy and cooking departments of the federation. All women interested in the subject ar invited to attend.

Accused by Child.

George Madine and Jack Humifor, two young men whose homes are in Paterson, were lodged in jail at Summit late yesterday afternoon charged with criminally assaulting Helen Dubery, as she was on her way home from the Springfield school yesterday afternoon. The child is in Overbrook Hospital, Summit, in a dying condition. The men protest their innocence but the victim give an excellent description of her assailants. She crawled nearly a mile to get home after the assault.

The girl's tennis tournament which was scheduled to be played at the Plainfield Country Club today, has been postponed to Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

At the time of the earthquake in San Francisco, Mr. Vestergard and his family lived there and they had some exciting experiences. After the he removed to this city. He was employed on the construction wark of the Frost building on Park avenue, which he finished last Jaunary. LIQUOR TRAFFIC FOE TO URGE LOCAL OPTION

Former Governor R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina, will speak at a union mass meeting in the Trinity Reformed church, Monday evening. He will talk on the liquor question and the local option issue in New Jersey. Since his retirement from politics he has become one of the best known champions of this cause in the nation. He points with pride to the fact that during his administration the people of North Carolina by a referendum vote banished the liquor traffic by 45,000 majority. He led in the fight himself, making one-hundred and twenty-five speeches.

Governor Glenn is a lawyer and has had a great deal of experience with the liquor traffic in his state, both as a district attorney and as Governor of the State. He is one of the most eloquent speakers on the American platform. Recently a prominent New Jersey official said that in his judgment there was only one better orator in the country than William Jennings Bryan, and he was Governor Glenn.

AFTER TROLLEY CO.

Police Chief Kiely Serves Notice on P. S. C. to Stop Blocking Traffic.

THREAT WORKS LIKE CHARM.

The Complaint is General Against Company for its Rolling Stock, Road Beds and Service Here.

Owing to the heavy traffic of automobiles, carriages and trolley cars on Front street, the city has insisted upon the Public Service Corporation keeping a man at Front street and Park avenue to attend to the switch, thereby preventing the cars from blocking travel. It is understood that the company has kept a man at that point on Saturday nights, but this morning there was a conference between Chief of Police Kiely and representatives of the company relative to infractions of the regulations.

Chief Kiely finally informed the trolley people that unless there was a man on duty at the switch before 1 o'clock today, he would give orders to arrest trolley crews and he would block the whole line. The demand worked like a charm and a man was promptly sent to Park avenue and Front street. The company, it is understood, has ordered an electric switch to be installed at Front and Somerset streets, and until that is put in a man will be always on duty there. The situation was further aggravated this morning because of the great number of autos going through here on the way to Princeton for the Princeton-Yale baseball game.

There is continual complaint about the antiquated cars being used on the Arlington avenue, Netherwood and Fourth street lines, they being considered a positive disgrace to the city the authorities say. Time and again efforts have been made to have the company replace the old cars with modern ones, but each effort has failed.

The public affairs committee of the Council is being severely criticized for this condition of things, it being said that the members have done absolutely nothing to remedy the trouble. The roadbeds on the Arlington avenue and Netherwood lines are said to be in dangerous condition. Trolleys are likely to go over the track owing to depressions in the tracks and in general the equipment is about as bad as possible.

Another condition complained of is that the Arlington avenue cars block the street at North and Watchung avenues, during rush hours, which is against the rules. The trolley stand has been established at Fourth street and Watchung avenue and it is declared that the cars should meet at that point and not block travel at other congested points. These matters will probably be brought to the attention of the authorities at once with a view to getting prompt relief.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett said today that there had been many complaints about the work of the trolley sprinkling car. He said he had taken the matter up with Superintendent Gettings, of the P. S. C., and the latter informed him that he was dissatisfied with the man operating the car and that a change would be made today.

SATURDAY MORNING IN THE POLICE COURT.

Grant H. Leavers, of Grove street, arrested for assaulting his wife on West Fourth street, was given a suspended sentence and a scathing lcture by Judge DeMeza in the police court this morning. Mrs. Leavers is separated from her husband.

Warren McCauley, who was found in a drunk and disorderly condition at the Grant avenue station of the Jersey Central last night, was given a sentence of $5 or twenty days. He paid.

Five boys arrested for stealing cherries were given suspended sentences.

WILL HEAR KICKS OF CITY AND RAILROAD

Trenton, June 10.—Several of the differences between the city of Elizabeth and the Central Railroad will be aired before the Board of Public Utility Commissioners at a public hearing to be given in Newark next Friday. The protection of grade crossings, the operation of trains through the municipality and similar subjects will be taken up.

The most recent complaint filed by the railroad attacks the new ordinance of the city which makes it unlawful for the railroad to run any of its locomotives or cars across any of the streets which the tracks intersect at grade on the Elizabethport and Perth Amboy division, at a greater speed than six miles an hour.

The company claims that it cannot comply with the ordinance and at the same time operate its trains and carry on its freight and passenger business in a proper manner over the branch. The complaint admits that it is not practicable for the cars to ascend the grade of the branch at the prescribed rate of speed, without becoming stalled.

This the company asserts would necessitate cutting many of the trains into two and taking them up the grade in separate sections. It says that the practice would cause great danger of collision between trains which might become stalled and those following them.

At the same hearing the board will take up the complaint of the city alleging that the Central depot at Elizabeth avenue and the junction of the Elizabethport and Perth Amboy branch with the main line, is so constructed that passengers are compelled to alight from both north and south bound trains on the same side, and that in consequence many persons have been killed while lawfully attempting to board or alight from trains.

A further allegation in the petition is that the railroad's crossings are left unprotected after nine o'clock at night in consequence of which several accidents have happened. One of the requests of the city is that the board shall require the railroad to construct fences along its right of way and to maintain gatemen at all grade crossings.

The company, as previously announced, has filed an answer in the petition tendering itself ready to submit to the Board of Utility Commissioners as arbitrators, the question of eliminating all grade crossings in Elizabeth. The company opposes several of the requests made by the city upon the ground that they are impracticable.

AS SAFEGUARD FOR RAILROAD EMPLOYES

Trenton, June 10.—For the protection of railroad employes whose duties require them to go under or between cars for the purpose of inspecting them, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners has adopted several recommendations which will be forwarded to the various railroad companies. The subject is one which has occupied the attention of the board for some time, a thorough study of the subject having been made before the recommendation was adopted. These are as follows:

"That a sufficient number of blue flags and blue lanterns be kept easy of access for use by car repairers, air brake inspectors, car inspectors, air brake repairers, and all others, whose duties require them to go under, between or about cars for the purpose of inspecting or repairing them. A blue flag should be displayed by day, and a blue lantern by night, at one or both ends of an engine, car or train when an employe is at work under or about the same.

"When weather or other conditions make it advisable, lanterns instead of flags should be displayed at day. Inspectors should be thoroughly instructed as to the proper use of flags and lanterns. Combined blue and red flags or metal standards and combined blue and red lights may be used in place of blue flags and blue lanterns mentioned above where the practice of railroad companies is to use such combined flags, standards or lights.

Rule 26 of the standard code of train rules of the American Railway Association in regard to the removal of a signal place as mentioned above, the coupling or movement of a car protected by such signal should be observed.

"Any inspector who works under or above an engine, car or train and disregards instructions given him as to the use of signals for his protection should be disciplined."

PATERSON'S MAYOR TO ELIZABETH TRADE BODY.

Elizabeth, June 10.—Before the Board of Trade here Thursday night Mayor Andrew F. McBride, of Paterson, made a lengthy speech in favor of commission form of government as it prevails in his city. There finance, fire and board of works commissions are appointed and are bipartizan.

The Mayor asserted he was not opposed to the Walsh commission government law itself, but was not desirous of having it apply to his city, since the appointive plan in vogue there for the last five years had proved the ideal form of government and was satisfactory to the taxpayers in general.

Mr. McBride devoted much of his talk to an explanation of the method of government in Paterson and the advantages of it, as well as the results that followed its adoption. He declared, among other things, that in consequence of the appointive commission form of rule, Paterson was the only city in the State where the taxes did not increase with the population.

SYNOD HEARS OF BIG GAINS

Asbury Park, June. 10—The most important business before the general synod of the Reformed Church of America yesterday was the reading of the report of the committee on the state of religion. This showed that the Reformed church had gained 473 in members during the year, making a total membership of 117,288.

This is divided into twenty-six classes, 689 churches, a gain of five; 750 ministers, a gain of twelve; 65 675 families, a gain of 725; received on confession of faith, 5,674, a loss of 233; received by certificate, 4,011; dismissed, 3,308; suspended, 74; died, 1,864.

The report further showed: Adherents, 19,844; gain, 1,728; absent, 19,262; gain of 1,152; infants baptized, 5,158; loss of 367; adults baptized, 1,019; gain of 44; baptized non-communicants, 45,374; gain of 730; catchism, 24,796; loss of 257; Sunday-schools, 775; loss of 1.

Contributions for denominational objects amounted to $402,466, or a gain of $12,690; other objects, $105,861, gain of $9,987; congregational purposes, $1,615,727, gain of $46,645.

It was noted that only about one infant was baptized for every twelve families. "With a steady decrease of children born in the church" says the report, " and of infants identified with the church by baptism, the Reformed church will slowly die out from lack of natural possibility to continue. But this condition seems not entirely caused by the so-called race suicide, for we find that of adults there were forty-four more baptized than last year. Baptism seems to have been neglected by the parents."

When the synod convened yesterday morning the attendance was much larger than at the opening session Thursday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Albertus Pieters, the vice-president, conducted the devotional service, following which the roll was called.

President Pockman announced as chairman of the various committees the following: Board of directors, Elder F. H. Hutton; professorate and theological seminaries, Rev. A. Vanderberg; foreign missioners, Rev. Anne Vehnema; domestic missioners, Rev. D. A. Jones; overtures, Rev. E. S. Ralston; education academies, colleges, Rev. Willard Conger; Sunday-schools and Young People's societies, H. A. Kinports.

Publications, Rev. Charles W. Gulick; widows' fund, Rev. Dr. George S. Bishop, of East Orange; disabled ministers' fund, Rev. J. V. VanFleet; special minutes and preferences, Rev. E. A. Meury; judicial business, Rev. F. V. Vranken; correspondence, Rev. Irving Berg, benevolent societies, Rev. C. Kuyper; systematic benevolence, Rev. D. G. Rockefeller; program, Rev. G. M. Conover; slated religion, Rev. P. T. Pockman; necrology, Rev. E. T. Crowin; accounts, Rev. J. Y. Broek; leave of absence, John Van Der Meulen; resolutions, Rev. E. A. Maccullom; next place of meeting, Rev. Alburtus T. Broek.

The report of the committee on proposed amendments to the constitution contained several important amendments referred to the removal of delinquent members from churches. Heretofore to remove a delinquent member a church trial has been necessary, and this was often the cause of a great deal of publicity. The proposed amendment along this line is as follows:

"If any member of the church shall by long and persistent absence from its stated services and sacraments, and by indifference to or disregard of repeated efforts by pastor and consistory to restore one, make it plain that a continuance of such membership is not desired, or that its existence is in fact denied, the pastor and elders may enter a minute on the church record of their earnest and unsuccessful effort, and the member's name by unanimous vote may then be removed from the roll."

Such persons may be restored by action profession of penitence, and a renewal of the vows of Christian membership and a promise of amendment."

Concerning candidates one of the proposed amendments reads: "A candidate who has accepted a call must be examined by the Classis as to his fitness to become a minister.

"In this final examination, the Classis may accept the results of previous examinations duly certified for licensure by a classis as respects scholatic attainments, composition and sermonizing, knowledge of the original languages of the sacred scriptures, biblical literature and ecclesiastical history in lieu of a repetition of such examinations.

"The licentiate shall be re-examined in Theology on the duties of the ministry, on church government and on the nature and administration of the sacraments."

A resolution was offered that former President Roosevelt be asked to address the synod. It was referred to the committee on correspondence.

Rev. Dr. Judson Swift, of the American Tract Society, addressed the synod along the line of systematic giving for the benefit of missions. He declared that the pouring of socialistic literature into every home in Milwaukee was responsible for the election of a Socialist Mayor. He added that if Christian literature was poured into the Orient in the same proportion it would not be long before the Far East would be converted to Christianity.

PRIEST BECOMES CITIZEN.

Perth Amboy, June 10.—So many residents of Perth Amboy desire naturalization papers that county Clerk B. M. Gannon and his assistants were kept busy at the city hall until nearly 1 o'clock yesterday morning filing declarations of intention and administering the oath.

The county clerk arranged to bring his force here one day last week to save applicants living here a trip to the county offices at New Brunswick.

Among those who filed papers yesterday was Rev. Peter B. Corr, assistant to Monsignor O'Connell, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic parish in this city. Father Corr is a native of Ireland. County Clerk Gannon, who personally administered the oath to him, is one of the parishioners of St. Mary's.

My back ached constantly and there was a pain across my kidneys. My kidneys were in bad shape and I became all run down, in fact, was almost a physical wreck. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply and they made a different man out of me. I got this remedy at Randolph's Drug Store and my experience was so satisfactory that I cannot make my endorsement of it too strong. THREATEN LEVY FOR FARE FINE

Perth Amboy, June 10.—Following the conviction for refusing to allow policemen to ride free, Recorder Henry W. Kehoe Thursday issued an execution for $15 against the Public Service Railway Company. That is the amount of the fine fixed by the franchise ordinance for violation of the provision that policemen ride free.

The conviction was entered several weeks ago and L. D. H. Gilmour, counsel of the Public Service, announced at the time that he would carry the case to a higher court. The matter was then allowed to remain dormant until the recent refusal of the company to comply with the ruling of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners. Recorder Kehoe then took advantage of the failure of the company to perfect its appeal.

City Marshal William Walters has the execution and unless the fine is paid he says he will levy on a trolley car and advertise it for sale to satisfy the execution.

Last night five policemen boarded a trolley car on State street to go to their posts in North Amboy. All refused to pay fare and refused to leave the car when ordered by the conductor to do so. The conductor decided not to use force and attempted to fill out an accident blank with the names of witnesses. Only one man would give his name for use by the conductor.

It was recalled, apropos of the proposed purchase of Coney Island property for park purposes, that the city had a fund of $250,000, raised by subscription, to erect a seaside hospital for children having non-pulmonary tuberculosis.

COLLEGE EVILS SCORED.

Baltimore, June 10.—"In all my years of observation, I know of no greater fault than the social and athletic distractions which exist in our colleges and universities," was the statement made here Thursday night by Dr. George Edward Reed, who on July 1 will retire from the presidency of Dickinson College of Carlisle, Pa., under the Carnegie Foundation, and be succeeded by Dr. Eugene A. Noble, president of Goucher College of this city.

"The fraternity question," continued Dr. Reed, "is playing havoc with our institutions of learning. The young man is spending his father's money entertaining his sportive friends, and the result is he is not getting along in his studies.

"This fraternity business has become the veritable curse of the poor student and the schools themselves."

INSTALL A PASTOR

minister here owning an automobile. It was of an old variety, but still it is an auto, and he had learned many lessons from his machine. He had also found the law of help very beneficial, especially when his auto breaks down on the road. He congratulated Mr. Conover, adding that he would find some sinners left in Plainfield. He hoped that Mr. Conover and his people would work in harmony for the best interests of Christ's Kingdom.

"I have no automobile or funny stories to tell," said Mr. Goodrich, "but I do bring greetings from my church to you and your pastor. I confess that I am tired of speaking at installation and farewell services and I trust that your pastor will stay here. There is not a pastor in Plainfield today that was here when I came, they are all gone. I hope the pastor and people will be patient with each other and Mr. Conover will stay a long time."

Dr. Anderson brought greetings from the Methodist churches of the city and borough. Referring to Dr. Herring's amusing remarks about his auto, Dr. Anderson said that he saw his fellow-pastor the other day in his machine and it was stalled. An excellent text suggested itself to his mind. "He that believeth shall not make haste."

"When the pulpit pulls,' said Dr. Anderson, "the pew is quite likely to push. Sometimes there is not the magnetism in the pulpit. I hope that Mr. Conover will stay as long as he ought to. There are two reasons why a minister stays in a church as pastor, one being that the people want him to remain and the other is he cannot get away. ne time a minister remarked that Anderson is a good stayer, but I don't have to stay. When you find a man who thinks he is too big for the position he is in, he is generally too small for any place.' In conclusion Dr. Anderson gave Mr. Conover cordial welcome to the city, his pulpit and hoped that God's blessing would rest upon him and his people.

The services closed with a few words of appreciation by Mr. Conover in which he thanked the pastors for their kind words and adding that he was here to do God's work and asked for co-operation. Mr. Conover pronounced the benediction.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

HOLD FOUR MEN FOR ROBBERY ON TROLLEY.

Trenton, June 10.—Four men, believed to include members of a gang of Philadelphia pickpockets, who robbed Harry Baldwin, of Pennington, of $280 during the races at Ewingville Park Thursday afternoon were held in $2,000 bail each in the Central Police Court yesterday. They gave their names as William Josephs, George Gregory, William Edwards and Thomas White.

White is a Philadelphia horseman, who the police believe, acted at a stall for the others. Josephs, Gragory and Edwards said they were from New York, but the police received information yesterday which makes them think differently. The men were photographed as a preliminary toward their identification.

Baldwin discovered that he had been robbed as he was returning to Penington on a trolley car. When he anounced the fact Josephs at once dropped off the car and made a break to get away. He was captured after a chase of nearly a mile, when he was undressed by the mob and searched.

Not much money was found on him. White, who was in the crowd, offered to make good Baldwin's loss, and the crowd, becoming suspicious, took him into custody. Gregory and Edwards were captured later and were found to have about $450 in their possession. White disclaimed acquaintance with the other three and explained his willingness to make good Baldwin's loss by saying that he was an intimate friend of Josephs.

The police think the men intended to operate at Yale-Princeton baseball game today, and that they stopped at the Ewingville track on their way to the university town.

LIABILITYY LAW NOT TO AFFECT P. S. C. BENEFITS.

Camden, June 10.—John J. Burleigh, vice-president of the Public Service Railway Company, Thursday announced to the employes of the southern division that that corporation favors the accident-liabilities plan of the employers' liability act passed by the recent Legislature. He further stated that each employe of the company would receive a letter asking for his opinion by the corporation.

The act will become operative after July 4. It provides a scale of benefits or "damages" that may be paid by the company to their employs in case of their disability or death from accident.

The company favors the adoption of Section 2 of the act, and copies of it will be sent to every employe of the corporation for his approval or disapproval. By the adoption of this plan the company will not do away with the present sick and death benefits they are paying gratis to their employes, declared Mr. Burleigh.

FREE BIBLE LECTURE

Reform Hall

Second St. and Central Ave.

D. V. Berlage, Lecturer

Next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock the citizens of Plainfield will have the pleasure of hearing a very interesting lecture on an interesting subject. Mr. Berlage, of New York, will be the speaker on this occasion and will deliver his noted lecture, "THE THREE WORLDS." This has mystified many Bible students and thinking people and according to the teachings of the dark ages has caused many people to look forward with despair and dread to the consummation of all things.

D. V. Berlage.

No one of reasonable mind will question for a moment the vital interest which we may all properly attach to this subject. Though a great deal has been said and written by past teachers, yet many are still dissatisfied with the conclusions reached, and are looking forward for a still further rolling away of the mists that becloud the "Great Beyond."

Mr. Berlage has given this subject a thorough investigation and has no theory nor speculation of his own to advance, but reasons from the Scriptures and from the facts of life, and offers a satisfactory foundation for every view advanced. We are assured that this lecture will be absolutely free. No collections lifted and all seats are free. All are invited.

The Great Southern Orator SPEAKS IN THE Trinity Reformed Church
PLAINFIELD
Monday Ev'g, June 12
AT 8 O'CLOCK

Dr. James Buckley, Editor of the NEW YORK CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE says concerning Gov. Glenn's address at Morristown, N. J.: "The greatest anti-saloon address I have heard in twenty years, and the highest type of southern oratory."

In view of the agitation and the increasing drift of sentiment toward the people's rule, Governor Glenn's visit to the State at this time is most significant. Don't fail to hear him.

Governor Woodrow Wilson says: "I am in favor of Local Option. I am a believer in local self-government and believe that every self-governing community which constitutes a social unit should have the right to control the matter of the regulation or of the withholding of licenses."

TRAIL WIFE AND LAND AN ALLEGED MURDERER.

Newton, June 10.—Andrew Olevatz, a former boarding-house keeper of McAfee, who with Alexander Hubert is charged with the murder of Ferdinand Di Valentino, was captured by officers at Newburg, N. Y., Thursday. Under-Sheriff Albert T. Lyons left in an automobile Thursday afternoon to get the prisoner.

Olevatz and Di Valentino got into an argument about a balance Olevatz alleged DiValentino owed him on Saturday night, May 20. The former slapped the latter and was then led wy by friends of both parties. Later it is stated, Olevatz hunted his victim up and with Hubert beat him.

Immediately after the assault Olevatz fled and some days later Hubert disappeared. This week Mrs. Olevatz went to Newburg and the county authorities trailed her.

SEN. CLAPP, MINN., AT PATERSON, FOR RECALL.

Paterson, June 10—Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, the insurgent leader, defended the recall for judges as well as for executive and legislative officials, in an address before he Progressive Republican League here Thursday night.

"Judges are only human," he said. "The recall is not designed to be used against upright judges, and I believe never will. It will be a travesty of sacrific if all efforts for free government simply transferred unrestrained and uncontrollable power form the throne to the bench. I know that many hesitate at the idea of the recall, but it is as irresistable in free government as free government is inevitable in the program of humanity."

FOURTH ESTATE GETS WHACK FROM FAIR SEX.

Morristown, June 10.—Members of the Women's Town Improvement Committee have put the ban on reporters. Hereafter the representatives of the press will not be allowed to attend any of the committees' meetings. If they desire anything in regard to what goes on they may call when the sessions are over.

The stand taken by the Improvement Association is caused, the members say, because the newspapermen instead of simply reporting the decisions which are arrived at, have been in the habit of taking down comments of the association have made during the meetings, and which the women feel have not been intended for the public's eyes.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"Everywoman" at the Lyric Theatre, is scheduled to remain there for the summer season, or at least as long as the weather conditions will permit. "Everywoman" registered a box-office record of prodigious proportions at the Herald Square, and from present indications its success will be duplicated at the Lyric. It will not surprise any one familiar with the abnormal success of Walter Browne's allegorical drama, to see it remain throughout the summer and all next season in New York. Apart from its popular appeal no play in recent years has evoked so widespread a discussion among theatregoers of all classes as has "Everywoman."

A. V. Searing, Jr. Elected.

The Plainfield Wireless Association at its meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night accepted the resignation of Charles G. August, secretary, and elected Augustus V. Searing, Jr., to fill the unexpired term. It was decided to obtain from Mr. August the association's call list, and reports of committees were deferred until that time. The association called off further meetings until Friday, September 22.

A Whist Party.

Mrs. Charles I. Nash, of De Lacey avenue, entertained some friends at whist on Thursday afternoon. Honors were won by Mrs. Allen S. Olmsted, Mrs. W. J. Hudson, Mrs. Charles Sturtevant, Mrs. J. K. Roundy and Mrs. J. P. Emmons. A collation was served by Demolli.

MRS. C. D. MANNING GIVES A BRIDGE WHIST.

Mrs. Clifford D. Manning, of Myrtle avenue, gave a delighful bridge whist party at her home yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Allen Fraser, of Atlantic City. Five tables were used in the play and the prizes were awarded as follows:

The decorative color scheme in the parlor and dining room was pink and white. The porch was prettily decorated in yellow and white, daisies being used principally.

Chief on the Job.

Notice was served on the New York Telephone company this morning by Police Chief Kiely that unless it covered a man-hole at Front street and Park avenue, drastic action would be taken. The chief called attention to the fact that in many cities a glass covering was used when workmen were engaged in the man-hole. The hole was covered in the time specified. It had been kept open for the most part of two weeks.

FORTY YEARS in BASEBALL

A History of the Great National Game

By

CAPT. A. C. ANSON

Former Manager of the Chicago National League Team

CHAPTER XII.

I Lead My Men to Victory.

I shall always look back on 1880 as the red letter period of my career. It was the season, under my management, the Chicago team came home with the pennant.

In my opinion, the members of that team was one of the greatest bunches of baseball players that ever cast their shadows on the diamond. As it happened, all the league forces that year were made up of first-class material. The men under my direction outclassed them all.

I have had a more or less intimate acquaintance with all the crack baseball teams that have been making history for the past forty years. I don't want to say a word that would seem to imply that I undervalue the ability of present-day players or overestimate the cleverness of those who have been and are no longer; but I don't mind telling you that, in my opinion, there have been mighty few nines superior to that which held the National championship from 1880 to 1883.

Unlike the majority of clubs in the league at that time, the Chicagos did not depend on the services of one first class pitcher, but had two, Corcoran and Goldsmith, both top-notchers, playing them on alternate days. I had two catchers, also, both of them crackerjacks, Flint, who ranked as the premier artist of his day, and Mike Kelly, who was also invaluable in the field. With Quest on second, Williamson on third, Burns shortstop and Dalrymple, Gore and Beal in the field, there was nothing further to be desired. I stuck to first base, believing then, as I do still, that it was my stronghold.

Strong at the bat? Well, rather.

In 1880 Gore led the league with an average of .365, I was second with .338, Dalrymple was third with .332 and Burns was fifth with .309. In fielding Williamson led the third basemen with an average of .893, while the fewest hits of the year were made off Corcoran's pitching. Among the first basemen I held second place, with a percentage of .977. Sullivan of the Worcester team was first that year with .982.

Make any money that season? Yes, we made a little, just enough to raise salaries and keep the organization together for the next season. We had the consolation of knowing that we were the only club in the league that made a cent, most of them coming out of the little end of the horn on account of bad management. It began to look as if there was money in the game, however, and the club directors were by no means discouraged.

The team that had been such a credit to Chicago in 1880 was good enough for me, and since the directors left it to my judgment, I made no changes in the nine the next year. That I made no mistake was the verdict of all the fans when we came in with the pennant a second time. As before, our success was due to our strong batting and really great team work. During the entire season we played as one man, having but one object in view—the capture of the championship. Not a man of the nine permitted himself to indulge in an attempt to do record playing, and sacrifice hitting was the order whenever a point could be made in that way.

The race was an unusually exciting one. Rather early in the season it became apparent that the contest between the four leaders might leave the result in doubt until the very last week. It turned out exactly that way and the entire country waited the outcome with bated breath. When the end came our record was 86 games won and 30 lost, against our most formidable rival, the Providence team, which won 47 games and lost 37.

Personally, I had every reason to smile all over. Once again I led the batting list, with an average of .399, and I stood at the head of the first basemen, with .975 opposite my name.

When the time came to make up the team for the following season, 1882, I couldn't for the life of me see any good reason to make a single change. The other clubs in the league, all of them, had but one object in life—to snatch that pennant from my team and me, and I argued that the boys who had kept the championship in Chicago for two seasons would be more likely to repeat the trick than a bunch of fresh ones who were new to me and my ways. So all the other clubs went to their utmost limit in strengthening their teams, but I just left mine as it was.

From start to finish the race that season was a hot one. Honors were so equally divided during most of the summer that the fans were kept guessing and the betting in the pool rooms was something unprecedented. I want to tell you that there wasn't the faintest suspicion of crookedness on the part of a single player the whole season. As a result of the fierce rivalry between the teams, banner crowds greeted the players everywhere. Wherever we appeared that year the bleachers and grandstands were packed to their utmost capacity, and sometimes there was hardly enough room on the grounds to play the game. An era of baseball prosperity had come for sure, and all the clubs were making money.

Again we won. We played 84 games, victor in 55 and losers in 29. Again, Providence was close at our heels and Buffalo not a great way behind. Boston jumped from sixth to fourth and showed signs of returning vitality. My personal record was not so flattering as usual. Brouthers of the Buffalo club headed the batting list with .369, while I came second with .367. When we returned home it seemed as if the entire population of the Windy City had turned out to welcome us. The enthusiasm was so great that nothing was too good for the men who for the third time had made Chicago the baseball center of the universe.

There was just one thing that interfered with my perfect enjoyment of the situation—before we set out on that campaign William A. Hulbert, our president and the founder of the league, one of the best friends I ever had either in or out of the profession, passed out of this life. In the midst of the glad hurrah that greeted us on our return it saddened us to remember that the man who had done so much for us individually and so much to make the game respectable by rescuing it from the hands of the gamblers was not in the wildly cheering crowd.

Once more let me say that the secret of the club's success in winning the championship for these three successive years lay in its team work. Added to this was the fact that long practice in studying and perfecting the fine points of the game gave us an enormous advantage over our competitors, who had not yet got onto the value of concerted action. I realized that there was a few weak spots in our make-up, but the general fitness of the team was so good that these blemishes were lost sight of in the general rejoicing. I suppose I shouldn't have realized any outside criticism at the time, and probably wouldn't have appreciated any advice, but as I look back I must admit that I can discover one or two little things which, if recognized and remedied at the time, would probably have given us a more satisfactory start-off than we had the following season.

CHAPTER XIII.

I Take a Tumble With the Boys.

If this were a strictly personal account of my life, with the history of baseball in America left out, I might dodge some of the disagreeable things that now and then got sandwiched in between the almost constant smooth sailing that fell to my lot as manager of the banner team of baseball artists in America. One of the things I might escape would be the necessity of explaining to you how it happened that I let Boston get away with the pennant in 1882.

To be frank with you, it has always been more or less of a mystery to me. The only change in our personnel was the substitution of Fred Pfeffer for Joe Quest at second base, and that should have meant additional strength for us. That it didn't turn out that way was no fault of the new man, for he proved himself to be a crackerjack. It is possible that overconfidence may have had something to do with our slump, although we must have been only the fact that our opponents were after us hot and heavy. From the start it was plain enough that the contest was going to be a battle of the giants and that Chicago, Boston, Providence and Cleveland were the only ones in it. Excitement ran high all over the country and the big newspapers began to devote considerable space to our daily doings on the diamond.

Until about that time baseball had not figured very prominently in the press. Recently on looking over the files of a big New York daily for the year 1880 I was surprised to find so little mention of the game. There was no account of any game played outside New York and Brooklyn, and even those were given very little space—not a third as much as was taken up by pigeon shooting. In October of that year the Chicagos played with the Metropolitans, and the report of the game does not cover more than three inches. One of the statements in it amused me a whole lot. It was to the effect that when the score stood 4 to 0 in favor of my team we put on our coats and quit, with the excuse that we had to catch a train. I don't recollect anything of the sort. But if it actually occurred it goes to prove that the game was a mighty informal thing in those days.

Well, we dropped the pennant in 1883 and Boston got it. Nor was that the bitterest pill I had to swallow. I fell to twelfth place in the batting list, my percentage being only .307. Brouthers stood first, his percentage being .371. It seemed as if the twisters were getting a little too foxy for my style of hitting. I had been patting myself on the back a long time over my batting career, and to have an experience of this kind was tough.

The big baseball event of that year was the adoption of the code known then as the triparte agreement, but now termed the national agreement. A. G. Mills, the new president of the league, was active in promoting it, and it was accepted by the league, the American association and the Northwestern league. Among other things it provided that no contract with any player should be made longer than seven months, beginning April 1 and ending October 31. At that time the stealing of players was a growing evil and one that made a heap of trouble. To put a stop to the practice, it was provided that on October 10 each year the secretary of each association should furnish the secretaries of the other associations a reserve list of players, not exceeding fourteen in number, then under contract with each of its several club members, and of such players reserved on any prior annual reserve list who had refused to contract with the said club's members, and of all other eligible players, and such players, together with all others thereafter regularly to be contracted with by such club members, "are and shall be eligible to contract with any other club members of either association party thereto."

That was a mighty strong dose, but that it broke up the stealing game there is no denying. Many of the players didn't take kindly to the proposition, however, and there was more kicking over it than there had been over anything else so far. Later on it led to the Brotherhood revolt and a general earthquake in baseball circles. That is why I mention it in this place.

Next year came the Union association fiasco. It was a short-lived affair, but on account of the influence it had on the game it cannot be left out of its history. The season of 1883 had been such a money-maker that Henry V. Lucas, owner of the St. Louis club, believing he saw millions in it, organized his Union association, and its speedy failure brought financial shipwreck to him. The new baseball trust—that is about what it amounted to—was organized in Pittsburg with a big flourish of trumpets. It was announced that at least fifty leading league players would break their contracts and join the new venture, but when the time came not a baker's dozen showed up. It was a goose-egg of enormous proportions. Only five of the original clubs played out their schedules, and it gave up the ghost at the close of its first season.

And all the time the league—which had promptly expelled the deserting players—was having a most exciting and prosperous season. All of the clubs had signed more players than they actually needed in order to keep them out of the reach of the Union association. My club had no less than nineteen men on the salary list that season, some of whom were never called on to play. The men in my bunch that did the work were Corcoran, Goldsmith and Clarkson, pitchers; Flint and Kelly, catchers; Anson, first base; Pfeffer, second base; Williamson, third base; Burns, shortstop; and Dalrymple, Gore, Kelly and Sunday in the outfield.

Well, it so happened—how I'll never tell you—that we got started wrong foot first. At the end of May we were sixth in fifth place. Boston and Providence being the leaders. By the end of June we had not improved our position and matters were beginning to look rather dubious. Just about that time the Providence boys were playing great ball. Radbourne, their pitcher, was doing some tricks that were sending his club to the top, and it looked a sure thing for Providence if he could keep the pace. In September and October the Chicago folks rallied a little, but, although we won every game we played in the latter month, the best we could do was to beat New York for fourth place. It was a consolation to have Providence jump in ahead of Boston, but you are perfectly correct in supposing that the position occupied by my club at the close of business did not satisfy A. C. Anson.

I realized that some changes in our make-up was necessary. It was one of the hardest duties I had to perform, this weeding out of material that was no longer up to the mark, a job I never got entirely hardened to. Larry Corcoran, who had done such splendid service for us, was on to the fact that his pitching days were about over, asked for his release and got it. Goldsmith had not been doing work of the first class and he was also sent out into the cold world. Clarkson and McCormick, who had played with Cleveland the previous year, and who knew how to rattle the batsmen, were signed as pitchers. I didn't see how I could improve on the rest of the make-up and I didn't try to.

During the winter of this year the league got into a lively shindy right under its own roof. The deserting St. Louis club, of which Mr. Lucas had been president, was taken back as a penitent, and President Mills was so riled over the matter that he resigned. The three offices of president, secretary and treasurer were turned over to Nicholas E. Young.

CHAPTER XIV.

I Am Once More Fortune's Favorite.

The season of 1885 sent us to the top again with a big hurrah. Looking over the record for that year I see that from start to finish Chicago and New York were the only ones in it and that it was nip and tuck between them almost to the last. At the end of May the New Yorks were in the lead, with 17 out of 21 games to their credit. We played 20 games that month and won only 14. In June things took a turn in our favor, Chicago winning 21 out of 23 games played, New York losing five out of the 20 played.

During the month of July it looked like anybody's race, each of us winning 18 games, although Chicago was defeated only six times against its rival's seven. In August the New York team had the advantage again, winning 18 out of 21 games played, while we lost four out of 19. In September we forged ahead with 17 out of 20 games, our competitors for the pennant losing six out of 19 games played.

The New Yorks finished their season with four games played at Chicago. In order to win the championship it was necessary that they should get three of these. They looked on victory as a foregone conclusion, and they had considerable reason to feel that way, for they had won nine of the 12 games they had played with us that season. They missed their guess by a large majority. We won three straight games from them and that cinched the pennant for us.

That third game—the one that made us champions again—was one of the most interesting to me that I have ever had a hand in. Even to this day every play that was made is as fresh in my memory as if it were but yesterday. Before going out to the grounds I got the boys together and talked to them like a Dutch uncle. I reminded of how much depended on their work that afternoon and cautioned them against trusting to the last chance, the fourth game. "Win today," I said, "and you won't have to worry over tomorrow."

They responded nobly. I want to say a little something about the team that captured the pennant for Chicago in 1885 and 1886. It was not only the strongest team I ever had under my management, but in my estimation it was the best-balanced and most capable team ever before the public. I realize that this is a sweeping assertion, and that I shall probably be criticised for making it, but it is my honest opinion just the same.

About the only weak point was the position of left field, still filled by Abner Dalrymple in spite of the fact that I had been threatening to let him go for several seasons on account of his poor fielding, which had cost us more than one game. As a batter, Dal was a warm proposition and that made us

Electric Power Is Reliable

Central Station Electric Power is always ready for use. For twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, fifty-two weeks every year, generators are kept going continuously in our power stations.

This makes Central Station Power reliable. It makes it a power that can be depended upon to do your work. No shut down necessary to clean a boiler; no cessation of activities while an engine is being repaired.

One of our Hudson County customers, who had used steam drive for ten years prior to 1906, writes:

"After five years of your supply I can only say that I find your service reliable and your charges reasonable."

This man finds Central Station Electric Power reliable. You will, too, if you install it. Let our expert give you details.

for some of his shortcomings in the field. He came to us from Milwaukee, and he certainly was a queer fish. When he came to Chicago he was as steady as a pack mule. In those days he was never known to spend a nickel and was so "near" that he would go without seeing a newspaper that contained a mention of himself if he couldn't borrow it. Later on Dal broke loose and all of a sudden became one of the sportiest of sports, blowing his salary as if he had picked it up in the street, and setting a hot pace for his associates. I am happy to state that after he quit the game he settled down and became a model business man.

Our outfield was equal to that of any league club before or since, and our infield—now, say! You make a big mistake if you think modern baseball can show its superior. This was the famous quartet that was known everywhere as "Chicago's stone wall," so-called because the only way a ball could be sent beyond it was to bat it so high that it was out of reach. The players who made up that infield were Ed. Williamson, Fred Pfeffer, Tom Burns and yours truly. We had played together so long and had practiced so steadily that scarcely a play could be made that we were not in perfect readiness to meet. We had a system of signals that was well nigh infallible, and the moment a ball was hit and we had noted its direction we knew just what to expect. We were wise to all the tricks of the different twirlers, and, most important of all, we had perfect confidence in each other.

Williamson was playing shortstop and Burns third base. The latter excelled in the blocking game, which he managed in a style I have never seen attempted by any other player and which was sure to make the base runner considerable trouble. At short Williamson was to the manner born, and in spite of his "great bigness" he could cover as much ground in that position as any man I have ever seen. His throwing was of the rifle shot order, but it was not hard to catch, because it came so accurately into the hands. Of the merits of Williamson and Burns as ball players I cannot speak too enthusiastically.

Fred Pfeffer was a ball player from the ground up and as good a second baseman as the sport has ever produced. The only thing I ever called him down for was a tendency to pose for the grand stand, although he was such an artist that I really couldn't blame him a great deal for wanting folks to know it. No man that ever held down the second bag was his superior in making a spectacular exhibition on the diamond. He was a high-salaried player and one that earned every cent he got, a hard worker and always to be relied on.

I want to say of John Clarkson that he was a "really great." He was the best pitcher that ever stopped overnight in Chicago, and I mean what I say. He was the inventor and sole proprietor of a remarkable drop curve and fast overhand, lifting speed that would have made any ball player famous, and in addition his change of pace was the most mystifying ever seen on the diamond. In the spring of 1888 John was released to the Bostons for $10,000 and played with that team for several years.

Jim McCormick, Clarkson's alternate in the box, was also one of the best men that ever sent a ball whizzing across the plate. As a rule, pitchers are not good batsmen, but Jim was a glittering exception. John Flynn, a third pitcher in the string, had a wonderful drop ball, great speed and was a good batter and a fast fielder. He was a tip-top fellow, too, and had his arm not given out would have been a shining light in the profession.

Jimmy Ryan was a schoolboy from Holy Cross college, Worcester, Mass., when he came to us, but he showed signs of making good and he did in time. He was a good hitter and a good judge of a fly ball. He was also an accurate left-handed thrower. His greatest fault was that he wouldn't run out on a base hit, but would walk to his base. I used to fine him repeatedly for this, but he was slow to take the hint.

The first time I ever saw Billy Sunday he was driving for an undertaker in Marshalltown, Ia. Later I saw him at a fireman's tournament, and the speed he showed on that occasion made me think he was first-class timber for baseball. I asked him if he would like to go to Chicago, and he said he didn't mind, provided I wouldn't expect him to work on Sunday. I told him we could fix that and he concluded he'd try it. The first thirteen times he went to bat after playing with us he was struck out, and I got a good many left-handed compliments from the boys on my ability to pick a winner. I hung on to him, however, and he soon developed into something really worth while. In my opinion Billy Sunday was the fastest man on his feet who ever played with a league team. On account of his tremendous speed ability Sunday was too daring, taking desperate chances that no one else would ever consider for a minute. I want to say right here that Billy was as good a boy as ever lived, conscientious to the verge of absurdity; always cheery, always ready to take a hand. Years afterward, when he had developed into a cracherjack evangelist, Mrs. Anson and I went to hear him. It was simply great. After the service was over we went up front and spoke to Billy. He was tickled to death to see us and fairly hugged us both. "Looks as though you'd struck something bigger than the game, Billy," I said. Mrs. Anson told me afterward that I ought to be ashamed of myself for expressing myself that way. "I certainly have, captain," Billy admitted with his old laugh. I could see that he was in dead earnest, all right.

CHAPTER XV.

I Go to School Again.

In the fall of 1884, with my wife and two little girls, I went to Marshalltown to visit my father. For several years I had been getting fairly good pay for my work in Chicago and had saved a little money. This I sent from time to time to the old gentleman, knowing that he was more likely to invest it safely than I would be and knowing also that the interest and security would be satisfactory.

The day before I started for home father proposed that we have a settlement. "Figure up how much I owe you, interest and all," he said, "and we'll have a settlement."

Now he might just as well have asked me to pave the streets of Marshalltown with gold bricks, and I suspect he was aware of the fact. I didn't feel like owning up to the truth that computing interest and myself were not on familiar terms, so I managed to avoid the subject during the remainder of my stay, but I didn't forget it. I made up my mind right there that some way or another—I didn't exactly see how—I would learn enough to manage my own business affairs.

My opportunity came sooner than I expected. That winter we visited my wife's folks in Philadelphia, and about the first proposition that was put up to me after my arrival was to use my influence to persuade my wife's young brother to go to school. I tackled the job, but it wasn't a cinch by any means. My brother-in-law's first argument nearly floored me.

"You never went to school much yourself and you've got on all right," he said.

I didn't succeed in making much of an impression on him until I up and told him what a fix I was in about that interest. That seemed to appeal to him and he finally agreed to go to business college if I would pay the bills.

"I'll go long enough to learn how to figure that interest for you and then I'll quit," was all he would promise.

We started right out while the matter was hot to make the necessary arrangements. After the young lad had been enrolled and assigned to his work I asked the superintendent how old a man had to be before he was disbarred from attendance at the school.

"Age is no bar here," he assured me. "It's never too late to secure a knowledge of business forms. If Methuselah should come walking in here this moment he would receive a warm welcome."

"How about me?" I asked.

"Just the proper age," he replied, looking me over quickly. "You would find it a cinch. I assure you that you are a mere child compared with some of our pupils. Shall I have the pleasure of entering your name?"

SAURER MOTOR TRUCK MAKES A GREAT TRIP

Saurer Motor Truck Crossing a Stream.

A. L. Westgard, President of the Touring Club of America, has arrived in New York, having come direct from Los Angeles which point he reached on the 8th, completing the first leg of the "Ocean to Ocean" trip of the Saurer 5-ton truck which is carrying a 3½ ton cargo from Denver to New York via. San Francisco.

Mr. Westgard in addition to undertaking the long journey to demonstrate the practicability of a commercial car for any condition of road and weather bore a commission from the National government to plot the most practicable routes for the establishment of highways for the transportation of troops and munitions of war in the event of future hostilities.

In an interview shortly after getting back to New York Mr. Westgard had the following to say: "Not for $10,000 would I repeat that awfully nerve-racking, back-breaking punishment again. The pictures which we made of the hardships we went through tell the story graphically and I can assure you that these pictures do not represent exceptional conditions but average every-day conditions; not hardships for a few minutes of a day but in many instances for the whole day and day after day. Not once in the entire sixty-eight days of the grilling punishment did we have even moderately easy going. We were constantly digging the big truck out of the bottomless mires which only the axles prevented sinking further or planking the road continually with lumber from our cargo to secure traction sufficiently to creep along at a snail's pace. Where there were even the crudest apologies for roads the wide tread of the big machine prevented the rear wheels from tracking in the narrow road, with the result that for many days the dual tires of the back wheels ploughed a deep furrow on both sides which sometimes had a depth equal to the vertical distance from the hubs to the tires.

"I can truthfully say that never in my life have I seen the brutality of the punishment which we had to give the big truck duplicated in the history of any machine. It was a test of the endurance of metal and of men which stands unparalleled in the annals of self-propelled vehicles. The trip proved that a high-class motor truck of the Saurer stamp can be depended upon to haul a paying load under any conditions where wheels can be made to turn.

"The truck got to Los Angeles with its odometer showing 1519 miles from Denver, and its mechanism staunch and strong as when we started out. If there is any damage to the truck I could not detect it and I literally watched its performance in every conscious moment.

But that there is damage to my anatomy is probably obvious on first glance. I lost fifteen pounds of my good avoidupois in the strenuous 68 days service and as I have stated it would take $10,000 to even tempt me to go through an ordeal such as I have just finished."

The Saurer "Pioneer Freighter" is now on the road to San Francisco having left Los Angeles. It will be piloted on its homeward trip to New York via. Chicago by a new crew of which A. C. Thompson, who was Mr. Westgard's substitute pilot, will be chief pilot.

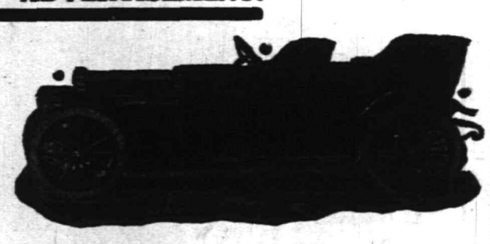
MODEL G—2-PASSENGER ROADSTER—$1,000



MODEL J—5-PASSENGER FORE DOOR—$1,200

We are going to try and tell you why the De Tamble Car is so good for the price asked and how it is that while others are asking from $1,500 to $2,00 for a similar car we can sell The De Tamble for $1,000 to $1,200. The secret is perfect organization in all departments including the local Agents for the car many of whom are stockholders in the Company. Our first saving is in the factory where all of the De Tamble Car is made under our own roof. This means one cost plus one profit. Second the agent's discount is only half what other manufacturers allow. Third we do no advertising. If the agent wishes to advertise he does so out of his profits, the factory makes him no allowance as other companies do. That is why we pay for this ad and that is why the De Tamble Co. saves $500,000 yearly. Apportioning this among the cars built in a year it means a saving of $333 per car. To this must be added $150 less profit to the agent. Other expenses are racing teams, stores on Automobile row and insurence contests. These items add another $200 to each car built. Summing up we find a direct saving of $683 per car; to this must be added the profits of the parts manufacturer saved by building the car complete in our own factory. A further saving is made by paying our workmen and officers only what they are worth and not paying high salaries for the use of a name. Our stock pays 6 per cent no more, this means more saving. Prospective Buyers this saving goes into your pocket when you buy a De Tamble Car. It means you get from $500 to $800 more for your money than you get by purchasing any other Car. Look at the specifications, look at the car we know you will be convinced.

There are a few words we would like to add describing some of the specifications which the factory says nothing about, presumably taking it for granted that a high grade car should have these points. But how few have?

Chrone Vanadium, the Steel which is so strong and which does not crystalize, is used in the Gears, Transmission, Differential, Tail Shaft and Gear Levers. The break equalizers extend entirely across the car, this means equal pressure on both rear wheels and freedom from skidding and serious accidents which frequently occur through unequal pressure on the brakes. A straight line Shaft Drive means more power, less strain and wear. Grease cups are used on every joint, something not found except on high grade cars. Large wheels, low center of gravity, strong trussed frame. The Radiator is hung on Trunions. This means freedom from leaks due to strain and accessibility to engine and Timing Gears. The Motor, though powerful, is quiet owing to correct design. Summed up these points spell the great word SAFETY.

OCEAN BOULEVARD IS BEING HURRIED AHEAD.

Ocean Grove, June 10.—Good progress is being made on the construction of that part of the Ocean boulevard which crosses the head of Wesley Lake. The improvements when complete will avoid a dangerous turn from Lake avenue into Main street, which has been the scene of several serious automobile accidents. The hill on the Grove side is being cut down and the surplus dirt is being used to fill in the head of the lake.

It has been hoped by many that there would be a continuation of the ocean boulevard along Asbury Park and leading into the Groves, who contended that it could not be closed on Sunday. Opposite Ocean avenue on the Asbury side of the twin resort the Ocean Grove Association is putting up a $25,000 building with amusements and this blocked all plans to carry the boulevard by the ocean route. However, the Ocern Grove Association has made some concession in allowing the boulevard to encroach a block in from Main street, territory that heretofore has been regarded as almost sacred.

This detour from Ocean avenue, down Lake avenue and across the head of Wesley Lake is not relished by automobilists, but the plans were approved by the State road commissioner.

TO MARRY A PUGILIST WITH WHOM SHE ELOPED.

Paterson, June 10.—Alice Barbarow, nineteen years old, of 427 Grand street, who three weeks ago, stole $285 from her mother and eloped with Thomas Finnamore, going to Allentown, where she deserted Finnamore for another man, appeared at the city hall yesterday morning with Finnamore and made application for a marriage license. Registrar Charles S. Gall granted it.

The girl, after staying six days in Toledo with her second sweetheart, became homesick and came to this city. Se was arrested and tried before Judge Francis Scott in the Court of Special Sessions on charges of embezzlement, which were entered against her by her mother. On a plea for leniency by the mother, Judge Scott suspended sentence. Finnamore's mother accompanied the couple. Finnamore is known in pugilistic circles in Newark, where he fought several times under the name of "Battling Finnamore."

RHYME ANNOUNCEMENT FOR BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A birthday party will be given for the benefit of the Congregational church building fund on Friday afternoon and night. The following bit of poetry has been written for the announcement:

This Birthday Party is given to You
For Christian work, and your pleasure too,
We send to each a litle silk sack—
Please either send it or bring Yours back
With a cent for each year as you are old—
We promise your number will never be told.
If the years of your age you care not to tell
A dollar or more will answer as well.
Kind friends will sell you something to eat
And also will furnish some kind of a treat.
If other engagements must keep you away,
Your sack and its money our grief will allay,
We extend to you a greeting most hearty,
Feeling sure you will come to Your own Birthday Party.

GIVING UP TO DICK

Im so glad to see you, Margaret," said the girl in the blue silk kimono, looking up languidly from the lounge. "Put your wraps on the bed. I've always felt that you and I were kindred spirits and now I know we are since you divined that I was dying to see you. By the way, I'm not going to Agnes' party to-night. I've given up society."

"As befits a good church woman during Lent, Betty." Margaret returned, sinking into a rocking chair.

"I'd almost forgotten it is Lent." Betty confessed, plumping up a pillow behind her head.

"What makes you look so dismal? Didn't Dick call last night?" Margaret asked.

"All his things, even the dear little cigarette he gave me the first night we met, I've made into a package to return to him," declared Betty, tragically. "It has been such a trying ordeal that I simply had to lie down."

"Tell me all about it, my dear," Margaret urged.

Just after Christmas," Betty began, "I happened to say to Dick—I mean Mr. Blount—that I liked calendars—I mean a certain calendar. It happened this way: We were going to the theater and he had to stop at his office for something. Over his desk hung a calendar with the picture of a woman entitled, 'The Girl I Love.' Of course it was an idealized subject and really she wasn't in the least pretty, but just to show that I was not jealous and to show also that I took some interest in Mr. Blount's surroundings I said, 'What a perfectly beautiful calendar!'

"He seemed quite pleased with my admiration and the next night he brought the calendar to me.

"Well, John Knight called the next evening. When he saw the calendar he said at once that he had a beauty, which he would bring to hang alongside it. He said he was glad to know I liked calendars, because he liked them, too. You know, Margaret, I never can bear to hurt another's feelings, so I permitted John to believe that I longed to own his calendar also. Perhaps I may have added, when he hung it up beside Mr. Blount's, that I rather preferred the subject of it to the other.

"Bert Waldron called Sunday afternoon. He said he didn't know I was fond of calendars. He added that he had two beauties in his office which he'd send up on Monday. A messenger boy brought them next day, together with a lovely big bouquet of violets. Yesterday was Monday, wasn't it? Oh, it seems ages ago. Well, of course I hung Bert's calendars beside the other two.

"Shortly afterward Prof. Morton dropped in with a piece of music which he promised me. When he saw the calendars he said if he had known I cared so much for such things he would have sent me the one in his studio, which he greatly prized because it reminded him of me. What could I say but that I should be delighted to own the calendar?

"We were just hanging it over my desk last night when Mr. Blount called. You will never believe how dreadfully he acted. I was glad the professor could remain only a few minutes—he was on his way to play at a recital. After he had gone, Mr. Blount said he'd 'like to punch that old fool's head.' He went on to say that he didn't know I had a craze for calendars or he'd have sent me a hundred. He said that after all the admiration I had wasted on his horrid calendar and the interest I had taken the trouble to show in his business! It will always be to my credit that I smiled sweetly and amiably while he was making his unkind remarks. By way of changing the subject I asked him if he didn't think Bert's violets were lovely.

"I never before realized how rude Mr. Blount is. When I asked him that innocent question, he sprung to his feet and, still with calendars on his mind, positively roared out that his office boy had a calendar which doubtless I would be pleased to add to my collection and he would send it up. Then he went away without even holding my hand for the briefest moment.

"The calendar came a little while ago, a picture of a dreadful-looking creature called 'The Coquette.' I'm sure I can't imagine why Mr. Blount should have thought I'd like to add that to my collection. As a matter of fact, it's burning up in the furnace with the other calendars and all my dreams.

"Life is over for me, Margaret. I shall never speak to Mr. Blount again."

"Please, Miss Betty, it's Mr. Blount calling you on the phone," interposed a white-capped maid at this moment.

Betty sprung to her feet and flew out of the room. When she returned her eyes were shining.

"It was Dick," she said. "The dear boy! He's going to take me to Agnes' party to-night and wants me to wear my blue gown. Dick just loves me in blue."

"I thought——" Margaret began, slowly.

"As I explained to Dick over the telephone," Betty went on hurriedly, "as it is Lent, I feel I ought not to indulge longer in uncharitable thoughts against any one. It is splendid discipline, during Lent, to give up having one's own way; that's why I've given up to Dick."

"How sweet of you!" said Margaret, smiling to herself.

SKULL SMASHED, BUT IS LIKELY TO RECOVER.

Summit, June 10.—The marvelous vitality of Cravielle Goly, a laborer, who was received in Overlook Mospital las Monday morning, is exciting the wonder of the hospital physicians. Goly seems to be recovering from a fracture at the base of the skull and other injuries which would doubtless have resulted in the death of an ordinary person. Goly, who is thirty-six years old, fell forty-five feet in the stone quarry of the Commonwealth Quarry Company in Springfield. In the descent the man struck a ledge of a sharp-edged rock and bounded twenty feet to the bottom of the pit. A huge pile of large stones fell on top of him.

Unconscious when he was placed in the hospital ambulance and with his brain protruding and his left orm torn open from the shoulder to the wrist, to the amazement of the hospital physicians Goly, after being assisted from the ambulance, walked to a room in the institution. Drs. William H. Lawrence, Jr., head of the hospital staff, in performing an operation on the man removed from his head a dozen pieces of stone ranging in diameter from one-eighth of an inch to an inch. They had been firmly imbedded i the skull near the brain.

Since the optration Goly's recovery has been so rapid that yesterday he was permitted to partake of light diet. The man's body is terribly lacerated as a result of contact with the rocks in his fall.

MIDDLESEX CO S. S. CONVENTION SEPT. 14.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Middlesex County Sunday School Association at New Brunswick, on Thursday night plans were laid for the annual county Sunday School Convention to be held on Thursday, September 14, in the First Presbyterian church, of Dunellen. There will be sessions morning, afternoon and evening, and details as to speakers, etc., were referred to a special committee consisting of William R. Applegate, J. G. Burdick and Daniel Wray. It is probable that the song book, "Sunday School Voices," will be used.

Rev. H. N. Jordan, pastor of the New Market Seventh Day Baptist church, was elected superintendent of the Home Department work last evening and James Armstrong was chosen secretary of East Brunswick township.

Travelers' Convention.

With emblems and pennants flying from store windows in the city's centre, together with other evidences of a welcoming nature, delegates flocked to the fourth annual meeting of the Grand Council of the United Commercial Travelers of New Jersey at Trenton yesterday. About 400 of the delegates and their families, are attending the two-days' session which ended today.

Mrs. Louisa Owens.

Mrs. Louisa Owens, who has resided in this city a long time, died yesterday at the residence of her grandson, Rufus Young, of 824 East Second street. The infirmities of age are ascribed as the cause. The funeral will be held at Mr. Young's home tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock and burial will be at Yardsville, Monday.

Children's Day exercises will be held at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, when Mrs. J. A. Powlison will make an address.

D. FOSTER UPDIKE'S RATHER AMUSING: I GUESS! ONE OF THOSE THINGS!

Went over to my Brooklyn houses Wednesday, the houses that are to exchange for your Plainfield property, and, of course, had to take in Coney Island. Found some of it missing but there is some left yet, for instance, had one of those things that break your neck to get up to and then you sit down and then go twisting around and around the bends and immediately find yourself on the bottom; well, as usual something funny happened. Just as I got to the top a fat woman sat down, and she started around the bends and I followed in the rear, of course, and when I got part way down I found she had tried to turn a bend in the opposite direction. Well, just as soon as I saw her I tried to polite myself and stop, but no use; I got a jar and she got a bump, and we immediately found ourselves on the bottom. Now what do you think she did She just got right up and gave me a piece of her say so. I thought a minute or two, and as I like to give everybody a square deal I says: "See here Old Gal, we will start that same thing all over again, anymore than I will start first and you follow in the rear, and see if you can catch me." She just looked at me with as much as to say, "You are terribly rude." I says, "See here, are you a Plainfield Real Estate Agent?"

Martin, Sr. The boys have been trained by Mr. Martin and they all sang well at the services. A musical program of exceptional interest was greatly enjoyed. Rev. Royal A. Broek, the pastor, made a short and pleasing address to the children and also baptized two infants. F. E. Smith, as superintendent of the Sunday-school, had charge of the program, while Mrs. J. M. WOMAN IS HELD UP AND ROBBED OF $10

Mrs. George Whyland, of Glenside avenue, Scotch Plains, was held up by a highwayman, Saturday, while on her way home from Plainfield, and robbed of $10 and several pieces of jewelry. Mrs. Whyland was accosted by the highwayman, who she says was a short ugly looking Italian, after she had left the trolley car at the 'Plains and was taking a short cut across fields to her home.

Mrs. Whyland was struck several times with a club receiving bruises. Constable John E. Clark was notified but as Mrs. Whyland was unable to give a good description of her assailant, no clue to the highwayman has been obtained. He escaped toward the Big Woods.

STORM INTERFERED WITH INDIAN LEGEND

Despite the general inclement weather conditions, Saturday a performance of "The Indian Legend of Watchung," was given. It was announced early that none would be attempted and after scores of people had been turned away, a big crowd of late comers from Bernardsville, Morristown and other places, insisted on at least a part of the entertainment and the committee finally acquiesced. The vivid flashes of lightning against the rocky slopes and the heavy peals of thunder added a picturesqueness to the scene that is beyond description. The performance was concluded a short time before the big storm broke. It was announced by W. de laR. Anderson today the Saturday night's attempt would not be considered as a regular performance. What was to have been the final one will be given tonight if it is clear and if not the first fair night. The participants and friends enjoyed a social time in the Improvement Association building, Saturday night.

FIGHT SUNDAY BALL

Scotch Plains' Live Pastor Stirs Fanwood Township's Committee to Action.

The Fanwood Township committee met on Saturday night to consider an old ordinance which prohibits Sunday baseball playing and decided to lay the matter over until next Friday night. One of the members of the committee favored the Sunday game, one was against it and the third member of the committee was undecided. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church made the complaint, causing action on the part of the committee. The meeting was thrown open for discussion and nearly everyone present expressed himself, the majority appearing to be in favor of Sunday baseball. According to the ordinance, which was adopted in 1905, especially for the control of amusements at Galvin's Park, provides that a license must be obtained for all public exhibitions, games, carnivals, etc., under a penalty of $20.

Mr. Mathiews claimed that the 'Plains ball team is breaking the ordinance and that it was up to the committee to see that the law is obeyed. The ordinance is perfectly plain, although a majority present seemed to feel that it was not intended to cover the national game.

Someone said that Mr. Mathiews had broken the ordinance himself, when he had charge of the Baptist baseball team, last year, games being played on Park avenue and a collection being taken. Mr. Mathiews said that he was not aware of any such ordinance at the time, and Manager Albert said that neither did he have any knowledge of the ordinance until notified by the committee.

William Beard, whose residence is opposite the ball grounds, said that he had no objection to the game as now played on Sunday, and other neighbors expressed themselves in a similar way. It seemed to be the opinion that the ordinance should be changed to eliminate baseball.

PLAINFIELDERS WIN FIRST WEAKFISH PRIZE

The five dollar prize offered every year by R. O. Ackor, of Sewaren, for the first weakfish of the season landed on his dock, was won by two Plainfielders Saturday afternoon. The lucky anglers were Charles Bilyeu, of Somerset street, known to all associates as "Doc," and F. A. Bickford, of North avenue. They had been out only a short time when "Doc" hauled in a fine weak, weighing a pound and a half. It ended their fishing for the day as a stipulation made by Ackor is that the prize-winner be landed alive on his dock.

Saturday's catch is one of the earliest on record as it is unusual for weakfish to run before June 15. The hot weather the fore part of the month is probably what caused it. Mr. Bickford has twice before participated in getting the $5 award as he was the winner in 1906 and divided honors in 1907. News of the catch was received with great interest by local fishermen and delegations will hike to the shore from now on.

ALMOST A CYCLONE

Electrical Storm Sweeping Across Jersey Puts the City in Darkness.

An electrical storm similar to those frequent in the tropics, visited this section Saturday night and yesterday morning, and within a short time trees were uprooted in various parts of the city and borough, streets were flooded with water, telephone, telegraph and electric light wires were crippled and trolleys were blocked at intervals throughout the storm. Chief Kiely ordered the P. S. C. to shut off its street light current during the worst of the storm as a protection to life and property. Trolley service was tied up by trees being blown across the tracks. The city was in darkness for more than an hour and people generally were in a highly nervous state of mind.

Late last night and early this morning another storm visited this section. While the wind was not of the great velocity of Saturday night the rainfall was heavier if anything and additional wires were broken. H. W. Templin, of Pearl street, a milkman, lost a valuable horse about 2:45 o'clock this morning. The animal walked into a charged electric light wire which lay in the street and was killed instantly.

The general conditions would have made a terrific summer shower, but the storm was accompanied by a wind which quickly attained a velocity of seventy miles an hour and sent the torrential downfall blowing across the country at express train speed. Seldom has lightning of such vivid brightness been seen here. The lightning was almost continual, one flash following the other in rapid succession. Accompanying the bright flashes there was a beautiful display of fork lightning.

While the rain fell in torrents at intervals, it was not so great in quantity. The amount of rainfall in last night's shower was 0.80 inches. The total for the month so far is 2.25 inches. The June normal is 4.13 inches.

An extremely bright afish of lightning late Saturday afternoon struck a distributing station on an electric light pole in the rear of A. C. Wilmerding's residence on Belvidere avenue, putting many house lights out of commission. Mr. Wilmerding, who was in the yard at the time, was rendered temporarily deaf in one ear.

Trees were damaged in all parts of the city. On Duer street, near the bridge, a large tree was blown over, damaging the bridge, other trees at 1110 Watchung avenue and on East Fifth street went over. One large tree opposite the Y. M. H. A. Hall on Grove street was uprooted, and an auto party, just passing, had a narrow escape. At Reform Hall several trees were stripped of limbs, wrecking the iron fence on Central avenue. In several streets trolley guy wire were found laying across the sidewalks and being charged made travel dangerous.

A large tree in front of Charles Conover's house on Elmwood place, also went over and in the residential districts nearly every tree was damaged more or less, losing limbs and in countless instances small trees were uprooted.

The telephone company was kept especially busy in repairing its wires in the residential districts where its wires are not underground. It was noon today before the normal service was restored. So far as known the telegraph wires were not damaged to any extent. As it was late when the storm arrived, there was little travel on trolley cars and their delay did not occasion much trouble so far as patrons were concerned.

MISS BERTHA STEINBERG WEDDED TO SAMUEL MAGER.

Miss Bertha Steinberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Steinberg, of Plainfield avenue, and Samuel Mager were married last evening at the Synagogue of the Children of Israel on New street by Rabbi Davidson, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends from New York, Newark, Elizabeth, Westfield, New Brunswick and this city.

Following the ceremony all adjourned to the Y. M. H. A. Hall on Grove street, where a reception was held. The couple received the congratulations of the guests after which supper was served and dancing enjoyed until a late hour. The couple will reside in this city.

Successful Parlor Meeting.

Mrs. Ferguson, a returned missionary from Madras, India, addressed a largely-attended parlor meeting at the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. St. John Fitch, on Park avenue, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Ferguson in her talk gave an interesting description of her work in India telling of the progress being made in Christianizing the natives. Following the talk there was a social hour with refreshments.

LEAL'S GRADUATES

Three Receive Dipolmas at Commencement Exercises This Morning.

Closing exercises of the John Leal School for Boys were held this morning at the school, and a feature was an address by Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton on "Self-Discipline." His address was so impressive that it is doubtful whether the boys or anyone else will ever forget it. Dr. Eaton emphasized the importance of self-discipline in respect to the moral, business and physical life. Referring to the feeling of hatred sometimes felt on the part of the poor against the rich, Dr. Eaton said that it was often due to a disregard of obligation on the part of the rich.

The speaker told the boys not to wait for their enemies to tell them of their faults and weaknesses, but to correct them early in life. He said that there is no room in this world for loafers, and here he emphasized the importance of work, telling of the dignity of all work that is honorable and impressing upon the boys that to be successful they must always keep their time employed.

The graduates this year are T. R. Jewett and Ernest A. Walbridge, who will go to Princeton University, and Courtney N. Stockweather, who goes to Tufts College.

During the exercises an instrumental quartet comprising Dr. Waldo bass; J. H. Jewett, viola; T. R. Jewett, and Mr. Foerstel, of New York, violins, rendered Haydn's "Quartet in D. Major," and T. R. Jewett, violin, rendered a solo number from "Thais."

Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the Junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday school, entertained the children of that department at his home on Central avenue, Saturday afternoon. A professional entertainer from New York delighted the children with magical tricks. The children also played games and afterward refreshments were served. The affair was one of the best held under the auspices of the juniors.

STATE SCHOOL INQUIRY BEGUN

Trenton, June 12.—Following the charges involving alleged misconduct on the part of officers of the State Reform School for Deaf Mutes in this city, the School Committee of the State Board of Education began a general investigation into affairs of the institution Saturday.

Preceding the public hearing, the committee held a conference to determine the scope of the inquiry and the manner in which it should be conducted. In the meantime, counsel representing various parties interested in the proceedings, gathered at the school.

Among them was John H. Backes, of this city, who appeared for Miss Helen Reedy, of Newark, and Mrs. Clara Tindall, of Trenton, who, as officers of the school, are alleged to have entertained male guests at the institution in defiance of rules and discipline.

Former Judge Allen B. Endicott, of Atlantic City, was on hand to care for the interests of Superintendent John Walker, a relative. W. Holt Apgar appeared for Mr. and Mrs. Jacob W. Mutzer, who preferred the charges of drunkenness against Miss Reedy and Mrs. Tindall. Martin P. Devlin appeared for other employes of the school.

The opening of the hearing was marked by a clash between Josiah Stryker, of the attorney-general's office, who was selected to conduct the inquiry, and Mr. Backes. Chairman Ulamor Allen, of the committee, announced that the investigation would include all affairs at the institution. Questions, he said, would be asked only by Mr. Stryker, though they might be suggested by other counsel present.

Edward Demarest, of Liberty street, who has been employed at Niagara Falls, New York, for the past two months, returned today after a brief visit at home. He will be joined at the Falls by Mrs. Day and son, Edward, the latter part of the month to reside permanently.

FEUD IS ENDED AT GRADUATION

New Providence, June 12.—The commencement exercises, held in the Lyceum in Berkeley Heights for three graduates of the New Providence township schools, resulted in the making up of William Jeffery and Dr. Willis F. Johnson, who have been at odds for four years.

Following the exercises Dr. Johnson and Mr. Jeffery shook hands and decided to unite forces for the improvement of the township schools, and as a result of a conversation it was decided to hold a special meeting of the board to consider and pass upon the matter of a new central school building. Dr. Johnson is to submit plans and estimates, and it is figured that the new four-roomed building can be ready for occupancy by January 1.

The re-establishment of friendly relations between these two men was the sequel to a quarrel concerning the teaching staff. At the last meeting of the board it was decided to drop Miss Louise M. Hopkins and another of the teachers. Miss Hopkins made an effort to be retained, and since the meeting has communicated with most of the members of the board, and it is understood that she has obtained sufficient votes to be reengaged at a special meeting of the board which was planned to have been held in the near future.

At the close of the entertainment Friday night Miss Hopkins asked for a declaration, then and there, of the people to desire to continue her in service. Mr. Jeffery, who took her part, and who was the only one who voted for her at the meeting when she was dropped, announced that he would try to arrange for a meeting of the board to be held especially to reconsider the matter. Dr. Johnson, who is president of the board, took the floor and refused to yield to others who immediately arose to speak on the subject. Miss Hopkins made the plea that both Dr. Johnson and Mr. Jeffery had complimented her upon her successful work.

It came out after the meeting that Miss Hopkins had spent two hours with Dr. Johnson trying to get him to reconsider the previous action the board had taken, and he agreed to call a special meeting to do so. This occurred at Dr. Johnson's residence, "Firleigh Hall," Wednesday evening.

While evchanging mutual explanations, Dr. Johnson declared to Mr. Jeffery, following the exercises, that Miss Hopkins had created a false impression when she made reference to a letter which she had received from him, in which he commended her for her work and informed her that Friday would witness the closing of the school and that she was no longer in the service of the township. The exception that she took to this was that she had been told of the closing of the school, but had not been informed as to whether she was to return or not in September. The impression referred to, however, was that the letter had been written following Miss Hopkins' visit to Dr. Johnson.

After mutual explanations, Johnson and Jeffery, who had commenced the conversation as bitterest enemies, parted with mutual expressions of good will and friendship. Three students, two of the Plainfield Avenue School, Richard Jeffery and Frank Romano, and one of the Diamond Hill School, Anthony Debbie, received diplomas. Interesting exercises were given.

A New and Important Department
Inauguration of a Most Helpful Service
Dressmaking and Ladies' Tailoring to Order

At Prices Making it Possible for All to Have First-Class Tailoring and Dressmaking.

After due deliberation and considering every phase of the proposition, we have concluded that the time has arrived for the establishing of a first-class dressmaking and tailoring department in connection with our business. We will, therefore, beginning today, June 12th, open a department for ladies' tailoring and dressmaking to order.

In this department we will make Suits, Coats, Skirts and Dresses, man-tailored to your individual measure, in any style you may select, from models we will present for selection or any that you may select from any of the fashion magazines, satisfying your every whim and wish, guaranteeing you a perfect fit, on condition that we will refund your money not only for the making but for the materials, involved if there is any failure on the part of our tailor-men.

To immediately popularize this new department we will make to your individual measure
Plain Tailored Linen Suits for as little as $6.
Plain Tailored Suits of Serges, Pongees, Mohairs, etc., for as little as $10.
Plain Tailored Dresses of silks and and similar fabrics, at from $6 to $10.
More elaborate styles at proportionately low prices.

These prices, it should be understood, are for the making only, including fitting by expert tailoresses and workmanship by men tailors of the highest grade.

Our only stipulation is that, to secure service in our tailoring and dressmaking department, you will be required to purchase the materials, trimmings and linings in our departments devoted to the sale of those goods, the largest and best stocked departments of their kind in the State.

Any of the salespeople in our fabric section will give you fullest particulars and you can estimate at once what it will cost you to make up any character fabric you have a mind to choose, enabling you to figure the whole cost of a dress at the time you purchase the materials.

We have no doubt that this new departure will meet with instantaneous success, as its need has long been apparent to practicaly every one.

First M. E.

The Sunday-school of the First M. E. church held its Children's Day exercises yesterday morning. They were attended by a large number of adults as well as the members of the school. During the service several adults and eleven children were baptized by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson. The platform was prettily decorated with cut flowers and plants.

Clifford A. Braider presided at the organ and an orchestra consisting of Wendell Glover, Frederick Borrepp, E. H. Guest and A. Hollard were led by E. F. Glover and assisted the choir. The solo, "The Holy City," was beautifully sung by Mrs. June Bilby. The program included: Recitation," Old Glory," Elton Greenlief; exercises by the children; recitation, Hester Stebbins; solo, "The Holy City," Adams, Mrs. June Bilby.

The exercises by the children were as follows:

Organ voluntary; processional, "Onward, Christian Soldiers;" Doxology (rise); invocation service (congreation seated); Sabbath hymn (congregation joining); Scripture verses; response, "He prayeth best;" invocation; response,"O Father, hear us;" anthem, choir; responsive reading, Psalm xlx, Harold Spicer; "See Isreal's Gentle Shepherd Stands;" recitation, welcome to Children's Day, Elizabeth Kellogg; song, primary department, "Jesus loves and cares for me;" recitation, "Welcome to the cradle roll," Jean Cottrell; "Cradle Roll Prayer," song, Stephen Shaw, Beatrice Cottrell, Margaret Kimball, Violet Johnson; recitation, "When God made a lovely thing," Esther Vare; Scripture exercise,"The Coming of the Flowers," Mrs. Kimball's class, Mrs. Kellogg's class; song,"In our dear Lord's Garden," primary department; exercise,"God's Love Covenant," Miss Ethel Titsworth's class; song, Junior C. Warren Chapel.

The regular church service and the children's exercises were combined at Warren chapel yesterday morning. The program was in charge of the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, and the superintendent, Joseph W. Gavett. Prizes for general excellence during the year were awarded Charlotte Cox. Edwin Lance, Mary Lewis and Perry Smith. The program was as follows:

Doxology and Lord's Prayer; hymn, Psalm 23 in unison, prayer, hymn, recitation, "Children's Day," Charlotte Cox;infant baptism; song, primary department; recitation, Seaman Higgins; song, Lillie Smith, Mary Clarke, Hazel Scribner, Elizabeth Louis, Blanche Martin; recitations, Dolores Barnard and Herbert Stites; song, primary department; recitaitons, Marie VanWinkle and Roy Gunn; harmonica solo, Lloyd Snell; award of prizes, Superintendent Gavett; presentation of potted flowers to cradle roll; address, Rev. J. O. McKelvey; prayer, hymn and benediction.

The talk given by Mr. McKelvey was on the text "Create Me a Clean Heart" and was cleverly illustrated with a bottle of ink. The bottle was likened to a boy with impure thoughts, but when the ink was taken out and clear water substituted it was compared to the boy with a pure heart and mind, a new cork in the bottle indicating the right kind of a will. These children were baptized by the pastor: LeRoy William Welsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Welsh; Harold Demarest Cornwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cornwell; Mabel Ruth Winn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Winn.

Hope Chapel.

The children's service at Hope chapel was held yesterday morning and the platform was banked with flowers and special music was given by the choir. The members of the junior primary and beginner's department gave recitations and exercises in charge of Miss Grace Williams, Miss Edna Eckert and Miss Flora Griffen.

The Junior Boy's Club attended the service in a body and the president. Harold Eckert, presented the church with a large American flag as a gift from the organization. It was accepted by John Leal, who made a fitting response. Rev. Frederick L. Greene gave an interesting children's talk and two infants were baptized.

Temple Baptist.

Children's Day exercises were held at the Temple Baptist church, last evening and the edifice was thronged with children and other members of the church. Rev. Evarts C. Conover, the pastor, was in charge of the services, while L. W. Randolph, the superintendent of the school, had charge of the program. There was an address by the oastor. The offering was taken up by Roy Haffner and Paul Jones. Whitney Frazee assisted in the service with cornet solos. A feature was a recitation by Harold Wilson, entitled, "Parting." The program follows:

"Welcome," Kenneth Boughton; Recitations, "My Motto," Harry Winn; "Little Children," Mary Emmons; "The Day I Love," Eva Cartwright; "Did You Ever See-" by Mabel Montross, Gussie Montross, Christine McInness; "Then I Want to Tell," Elizabeth Haffner; "If You Please," Florence Boughten; "Wild Flowers"—Buttercups, Edith Jones, Edith Moore, Clara Moore, daisiez, Catherine Wurgles, Edith Johnson, Helen Campbell; clover, John Mason, Roland Wilson, Adolph Johnson; rose bud, Jessie Campbell, "Our Colors," Freddie Berg, Wells Rose, Walter Dawl, David Myers.

Congregational.

Children's Day exercises of an interesting character were held at the Congregational church yesterday morning. The children occupied seats reserved for them in he front of the church. The cradle roll was called as a fature of the service and this provoked some merriment as each one tried to answer his or her name. Rev. C. L. Goodrich baptized seven children and afterward he presented all children over seven years of age with Bibles.

Another feature was the graduation from the primary to the junior department, the children reiting certain Scripture texts. The children then received diplomas and a copy of the New Textament. The following were graduated: Estella M. Bowers, Harriet C. Morgan, Helen Rice, Grace A. West, Kenneth G. Voorhees, William L. Runyon and Roland S. Harkins. During the exercises Mr. Goodrich gave a short talk on the subject "Pine Trees," and there were selections by the vested choir. Among the children baptized were Rosalind, Elizabeth and Ferris Estee Newell, twins of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Newell.

Crescent Avenue Church.

The mainschool of the Crescent Avenue church joined with the primary department for the first time, yesterday morning in Children's Day exercises. The primary department sung several songs and the main school also gave a number. The feature of the service was a cradle talk given by Dr. Schauffler, of New York. Dr. Schauffler also occupied the church pulpit in the evening, giving an excellent "cradle" sermon. The service was attended by a good-sized gathering.

LITTLE FOLKS' FASHIONS.

Wide leather belts are displacing sashes for little people. Girls as well as boys affect what might be called a "severe" finish, for even the softest, frilliest frocks. Of course, if a little maid has decided preference for a sash, and some have, her infantile heart may be made glad by wearing one of silk or satin, but if the choice is Dame Fashion herself, a belt is the thing.

For the boys and girls, as for their elders, there are distinct differences in effects to be worn in the morning or afternoon. For the former time, belts are a heavy grade of leather, and black and tan are the smartest colors. Except when a child is wearing mourning dull finished black belts are not desirable. It is the highly polished patent leather which they should have. Buckles, leather covered, to match, are more in vogue than metal. The former variety costs more, and therefore is not so common.

Bright colors, red blue and green may appear on dresses in belts, but they should be seen before noon only, to make variety. For the afternoon, little girls who scorn sashes have their frocks finished with a delicate color by the introduction of kid, not leather belts. These come in light blue, pink, yellow and indeed deed e hRhwff lain- gttho-.o a every hue of the rainbow. They are as wide as the leather bands, but the difference in texture is evident, the kid being extremely soft. It may be "dressed" or suede finish.

With such belts silk stockings and kid shoes of the same color must be chosen, an, of course, hair ribbons are to match. The same rule for little girls applies to tiny boys, but after the age of 5 years the latter should wear belts made only of leather.

Fight Follows Collision.

In the midst of the hustle to get home before the storm broke Saturday night, Annie Woodruff and Samuel Brioski, both of the east end, collided on the Somerset street bridge. Mrs. Woodruff rapped Brioski on the head with an umbrella and he retaliated in vigorous fashion. Both were intoxicated and the borough police arrested them. In court this morning Brioski was fined $5 and sentenced on Mrs. Woodruff was suspended.

Pony Killed by Lightning.

The Indian pony used in the open air performance at Watchung, was killed during the storm last night. It was the property of W. de laR. Anderson and was in an open pasture near his home, back of Washington rock. It was found dead near a wire fence this morning, evidently the victim of a bolt which ran along the wire. The animal was valud at $200 and was purchased by Mr. Anderson especially for the performance.

Reinmann—Lynch.

William Reinmann, son of John Reinmann, of the borough, and Miss Eleanor Lynch, of Morristown, were married Friday by Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest. SHOPPING ORDEAL IN BURMA

Requires a Great Effort to Get the Shop Women to Show Their Goods.

You may walk through the muddy old markets of Rangoon for hours at a time or through the brand new bazar at Mandalay without any of the salespeople taking the slightest notice of you as a possible purchaser of their wares. The dear little ladies sit cross-legged upon long tables in front of the high cupboards containing their goods. They are placidly smoking or chatting or painting their faces or braiding their hair. They are not attending to business in the least.

If the European is conspicuously dressed or presents a figure which the Burman, with his finely trained sense of humor, considers at all ridiculous then a gay ripple of laughter passes along the stalls, and then indeed the would-be customer is noticed; but otherwise the tourist is an object of no interest whatever.

It requires a great effort to get a Burmese shop woman (they are nearly all women) to show you her silks, and when at last she has spread her merchandise broadcast upon the table and you are revelling in the illusion that you are living in the middle of a rainbow, with a chance of holding fast to some of its colors, she will ask her price (which is seldom more than one rupee too much) and will stick to it like glue.

She is an indolent lady in many ways who loves a quiet life, and she has determined that her most comfortable course is not to haggle in the market place. So you may make up your mind that bargaining and persuasion are useless arts to practice in Burma, however valuable they may be elsewhere.—Blackwood's Magazine.

ARTIFICIAL LACE IN FRANCE

Mechanism and Chemistry Furnish Product That Wears Better Than Real Article.

Mechanism and chemistry combined have furnished France with a new produce—artificial lace. The general public has heard little about it, but the lace manufacturers of Lyons, Calais and Caudry have for some time past been much perturbed over this unexpected competition to which they will have to submit.

Artificial lace is in effect a manufacture of a very simple nature. There is no weaving employed in its production. The machine consists in its essential parts of a receptacle containing a cupro-ammoniacal solution of cellulose, a metallic cylinder upon which is engraved the negative of the design and a coagulation vat.

A rotatory motion is given to the cylinder, over which flows the solution which, entering the interstices of the engraved pattern, fixes itself immediately in the coagulative liquid, out of which emerges the texture ready to be dyed and dressed.

Artificial lace has a beautiful appearance. It is homogeneous and unalterable; will wear better and is less combustible than ordinary lace. Water does not affect it. Any desired pattern can be obtained by engraving a new cylinder.

Strange Idea of "Fun."

A new kind of "fun making" was inaugurated when there appeared among the "Personals" in each of the Chicago papers an advertisement which read: "Am now in a position to meet all my creditors. Kindly communicate with me." Then followed the name and address of a man who was about to be married to an estimable young woman who, according to the rumor, was the possessor of a substantial fortune. Of course the advertisement was inserted and paid for by somebody who suspected that he or she was a humorist, and it appears to open up a new field of endeavor for persons who regard it as one of the inalienable rights of mankind to make marriage a terror to those who undergo it.

Active Frenchmen.

A study of the activities of the French population based on the last census has just been published. It shows that 20,720,879 persons, including the army, are engaged in active pursuits. The figure represents 53.3 per cent. of the population; it includes 13,027,000 men, 68 per cent. of the male population, and 7,693,000 women, or 39 per cent. of the females.

Agriculture still employs 43 per cent. of all the inhabitants of the country, and more than 50 per cent. in 59 departments. In 16 departments the population engaged in industrial pursuits ranged from 40 to 64 per cent., and in 12 from 30 to 40 per cent.

Automobile construction occupied 22,000 persons, and electrical machinery 20,000.

FEAT OF A CARRIER PIGEON

Carries on One Trip Forty Thousand Messages Averaging Twenty Words Each.

For more than two thousand years carrier pigeons have been used to carry messages when no other means sufficed, and during the siege of Paris, when 363 birds were sent out from the doomed city, one of the birds performed the almost incredible feat of carrying to the outside world, on one trip, no less than forty thousand messages, averaging twenty words each. This was eight hundred thousand words, or the equivalent of five or six average novels.

This marvel was accomplished by means of microscopic photography, the messages being first printed with ordinary type and then photographed and rephotographed, until they had been reduced several hundred diameters. The final photographs were taken on films or pellicles of collodion, each of which, about two inches square, contained fifty thousand words. A dozen of these films, rolled up in a quill, weighed one-twenty-eighth of an ounce. The messages could, of course, be read with a microscope, without the necessity of rephotographing and enlarging.

Under favorable conditions, and for comparatively short distances, pigeons have carried as much as three-quarters of an ounce. Using the photo-reduction method, it would therefore be possible for a single bird to carry messages equal in words to no fewer than one hundred and twenty ordinary volumes.—Harper's Weekly.

TEACH THE SICK TO JUGGLE

Manual Dexterity Is Also Beneficial to the Brain Worker of Sedentary Habits.

Speaking of conjuring, the allied art of juggling is one of the most amusing and valuable of diversions, especially to the sedentary. Many physicians become expert in juggling, but it is to their patients that it is most useful.

The bedridden, if they retain the use of their hands, may beguile many a weary hour in learning to keep three or four tennis balls in the air at once and in balancing sticks and other simple objects on the forefinger or on the chin.

For the brainworker who does not care for walking there is no better recreation. It has often occurred to us that in cases where there is any reason to fear some form of paralysis the educating of disused cerebral, cerebellar and spinal centers by the rapid juggling might serve to act as an efficient preventive.

We do not wish to claim too much for manual education of this kind, but we may point out that it tends to perfect nervous poise and that no juggling trick can be properly done if the performer indulges in dissipation even so mild as beer and cigarettes.—American Medicine.

Where Cleanliness Counted.

A housekeeper, wishing to change her baker, recently decided to investigate the conditions under which various kinds of bread were made and sold. Beginning with one of the most popular bakeries in town, she found that the loaves of bread were packed in large cases for delivery without being previously wrapped in paper. At the houses of customers, they were taken from the cases and put into bags by hands which not over clean to start with, had been used in driving and in other miscellaneous offices. She spoke with the man who had the contract for delivering the bread in her part of the city and asked the man why he did not have it put into bags at the bakery. His reply was, "Why, madam, that would never do at all. The bags would get so dirty that the ladies would refuse to take them."—LaFollette's Weekly.

A Reason for Being Proud.

The eight-year-old son of a Baltimore physician was playing in his father's office with a friend during the absence of the doctor, when suddenly the first lad threw open a closet door and disclosed to the terrified gaze of his little friend an articulated skeleton.

When the visitor had sufficiently recovered from his shock to stand the announcement, the doctor's son explained that his father was extremely proud of that skeleton.

"Is he?" asked the other. "Why?"

"I don't know," was the answer; "maybe it was his first patient."—Harper's Magazine.

Could Be Banked On.

In a Columbus avenue dry goods store where the family of the proprietor constitutes the working force the son took charge of the hosiery department in the absence of his sister. A pair of thin lisle stockings that he had shown a middle-aged customer gave her considerable concern.

"I do wonder if they are strong enough," she said.

"Oh, yes, ma'am," said the youth. "You can carry a pretty heavy pocketbook in these stockings and it won't break through."

Curiosity of History.

A lady one day remarked to Bulwer Lytton how odd it was that a dove (Latin, colombe) should have been sent out to find the Old World, and Columbus (Colombe) should have found the new.

"Yes," agreed the novelist; "but more curious still is the fact that one came from Noah and the other from Genoa!"

An American Heiress Imposes Upon Her Titled Suitor

By SARAH J. ATWATER

The center of art in Europe is Florence. The town is always full of Americans, and there are usually American art students there. One day an American girl, in rich apparel, while gazing at the paintings hung in the Pitti palace in that artistic city stopped at the easel of a copyist—a girl about her own age—who was copying a Titian, admired her work and entered into conversation with her. The artist was a Miss May Monroe of St. Louis, the other Miss Margaret De Forest of New York. The acquaintance thus begun was continued, and in time Miss De Forest engaged Miss Monroe to paint her portrait.

"I am going to take you into my confidence," said Miss De Forest to Miss Monroe one day while sitting for the picture, "and ask you to do me a favor. I possess an immense fortune and have come abroad for the purpose of meeting a suitor who has never seen me. Mutual friends have made an arrangement by which Count Desmond de l'Amoureux, descended from one of the oldest families in France, is to visit me, and if we are both agreed we are to marry. I am not to be taken in by any adventurer and have investigated the count's position thoroughly. He possesses valuable estates which with my fortune would enable us to take a very prominent position in European society.

"But I will marry no man who does not love me. My wish is that you shall impersonate me to the count, I impersonating you, a protegee of my real self. If I like him I will endeavor to win him away from you. In that way I shall know that he loves me for myself."

"That would make a very pretty romance," said Miss Monroe.

"Unless you fall in love with him yourself."

"No fear of that. I'm engaged to be married."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; to a young American, a struggling artist like myself."

"That is fortunate. We can take him into the secret and, forming a party of four, go about together, thus enabling me to carry out my plan."

"And enjoy ourselves as well."

Count Desmond de l'Amoureux arrived and was introduced to the two girls, they occupying reversed positions. Bernard Wright was introduced to the count as the fiance of the real Margaret De Forest. The four visited together the galleries, the mediaeval buildings and the environs of Florence, enjoying every moment. The party filled a carriage, and many were the drives they took over the beautiful hills and dales about the city in the delicious Florentine sunshine.

Young Wright, devoted to his art and, with the usual artistic temperament, careless as to material possessions, entered upon his part of the deception reluctantly and merely to please Miss Monroe. He paid his devoirs perfunctorily to the heiress, but was by no means bored at doing so. His real mistress was his brush. Miss Monroe seemed to enjoy immensely personating an heiress and was very patronizing to the real Miss De Forest. Count de l'Amoureux was evidently from the first very much pleased with the girl whom he supposed to be Miss De Forest, and Miss Monroe knew with a woman's quick intuition that it was not interest alone that moved him.

Miss De Forest soon began to practice artful means to draw the nobleman away from her substitute. Margaret was an attractive girl and knew how to win a man. Nevertheless the count was constant to May. One day while sitting with her on the Piazza Michelangelo, a hill overlooking the city and the Arno flowing through its quayed banks and under its old fashioned bridges, he said:

"Where did you pick up your protegee?"

"I met her here in Florence. She's a lovely girl."

"H'm! I don't fancy her."

Miss Monroe laughed.

"Why are you merry?" asked the count.

"I was thinking, supposing I were to turn over my fortune to her, how long would it be before you would transfer your attentions from me to her."

"I will grant that there was a time when I might have done this, when we first met, though I fancied you in preference immediately. But now that I have known you a transfer would be impossible."

"Suppose you try."

"Try! What do you mean?"

"I think May cares for you. Before entering upon any contract to become your wife I should prefer that you remain for a time under her influence. She and I are bosom friends and shall always be much together. I don't care to have an affair between my husband and my friend. I prefer to trust his constancy before marriage."

"But you must have seen that Miss Monroe has not been averse to my attentions and that I have not given them."

"Devote yourself to her for two weeks."

"It would seem an age."

Miss Monroe flatly refused to ex through the deserted streets to Lawrence's rooms. The unusual events of the evening had combined to upset my nerves, and it was with a vague feeling of dread that I accompanied him on what seemed a fool's errand. Yet there was a decidedly uncomfortable feeling that I could not suppress. Twice I looked behind me quickly, and twice I saw nothing but the long, sharp shadows cast by the electric lights. Lawrence seemed unconscious of my mental excitement, for he strode quietly by my side with bent head and hands in his pockets. It was a relief to get into the warmly lighted vestibule, for there I no longer heard the imaginary soft pad-pad of feet behind us. I had carried the box in a hand bag, and its weight was such that I was glad to turn it over to my host, who excused himself and disappeared into the smoking room. Presently he returned.

I saw that something was on his mind.

"See here, Dick," he began seriously, "Grace—Miss Farnham—is not aware of my return. If I should be taken ill or anything she must not know the circumstances. Give her this letter, which will explain enough. If nothing happens forget it all like the good fellow you are." And as he clasped my hand and looked into my eyes I knew that he had guessed my secret.

"Now for the hand of Buddha," he cried, with a laugh, and together we entered the handsome smoking room. It was a large room, crowded with treasures from every quarter of the globe. In the middle of the room stood a small ebony table, the top inlaid with squares of ivory like a checkerboard. On it stood the hand of Buddha. It was the size of an infant's hand and carved from a solid piece of ivory, yellowed with unknown age. The curved, long nailed fingers clasped the stem of a delicately carved flower. It was a horrible object. It looked like a dead hand.

I could not repress my excitement as Lawrence locked the door and bade me bring him the box from a divan where he had placed it. I was surprised to see that his face was white and strained and that his hands trembled as he took the box from my grasp. He placed it on the table, and we took up our station near the door, both looking eagerly at the table. The air seemed heavy with some strong perfume, but that was undoubtedly the result of the long closed room with its sandalwood furniture and scented hangings.

Suddenly the table seemed to sway slightly and the hand toppled over, striking the box, and then Lawrence sprang back, with a hoarse shout, as the curved fingers loosened their hold on the flower and twined around and clung to the box. Gropingly they crawled over the carved flowers and birds; then, as we gazed breathlessly, a faint vapor curled around the edges of the box. It grew in volume, and I heard Lawrence unlock the door behind us. Then the lid raised. At first I could not see the object that protruded itself. Then its horrible form grew on my sight. The long, sinuous body of a serpent as large around as my arm issued from that tiny casket. Its red fangs were like crimson stains on the milky whiteness of its skin. It raised itself far above the table, the hideous head swaying to and fro, its green eyes gleaming like jewels in the semidarkness of the room and piercing the faint vapor that surrounded it. The incense seemed overpowering, and I felt that I was losing consciousness when Lawrence raised a revolver.

My hand was on the knob when he fired. A crimson stream flowed from the hideous thing, but still it raised its length into the air. Lawrence fired again and yelled for me to open the door. As I did so I heard a strangled cry and turned to see Lawrence falling to the floor, the white serpent coiled tightly around his body. Grasping a Turkish scimiter that hung on the wall beside me and mad with rage and grief, I thrust the gleaming knife again and again into the sinuous body of the reptile, which never relaxed its hold, its head still uplifted, with red fanged mouth and jeweled eyes. Suddenly everything turned black before me, and I lost consciousness. When I regained my senses the light was still burning dimly. The window draperies were stirring softly, and, to my joy, I heard Lawrence's voice calling in strained, unnatural tones. He was slowly struggling to his feet, and I arose and went to his assistance. His face was ghastly, and around his throat, above his low collar, was a dull purple line. He pointed to the floor as he sank feebly into a chair. The white serpent was gone, but on the dark rug lay a long chain composed of countless small disks of ivory strung together on a silken cord. The scimiter lay beside it, the blade spotless and shining. The air was still heavy with a strange, subtle perfume that clouded our senses and rendered the occurrences of the past hour unreal. On the table lay the ivory box empty. The hand of Buddha was gone. Near the open window and in the shadows of the stirring draperies lay a green silk cap in the middle of which was sewed a curious jeweled button, insignia of a mandarin's rank. As I leaned over to pick it up a yellow hand with curving, clawlike nails darted across the low sill and then disappeared into the outer shadows bearing the green cap.

* * * * * * *

Lawrence lived a week, and before he died he told me the story of Van Ping, and then I knew that the punishment that had been meted out to my friend was well deserved, and I could not avenge him because of that other one who had been justly avenged.

CHAPTER I.

The Plainsman.

The man was riding just below the summit of the ridge, occasionally uplifting his head so as to gaze across the crest, shading his eyes with one hand, to thus better concentrate his vision. Both horse and rider plainly exhibited signs of weariness, but every movement of the latter showed ceaseless vigilance, his glance roaming the barren ridges, a brown Winchester lying cocked across the saddle pommel, his left hand taut on the rein. Yet the horse he bestrode scarcely required restraint, advancing slowly, with head hanging low, and only occasionally breaking into a brief trot under the impetus of the spur.

The rider was a man approaching thirty, somewhat slender and long of limb, but possessing broad, squared shoulders above a deep chest, sitting the saddle easily in plainsman fashion, yet with an erectness of carriage which suggested military training. The face under the wide brim of the weather-worn slouch hat was clean-shaven, browned by sun and wind, and strongly marked, the chin slightly prominent, the mouth firm, the gray eyes full of character and daring. His dress was that of rough service, plain leather "chaps," showing marks of hard usage, a gray woolen shirt turned low at the neck, with a kerchief knotted loosely about the sinewy bronzed throat. At one hip dangled the holster of a "forty-five," on the other hung a canvas-covered canteen. His was figure and face to be noted anywhere, a man from whom you would expect both thought and action, and one who seemed to exactly fit into his wild environment.

Where he rode was the very western extreme of the prairie country, billowed like the sea, and from off the crest of its higher ridges, the wide level sweep of the plains was visible, extending like a vast brown ocean to the foothills of the far-away mountains. Yet the actual commencement of that drear, barren expanse was fully ten miles distant, while all about where he rode the conformation was irregular, comprising narrow valleys and swelling mounds, with here and there a sharp ravine, riven from the rock and invisible until one drew up startled at its very brink. The general trend of depression was undoubtedly southward leading toward the valley of the Arkansas, yet irregular ridges occasionally cut across, adding to the confusion. The entire surrounding landscape presented the same aspect, with no special object upon which the eye could rest for guidance—no tree, no upheaval of rock, no peculiarity of summit, no snake-like trail—all about extended the same dull, dead monotony of brown, sun-baked hills, with slightly greener depressions lying between, interspersed by patches of sand or the white gleam of alkali. It was a dreary, deserted land, parched under the hot summer sun, brightened by no vegetation, excepting sparse bunches of buffalo grass or an occasional stunted sage bush, and disclosing nowhere the slightest sign of human habitation.

The rising sun reddened the crest of the hills, and the rider, halting his willing horse, sat motionless, gazing steadily into the southwest. Apparently he perceived nothing there unusual, for he slowly turned his body about in the saddle, sweeping his eyes, inch by inch, along the line of the horizon, until the entire circuit had been completed. Then his compressed lips smiled slightly, his hand unconsciously patting the horse's neck.

"I reckon we're still alone, old girl," he said quietly, a bit of Southern drawl in the voice. "We'll try for the trail, and take it easy."

He swung stiffly out of the saddle, and with reins dangling over his shoulder, began the slower advance on foot, the exhausted horse trailing behind. His was not a situation in which one could feel certain of safety, for any ridge might conceal the wary foemen he sought to avoid, yet he proceeded now with renewed confidence. It was the summer of 1868, and the place the very heart of the Indian country, with every separate tribe ranging between the Yellowstone and the Brazos, either restless or openly on the war-path. Rumors of atrocities were being retold the length and breadth of the border, and every report drifting in to either fort or settlement only added to the alarm. For once at least the Plains Indians had discovered a common cause, tribal differences had been adjusted in war against the white invaders, and Kiowas, Comanches, Arapahoes, Cheyennes and Sioux had become welded together in savage brotherhood. To oppose them were the scattered and unorganized settlers lining the more eastern streams, guarded by small detachments of regular troops posted here and there amid that broad wilderness, scarcely within touch of each other.

Everywhere beyond these lines of patrol wandered roaming war parties, attacking travelers on the trails, raiding exposed settlements, and occasionally venturing to try open battle with the small squads of armed men. In this stress of sudden emergency—every available soldier on active duty—civilians had been pressed into service, and hastily despatched to warn exposed settlers, guide wagon trains, or carry despatches between outposts. And thus our rider, Jack Keith, who knew every foot of the plains lying between the Republican and the Canadian rivers, was one of these thus suddenly requisitioned, merely because he chanced to be discovered unemployed by the harassed commander of a cantonment just without the environs of Carson City. Twenty minutes later he was riding swiftly into the northwest, bearing important news to General Sheridan, commander of the Department, who happened at that moment to be at Fort Cairnes. To Keith this had been merely another page in a career of adventure; for him to take his life in his hands had long ago become an old story. He had quietly performed the special duty allotted him, watched a squadron of troopers tret forth down the valley of the Republican, received the hasty thanks of the peppery little general, and then, having nothing better to do, traded his horse in at the government corral for a fresh mount and started back again for Carson City. For the greater portion of two nights and a day he had been in the saddle, but he was accustomed to this, for he had driven more than one bunch of longhorns up the Texas trail; and as he had slept three hours at Cairnes, and as his nerves were like steel, the thought of danger gave him slight concern. He was thoroughly tired, and it rested him to get out of the saddle, while the freshness of the morning air was a tonic, the very breath of which made him forgetful of fatigue.

After all, this was indeed the very sort of experience which appealed to him, and always had—this life of peril in the open, under the stars and the sky. He had constantly experienced it for so long now, eight years, as to make it seem merely natural. While he ploughed steadily forward through the shifting sand of the coulee, his thought drifted idly back over those years, and sometimes he smiled, and occasionally frowned, as various incidents returned to memory. It had been a rough life, yet one not unusual to those of his generation. Born of excellent family in tidewater Virginia, his father a successful planter, his mother had died while he was still in early boyhood, and he had grown up cut off from all womanly influence. He had barely attained his majority, a senior at William and Mary's College, when the Civil War came; and one month after Virginia cast in her lot with the South, he became a sergeant in a cavalry regiment commanded by his father. He had enjoyed that life and won his spurs, yet it had cost. There was much not over-pleasant to remember, and those strenuous years of almost ceaseless fighting, of long night marches, of swift, merciless raiding, of lonely scouting within the enemy's lines, of severe wounds, hardship and suffering, had left their marks on both body and soul. His father had fallen on the field at Antietam, and left him utterly alone in the world, but he had fought on grimly to the end, until the last flag of the Confederacy had been furled. By that time, upon the collar of his tattered gray jacket appeared the tarnished insignia of a captain. The quick tears dimmed his eyes even now as he recalled anew that final parting following Appomattox, the battle-worn faces of his men, and his own painful journey homeward, defeated, wounded and penniless. It was no home when he got there, only a heap of ashes and a few weed-grown acres. No familiar face greeted him; not even a slave was left.

He had honestly endeavored to remain there, to face the future and work it out alone; he persuaded himself to feel that this was his paramount duty to the state, to the memory of the dead. But those very years of army life made such a task impossible; the dull, dead monotony of routine, the loneliness, the slowness of results, became intolerable. As it came to thousands of his comrades, the call of the West came to him, and at last he yielded, and drifted toward the frontier. The life there fascinated him, drawing him deeper and deeper into its swirling vortex. He became freighter, mail carrier, hunter, government scout, cowboy, foreman. Once he had drifted into the mountains, and took a chance in the mines, but the wide plains called him back once more to their desert loneliness. What an utter waste it all seemed, now that he looked back upon it. Eight years of fighting, hardship and rough living, and what had they brought him? The reputation of a hard rider, a daring player at cards, a quick shot, a scorner of danger, and a bad man to fool with—that was the whole of a record hardly won. The man's eyes hardened, his lips set firmly, as this truth came crushing home. A pretty life story surely, one to be proud of, and with probably no better ending than an Indian bullet, or the flash of a revolver in some barroom fight.

The narrow valley along which he was traveling suddenly changed its direction, compelling him to climb the rise of the ridge. Slightly below the summit he halted. In front extended the wide expanse of the Arkansas valley, a scene of splendor under the golden rays of the sun, with vivid contrast of colors, the gray of rocks, the yellow of sand, the brown of distant hills, the green of vegetation, and the silver sheen of the stream half hidden behind the fringe of cottonwoods lining its banks. This was a sight Keith had often looked upon, but always with appreciation, and for the moment his eyes swept across from bluff to bluff without thought except for its wild beauty. Then he perceived something which instantly startled him into attention—yonder, close beside the river, just beyond that ragged bunch of cottonwoods, slender spirals of blue smoke were visible. That would hardly be a camp of freighters at this hour of the day, and besides, the Santa Fe trail along here ran close in against the bluff, coming down to the river at the ford two miles further west. No party of plainsmen would ever venture to build a fire in so exposed a spot, and no small company would take the chances of the trail. But surely that appeared to be the flap of a canvas wagon top a little to the right of the smoke, yet all was so far away he could not be certain. He stared in that direction a long while, shading his eyes with both hands, unable to decide. There were three or four moving black dots higher up the river, but so far away he could not distinguish whether men or animals. Only as outlined against the yellow sand dunes could he tell they were advancing westward toward the ford.

Decidedly puzzled by all this, yet determined to solve the mystery and unwilling to remain hidden there until night, Keith led his horse along the slant of the ridge, until he attained a sharp break through the bluff leading down into the valley. It was a rugged gash, nearly impassable, but a half hour of toil won them the lower prairie, the winding path preventing the slightest view of what might be meanwhile transpiring below. Once safely out in the valley the river could no longer be seen, while barely a hundred yards away, winding along like a great serpent, ran the deeply rutted trail to Santa Fe. In neither direction appeared any sign of human life. As near as he could determine from those distant cottonwoods outlined against the sky, for the smoke spirals were too thin by then to be observed, the spot sought must be considerably to the right of where he had emerged. With this idea in mind he advanced cautiously, his every sense alert, searching anxiously for fresh signs of passage or evidence of a wagon train having deserted the beaten track, and turned south. The trail itself, dustless and packed hard, revealed nothing, but some five hundred yards beyond the ravine he discovered what he sought—here two wagons had turned sharply to the left, their wheels cutting deeply enough into the prairie sod to show them heavily laden. With the experience of the border he was able to determine that these wagons were drawn by mules, two span of each, their small hoofs clearly defined on the turf, and that they were being driven rapidly, on a sharp trot as they turned, and then, a hundred feet further, at a slashing gallop. Just outside their trail appeared the marks of a galloping horse. A few rods farther along Keith came to a confused blur of pony tracks sweeping in from the east, and the whole story of the chase was revealed as though he had witnessed it with his own eyes. They must have been crazy, or else impelled by some grave necessity, to venture along this trail in so small a party. And they were traveling west—west! Keith drew a deep breath, and swore to himself, "Of all the blame fools!"

Slender Spirals of Blue Smoke Were Visible.

He perceived the picture in all its grewsome details—the two mule-drawn wagons moving slowly along the trail in the early morning; the band of hostile Indians suddenly swooping out from some obscure hiding place in the bluffs; the discovery of their presence; the desperate effort at escape; the swerving from the open trail in vain hope of reaching the river and finding protection underneath its banks; the frightened mules galloping wildly, lashed into a frenzy by the man on horseback; the pounding of the ponies' hoofs, punctuated by the exultant yells of the pursuers. Again he swore:

"Of all the blame fools!"

CHAPTER II

The Scene of Tragedy.

Whatever might be the nature of the tragedy it would be over with long before this, and those moving black spots away yonder to the west, that he had discerned from the bluff, were undoubtedly the departing raiders. There was nothing left for Keith to do except determine the fate of the unfortunates, and give their bodies decent burial. That any had escaped, or yet lived, was altogether unlikely, unless, perchance, women had been in the party, in which case they would have been borne away prisoners.

Confident that no hostiles would be left behind to observe his movements, Keith pressed steadily forward, leading his horse. He had thus traversed fully half a mile before coming upon any evidence of a fight—here the pursuers had apparently come up with the wagons, and circled out upon either side. From their ponies' tracks there must have been a dozen in the band. Perhaps a hundred yards further along lay two dead ponies. Keith examined them closely—both had been ridden with saddles, the marks of the cinches plainly visible. Evidently one of the wagon mules had also dropped in the traces here, and had been dragged along by his mates. Just beyond came a sudden depression in the prairie down which the wagons had plunged so heavily as to break one of the axles; the wheel lay a few yards away, and, somewhat to the right, there lay the wreck of the wagon itself, two dead mules still in the traces, the vehicle stripped of contents and charred by fire. A hundred feet further along was the other wagon, its tongue broken, the canvas top ripped open, while between the two were scattered odds and ends of wearing apparel and provisions, with a pile of boxes smoking grimly. The remaining mules were gone, and no semblance of life remained anywhere. Keith dropped his reins over his horse's head, and, with Winchester cocked and ready, advanced cautiously.

Death from violence had long since become almost a commonplace occurrence to Keith, yet now he shrank for an instant as his eyes perceived the figure of a man lying motionless across the broken wagon tongue. The grizzled hair and beard were streaked with blood, the face almost unrecognizable, while the hands yet grasped a bent and shattered rifle. Evidently the man had died fighting, beaten down by overwhelming numbers after expending his last shot. Then these fiends had scalped and left him where he fell. Fifty feet beyond, shot in the back, lay a younger man, doubled up in a heap, also scalped and dead. That was all; Keith scouted over a wide circle, even scanning the stretch of gravel under the river bank, before he could fully satisfy himself there were no others in the party. It seemed impossible that these two traveling alone would have ventured upon such a trip in the face of known Indian hostility. Yet they must have done so, and once again his lips muttered:

"Of all the blame fools!"

Suddenly he halted, staring about over the prairie, obsessed by a new thought, an aroused suspicion. There had appeared merely the hoof-prints of the one horse alongside of the fleeing wagons when they first turned out from the trail, and that horse had been newly shod. But there were two dead ponies lying back yonder; neither shod, yet both had borne saddles. More than this, they had been spurred, the blood marks still plainly visible, and one of them was branded; he remembered it now, a star and arrow. What could all this portend? Was it possible this attack was no Indian affair after all? Was the disfiguring of bodies, the scalping, merely done to make it appear the act of savages? Driven to investigation by this suspicion, he passed again over the trampled ground, marking this time every separate indentation, every faintest imprint of hoof or foot. There was no impression of a moccasin anywhere; every mark remaining was of booted feet. The inference was sufficiently plain—this had been the deed of white men, not of red; foul murder, and not savage war.

The knowledge seemed to sear Keith's brain with fire, and he sprang to his feet, hands clinched and eyes blazing. He could have believed this of Indians, it was according to their nature, their method of warfare; but the cowardliness of it, the atrocity of the act, as perpetrated by men of his own race, instantly aroused within him a desire for vengeance. He wanted to run the fellows down, to discover their identity. Without thinking of personal danger he ran forward on their trail, which led directly westward, along the line of cottonwoods. These served to conceal his own movements, yet for the moment, burning with passion, he was utterly without caution, without slightest sense of peril. He must know who was guilty of such a crime; he felt capable of killing them even as he would venemous snakes. It was a perfectly plain trail to follow, for the fugitives, apparently convinced of safety, and confident their cowardly deed would be charged to Indian raiders, had made no particular effort at concealment, but had ridden away at a gallop, their horses' hoofs digging deeply into the soft turf. On this retreat they had followed closely along the river bank, aiming for the ford, and almost before he realized it Keith was himself at the water's edge where the trail abruptly ended, starting vaguely across toward the opposite shore. Even as he stood there, realizing the futility of further pursuit amid the maze of sand dunes opposite, the sharp reports of two rifles reached him, spurts of smoke rose from the farther bank, and a bullet chugged into the ground at his feet, while another sang shrilly overhead.

These shots, although neither came sufficiently near to be alarming, served to send Keith to cover. Cool-headed and alert now, his first mad rage dissipated, he scanned the opposite bank cautiously, but could nowhere discover any evidence of life. Little by little he comprehended the situation, and decided upon his own action. The fugitives were aware of his presence, and would prevent his crossing the stream, yet they were not at all liable to return to this side and thus reveal their identity. To attempt any further advance would be madness, but he felt perfectly secure from molestation so long as he remained quietly on the north shore. Those shots were merely a warning to keep back; the very fact that the men firing kept concealed was proof positive that they simply wished to be left alone. They were not afraid of what he knew now, only desirous of not being seen. Confident as to this, he retreated openly, without making the slightest effort to conceal his movements, until he had regained the scene of murder. In evidence of the truth of his theory no further shots were fired, and although he watched that opposite sand bank carefully, not the slightest movement revealed the presence of others. That every motion he made was being observed by keen eyes he had no doubt, but this knowledge did not disconcert him, now that he felt convinced fear of revealment would keep his watchers at a safe distance. Whoever they might be they were evidently more anxious to escape discovery than he was fearful of attack, and possessed no desire to take his life, unless it became necessary to prevent recognition. They still had every reason to believe their attack on the wagons would be credited to hostile Indians, and would consider it far safer to remain concealed, and thus harbor this supposition. They could not suspect that Keith had already stumbled upon the truth, and was determined to verify it.

Secure in this conception of the situation, yet still keeping a wary eye about to guard against any treachery, the plainsman, discovering a spade in the nearest wagon, hastily dug a hole in the sand, wrapped the dead bodies in blankets, and deposited them therein, piling above the mound the charred remains of boxes as some slight protection against prowling wolves. He searched the clothing of the men, but found little to reward the effort, a few letters which were slipped into his pockets to be read later, some ordinary trinkets hardly worth preserving except that they might assist in identifying the victims, and, about the neck of the elder man, a rather peculiar locket, containing a portrait painted on ivory. Keith was a long time opening this, the spring being very ingeniously concealed, but upon finally succeeding, he looked upon the features of a woman of middle age, a strong mature face of marked refinement, exceedingly attractive still, with smiling dark eyes, and a perfect wealth of reddish brown hair. He held the locket open in his hand for several minutes, wondering who she could be, and what possible connection she could have held with the dead. Something about that face smiling up into his own held peculiar fascination for him, gripping him with a strange feeling of familiarity, touching some dim memory which failed to respond. Surely he had never seen the original, for she was not one to be easily forgotten, and yet eyes, hair, expression, combined to remind him of some one whom he had seen but could not bring definitely to mind. There were no names on the locket, no marks of identification of any kind, yet realizing the sacredness of it, Keith slipped the fragile gold chain about his neck, and securely hid the trinket beneath his shirt.

It was noon by this time, the sun high overhead, and his horse, with dangling rein, still nibbling daintily at the short grass. There was no reason for his lingering longer. He swept his gaze the length and breadth of the desolate valley, and across the river over the sand hills. All alike appeared deserted, not a moving thing being visible between the bluffs and the stream. Still he had the unpleasant feeling of being watched, and it made him restless and eager to be away. The earlier gust of anger, the spirit of revenge, had left him, but it had merely changed into a dogged resolution to discover the perpetrators of this outrage and bring them to justice for the crime. The face in the locket seemed to ask it of him, and his nature urged response. But he could hope to accomplish nothing more here, and the plainsman swung himself into the saddle. He turned his horse's head eastward, and rode away. From the deeply rutted trail he looked back to where the fire still smoked in the midst of that desolate silence.

The Plainfield Baseball Club started the league baseball season here on Saturday in a way that was satisfactory to the fans by defeating its old-time rivals, Somerville, by the score of 8 to 1. The heretofore formidable ball tossers from Somerville were like a lot of lambs, and "Red" Waller, who was in the box for Plainfield, had them at his mercy. The Somervillians had to be satisfied with five bingles, including one double, while Plainfield touched Clinton for seven hits, including two doubles, one by Flynn and one by Waller. The one by Waller brought in two men, but "Red" was left at second.

There were several familiar faces on the local team, including George Mallen, the former Westfield player, who showed that he has lost none of his old-time cunning; Flynn, who formerly played short for Plainfield in other days, and who is just as fast as ever, while Bertwhistle covered left garden in faultless style, and throwing out a runner at third in the first inning.

A feature of the contest was the fast work of Walter Nelson, the catcher, who nipped a foul fly in the fourth and then threw out Gordon, who was trying to steal second. Nelson also caught a fine game. The contest was marred somewhat by four misplays of Swanson at short for Somerville, but better things are expected. It is a recognized fact that Somerville will not let Plainfield get that pennant without a hard fight. Brit. Martin, at second, and "Dave" Driscoll at first, also put up their usual good game Saturday. The score:

In the league game played at High Bridge, Saturday, the Bound Brook team was defeated in one of the most exciting contests of the season, lasting ten innings. The final score was 4 to 3. Both teams played classy ball. In the tenth inning some clever batting by the home team gave them the victory. Blackwell, who twirled for High Bridge, was in fine condition and was given excellent support. Ortlieb also pitched a fine game for Bound Brook. The score by innings:

Borough High School Boys Defeated by Close Margin in Second Game.

The Plainfield High School baseball team evened matters up Saturday afternoon when it defeated the North Plainfield High School aggregation on Hyde Field by a score of 11 to 9. The heavy stick work of the city boys was too much for the borough lads; Bailey took Townley's place in the box, but not until Plainfield had won the contest. Features of the game were a three-base hit by Townley and a double play in the eighth, when Denny made a pretty catch and caught Taylor off first base. There were numerous arguments over close decisions. The score:

WON IN 13TH INNING

Tied in Ninth, Dunellen Downed Orange in a 3 to 2 Finish.

The Dunellen Field Club defeated the crack Orange Y. M. C. A. at Dunellen Saturday in a thirteen inning game. The Orange boys obtained the lead in the first inning and kept it until Dunellen's half of the ninth when the Dunellen boys tied the score on a base on balls to Wendt and singles by Dodwell and Nonamaker. In the thirteenth Giddes got to first on Crane's error, stole second and came leisurely home when Coyle drove the ball to the base of the big elm in deep center. The score:

Napoleon on Suicide.

On the subject of suicide Napoleon wrote at St. Helena: "Has a man the right to take his own life? Certainly, as soon as his death would be an injury to no one and his life a burden. When is life a burden? When it offers only tribulations, but as these may vanish at any moment there seems to be no moment in one's life when he has the right of self destruction. There are not many men who have not felt at some time the impulse to end all through death, but a few days later there comes a change, and the cause for self inflicted death is gone, and the man who succumbs to the impulse on Monday, could he undo his work, would be sorry for it when the week end came."

London Docks' Wine Vaults.

It is still possible to get a "tasting order" to the wine vaults of the London docks. In the vaults their miles of casks symmetrically arranged are a wonderful sight, and the casks bear dates which make a connoisseur's eyes glow. The visitor is not a little puzzled and surprised on being provided with a tin oil lamp on the end of a stick, such as was in use 100 years ago. The vaults nowadays are sufficiently if not brilliantly lighted, and the purpose of the lamp, except as a survival of an old custom, is difficult to fathom. The explanation is simple. Careful tally is kept of the number of lamps, for a missing lamp means somebody lost in the vaults who must be sought for before the closing hour.

Plancon's Criticism.

Edouard de Reszke, the distinguished basso, when he sang with the Metropolitan Opera company was about the hardest worked man in the troupe, for he had many calls upon his voice and sang at nearly every performance. Pol Plancon, the great French basso, also a member of the company, sang less than half as often and marveled at the way De Reszke stood the work. One night when both were to sing in "Romeo and Juliet" Plancon, clad in the gorgeous robes of Capulet, strode into De Reszke's dressing room and, gazing at him with disdain, exclaimed: "You, my friend—you are not a singer; you are a horse!"—New York Tribune.

A Hard Headed Prisoner.

In the trial of a negro for horse stealing the judge asked the prisoner:

"Have you any defense?"

"Any er de fence, suh? No, suh. I didn't take de fence. De fence wusn't what I was after."

"I mean," explained the judge, "have you any one to represent you?"

"No, suh. I did vote for Marse William for representative, but he made such a po' showin' in de legislatur' dat dey turned him down w'en he axed ter go back."

"You seem to be a hard headed fellow," remarked the judge.

"Yas, suh, Mistah Judge. You right erbout dat. Ef I hadn't er been so ha'd headed I wouldn't a stole dat hoss."—Atlanta Constitution.

Has One Cent for J. P. Morgan.

If Mr. John Pierpont Morgan of Broad and Wall streets will acknowledge the letter sent him by State Treasurer Hauser recently he can make a cent. Mr. Morgan recently sent his check for $122.23 to the state comptroller in payment of taxes on land he owns in the Adirondacks. The routine of checking up his obligation brought to light the fact that Mr. Morgan only owed $122.22. The comptroller notified the state treasurer, and the latter sent Mr. Morgan a letter advising him of the fact. As soon as Mr. Morgan replies the state treasurer will send him a check five inches long by two inches deep for the sum of one cent.

D. FOSTER UPDIKE'S RATHER AMUSING: I GUESS! ONE OF THOSE THINGS!

Went over to my Brooklyn houses Wednesday, the houses that are to exchange for your Plainfield property, and, of course, had to take in Coney Island. Found some of it missing but there is some left yet, for instance, had one of those things that break your neck to get up to and then you sit down and then go twisting around and around the bends and immediately find yourself on the bottom; well, as usual something funny happened. Just as I got to the top a fat woman sat down, and she started around the bends and I followed in the rear, of course, and when I got part way down I found she had tried to turn a bend in the opposite direction. Well, just as soon as I saw her I tried to polite myself and stop, but no use; I got a jar and she got a bump, and we immediately found ourselves on the bottom. Now what do you think she did She just got right up and gave me a piece of her say so. I thought a minute or two, and as I like to give everybody a square deal I says: "See here Old Gal, we will start that same thing all over again, anymore than I will start first and you follow in the rear, and see if you can catch me." She just looked at me with as much as to say, "You are terribly rude." I says, "See here, are you a Plainfield Real Estate Agent?"

TROLLEY CO. OBEYS

P. S. C. Will Comply With Order For Reduced Fares For School Children.

POLICE AND FIREMEN FREE.

President McCarter Issues a Statement as to the Corporation's Attitude on Public Utilities Bill.

President McCarter, of Public Service Railway Company, this morning gave out the following statement with reference to the attitude of the Company in connection with the question of reduced fares for school children, and free transportation for policemen and firemen.

"Prior to the passage of the recent Public Utilities Law, the company was obligated by provisions in ordinances, to carry school children to and from school at a reduced fare in thirty-three municipalities. It has voluntarily extended this privilege to some seventy other municipalities, making a total of more than one hundred municipalities in the State, in which this practice prevailed.

"Immediately after the act took effect, on May 1st last, the company notified the Public Utility Commission that it had discontinued this practice, having been advised by counsel that the same constituted an unjust discrimination, prohibited by the act, the continuance of which would have rendered the company itself, and its officers and directors, liable to indictment for misdemeanor, if the opinion of its counsel was correct. In this same communication the company stated to the Commission that as a discontinuance of this practice was tantamount to an increased rate of fare, the Commission, under the provisions of the act, if it saw fit, could make an order forbidding such increase, which would thus furnish a method for the speedy adjudication by the courts of the whole question. The Commission acting upon the suggestion contained in the letter, thereupon made an order prohibiting the said increase in the rate of fare, with which order the company at once complied, but sued out a writ of certiorari to test the propriety of the Commission's order.

"The Supreme Court, acting through a single justice, has now sustained the order of the Commission in this respect. As a result thereof, the company feels that it has sufficiently protected itself and its directors from any criminal prosecution for a violation of the act in this respect, and is entirely satisfied to let the matter rest and the order of the Commission will be obeyed without further litigation on the part of the company.

"With regard to the free transportation of policemen and firemen, the facts are these: In only eight of the municipalities served by the company was there any obligation, by ordinance or otherwise, to transport policemen and firemen in uniform, free. Over a long period of years a custom had developed of carrying policemen and firemen free in many other municipalities, where there was no obligation so to do, including the giving of book passes to non-uniformed police officers. In the year 1910 the Legislature passed a law directly prohibiting the free transportation of all municipal officers, except policemen and firemen in uniforms. The Public Utilities law of 1911 re-enacted the prohibition, but struck out the exception premitting the carrying of policemen and firemen in uniform, and the company was advised by its counsel that this latter statute forbade the transportation of all policemen and firemen, whether in uniform or not, under the same penalty to the company and its officers as existed with regard to the transportation of school children at reduced rates. This matter has found its way to the Public Utility Commission, and that Board has made a pronouncement relating thereto in the following language;.

"'The Board does not regard the free transportation without discrimination, on behalf of a municipality, of policemen, firemen and inspectors of Boards of Health in the performance of their public duties, as a violation of the provisions of public laws 1911, Chapter 195, commonly called the Public Utilities Act.'

"Whether this pronouncement is legal cannot be finally determined short of a judicial decision, but the company believes, especially in view of the experience in the school children case, that its motives will not be misunderstood, either to its detriment or to that of its officers, if it complies with this declaration of the Public Utility Board. The only practical way for the company to know whether policemen, firemen and inspectors of Boards of Health are engaged in the performance of public duty, is by the wearing of their respective uniforms. KILLED ON TRACK

John F. Bayer Ground to Death Beneath Cars Near German Valley.

BODY IS HORRIBLY MANGLED.

The Victim, Aged About Twenty-Two, Formerly a Brakeman and Was in Search of Work When He Was Killed.

John Francis Bayer, the twenty-two-year-old son of George Bayer, agent at the Clinton Avenue Station, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon by falling beneath the wheels of a freight train on the High Bridge branch of the Jersey Central near German Valley. His body was so badly mangled identification was almost impossible. His name and address were taken from letters in the pockets of the clothing. The body was cared for at German Valley over night and was brought to Plainfield on the 8:36 train this morning, afterward being removed to Cole's undertaking rooms.

Young Bayer was at one time employed at the Manganese Steel Safe plant but recently had been a brakeman on both the Central and Pennsylvania roads. He was laid off some time ago and for several weeks had done nothing. He left home early yesterday morning and it is believed he had planned to go to Lake Hopatcong to secure a job for the summer. He boarded the north-bound freight at High Bridge and was seated on the end of a car, near German Valley, when the air hose burst on the train, setting all brakes. The sudden jar caused him to lose his balance and he dropped directly on the rails. The accident was witnessed by several people and the train crew was notified.

Besides his father, Bayer is survived by an older brother, George Bayer, Jr., also a step-mother and two step-brothers. One of the latter is Wallace L. Vanderhoof, a train dispatcher, in the Central's ervice, who resides in the Stillman building.

The father was a conductor on the Central for many years but became incapacitated for the work through an accident. He was then appointed agent at Clinton avenue and with his family occupied the apartments in the upper part of the station.

The funeral service will be held at the late residence tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, Thursday morning. Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will be the officiating clergyman.

FLEECED MERCHANTS WHO ORDERED CLOTHES

Representing himself as the agent of an alleged concern, called the Blume Woollen Mills, a man giving his name as J. C. Taylor is alleged to have fleeced a lot of merchants about town last week. Taylor's game was to get $2.50 out of each man who would order a suit of clothes made to order at ridiculously low prices. Many of those who "bit" are keeping quiet about the bunco game, but one of the customers told his troubles to the police.

Taylor is described as being five feet eight inches high, weights 150 pounds, wearing a light suit of clothes and wears eye glasses. He has a smooth face and does a smooth business.

MEN'S CLUB DINES

Grace Church Organization Hears Earnest Thompson Seton and W. S. Besler.

DR. CORBUSIER TOASTMASTER.

Naturalist Explains Boy Scout Movement and Besler Speaks on Railroad Regulation—Rector Also Talks.

Ernest Thompson Seton, the naturalist; W. G. Bessler, vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, were the speakers at the annual banquet of the Men's Club of Grace church held at the parish house last night. About fifty members of the club and their friends gathered about the tables and enjoyed a program of excellent speeches, phonograph selections by J. Paul Nolting, interspersed with comedy magic by L. Water, The Great, while the dinner served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, was one of the best in the history of the club. United States Senator James E. Martine sent a letter of regret.

Ernest Thompson Seton was given a cordial reception. His remarks which were quite informal, were on the subject of the "Boy Scout" movement of which he was one of the originators, and as a result Dr. H. D. Corbusier, who as president of the club, was the toastmaster, suggested that the idea be introduced in this city as a solution to the troublesome boy question.

The speaker said that the impressionable age of the boy is between 14 and 18 years, and as a rule he spent most of his time on the street, often coming in contact with more evil influence than good. He admitted that the church had failed to reach these boys and some other means must be employed. As the result of a great deal of study and planning the scouting movement came into existence and today there is possibly a half-million members, which is rapidly increasing.

"Go to the boy's world," said the speaker. "Accept his ideas. Don't crush a human energy, but divert it in the right direction. Take the boys where they want to go, but direct their plans. Some persons have the idea that the movement is a military one. That is not so. If they knew how I hate that idea they never would believe it to be true.

"Among the most important things impressed on the boy are words of honor, to keep the mind and body clean and thrift, and each member of the movement is expected to do some kind act every day and be practical. The movement is the product of many minds in different parts of the world, having its inception in 1898 and it seems to be working wonderfully well."

Mr. Seton gave a description as to how he tamed a lot of wild boys, at Greenwich, Conn., where he purchased a farm. The boys tried to "freeze him out" with their pranks. He invited them to his farm. At first no one would accept the invitation, but finally eighteen said they would come. What really happened was that forty-two showed up and were entertained from Friday to Monday, in real Indian scout fashion. Mr. Seton explained in detail interesting things about the movement. One of the rules is that a boy to be a member, must have a bank account if it is only twenty-five cents, for this gives him a feeling of independence and the idea of acquiring property is instilled in the mind. At the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Seton answered a number of questions.

"Too much regulation of railroads," was the subject of Mr. Besler's talk and he sought to show how disastrous this is in his opinion to the best management of railroads. Mr. Besler explained that recently the presidents of railroads operating in Pennsylvania were invited to a hearing at the State Capitol, Harrisburg, relative to a bill before the Legislature which seeks to have railroad trains more efficiently manned. The bill, he asserted, is being pushed by organized labor. He read the remarks that he made at the hearing in Harrisburg, as the representative of the New Jersey Central, in which he attempted to prove that the passage of such a measure would not decrease the possibility of accidents and would approximately increase the expenses of the company about $90,000 a year, which would be double the cost of accidents during 1910.

Quoting exact figures as to railroad accidents on the New Jersey Central during 1910, Mr. Besler argued that the increasing of train crews would not bring about the desider result. If it would he said that no railroad company would be so stupid as not to provide the extra help.

GOV. GLENN'S TALK

Noted Temperance Advocate Makes Stirring Plea For Local Option.

PICTURES EVILS OF LIQUOR.

Rev. W. C. Kinsey, Rev. W. A. Knox and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson Each Have a Part in the Program.

The misery that follows in the wake of excessive drinking and the alarming percentage of crime directly and indirectly caused by the sale of liquor were vividly pictured and described by Former Governor Robert B. Glenn, of North Carolina, at an Anti-saloon League meeting in Trinity Reformed church last night. "Local option" was the theme of his discourse and he closed with an urgent appeal for the aid of the Plainfield people in securing the passage of this law in New Jersey. Despite the disagreeable weather conditions a large audience heard the talk.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. W. A. Knox, of Dunellen, after which Rev. Walter C. Kinsey, of Newark, State organizer for the Anti-saloon League, gave an interesting introductory address. In this he related the progress of the anti-saloon movement and exhibited maps showing the areas in various States which had voted themselves dry. New Jersey, he said, is one of three States remaning in which local option is not existent. The fight is now well underway, he said, and with the help of the law-abiding and peace-loving citizens it would soon come to a successful finish.

Former Governor Glenn is one of the South's best known orators and for several years has been using his platform talent in the crusade against rum. He held his audience almost spellbound as he related personal experiences of the awful results of the traffic in liquor, many of them encountered while he was chief executive of the southern State. He cited two cases where appeals had been made to him to commute death sentences to life imprisonment, the persons in both instances being young men who had committed murder while in a drunken passion. The mother of one begged him on her knees to spare her son while the wife of the other, with a babe in her arms, shrieked aloud for intervention in behalf of all that she loved best in the world.

"Put yourself in my position in just these two instances," said Mr. Glenn, "and then let the dreadful truth force itself upon you that neither of these two women would have had to suffer what they did if it had not been for drink. When such results as these come to the notice of the people, is it any wonder that they seek to drive the curse out of the land?"

The speaker drew a very clever word picture in which he carried his audience through the various stages of the rum trade. First he described the saloon, with its foul oaths and obscene stories, lewd pictures and depraved habitues; thence to the home of the drunkard in all its poverty, starvation and distress; from there to the insane asylums, the poor houses and the penetentiaries and lastly to the graves in the cemeteries, of which 112,500 are filled every year by drunkards. The former governor exhibited the picture in all its glaring details, painting it with such accuracy that hardly a dry eye was within the church when he concluded. He asserted that sixty per cent. of all the criminals in the jails were there because of drink; seventy per cent. of the inmates of county poorhouses and thirty-five per cent. of the lunatic asylum patients. He also quoted other statistics which carried great weight in the Anti-Saloon League in its fight for local option.

In conclusion, Mr. Glenn asked for subscriptions to the cause and a generous response was made. The meeting was closed with prayer and benediction by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church. The league is to commence next week an extensive anti-saloon campaign in Warren county.

Harold Knight Honored.

NAB CHECK FORGER

Coachman For E. H. Ladd is Arrested by Flynn and He Makes Confession.

IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Liquor the Cause of Prisoner's Downfall—Forgeries so Good That Victim Could Not Tell Difference.

Charles Richardson, aged thirty-two years, colored, employed for the past three years as a coachman for Edward H. Ladd, Jr., of Stelle avenue, was arrested this morning by Detective-Sergeant John Flynn, on a charge of forging his employer's name on a couple of $10 checks. Mr. Ladd was the complainant and with his counsel, Judge William N. Runyon, appeared against Richardson before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court. The accused was held in $300 for the Grand Jury.

Richardson confessed to the forgery charge, explaining that he had been drinking of late and wanted more money than was coming to him in wages. The forgery is considered one of the most clever in local police records, in fact the signature so closely resembled the good ones that Mr. Ladd had the greatest difficulty in determining which were his own.

The checks used were those of the firm of Ladd & Wood, New York bankers, and it was the cashier in the banking house that first discovered the bad checks through a slight irregularity in the making. The copy of the original followed every little turn and twist peculiar to Mr. Ladd's hand-writing and out of a number that saw the checks scarcely one was able to detect any difference.

Another clever move on the part of Richardson, which served to cover up the forgery was the fact that when Mr. Ladd paid him his wages by check, placing a certain number on it, Richardson would use the next highest number on the forged check. In this way he was able to prevent duplicate numbers for a time. Richardson would present the checks to merchants whom he patronized and they were always accepted without question. So far as known he did not present a check at any of the banks.

Richardson has always borne a good reputation and was fully trusted by Mr. Ladd and his family. This can be judged by the fact that he had access to the house in which way he learned where Mr. Ladd kept his check book. He is a widower and has one child. Richardson will be taken to Elizabeth this afternoon.

ENGAGEMENT TOLD TO DANCE GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick and Miss Mellick gave a delightful dance at the Plainfield County Club last night. The feature of the evening was the announcement of the engagement of Miss Margaret Drayton, daughter of Mrs. John B. Drayton, to Clifford M. Baker. When the guests had assembled, a circle was formed, after small baskets of rose petals had been distributed among the young people, and when the announcement was made by Mr. Mellick, Miss Drayton and Mr. Baker were showered with the petals.

It had been intended to have a platform dance by moonlight on the grounds of the bungalow but owing to the weather it was held in the clubhouse.

SCORES WOMEN'S HATS.

Pastor Causes Stir Seated in Body of Church.

During Children's Day exercises in the Emory Methodist Episcopal church in Jersey City, Sunday night A. C. McCrea, the pastor, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, accupied a seat along with the members of the congregation. At the close of the exercises the pastor made an address in which he said it was the first time in many years he had sat in the body of the church while services were in progress.

"From my experience tonight," he said, "I can sympathize with the men who attend church. I would suggest to the women folks that they leave their hats at home, especially in the hot weather. They will feel more comfortable and the men behind them will not have the bother of constantly bobbing their heads from one side to the other.

Scrappers Fined.

WAR RELIC AS GIFT

It's a Door Knob on Which Colonel Ellsworth Had His Hand When Shot.

OWNED BY J. W. MURRAY, SR.

His Son, Roger Murray, Takes Prized Relic to Washington as Present to General Historical Society.

Roger F. Murray, of Madison avenue, accompanied by his father-in-law, Augustus R. Hetfield, who is well-known as one of the veteran conductors on the Jersey Central, is enjoying a trip to Washington, and the visit at the Capitol is one of double interest by reason of the fact that while there Mr. Murray will present to the General Historical Society of Washington the long end of the door-knob which was used in the hotel at Arlington, where Col. Ellsworth was shot by the landlord in May 1861. Ellsworth was returning from the top of the building, after tearing down the Confederate flag.

This knob was in the door leading from the second to the third floor and Col. Ellsworth had his hand on it when shot. John W. Murray, Sr., of Central avenue, father of Roger F. Murray, was at that time an orderly sergreant in Co. C, 7th Regiment of New York, and he secured the long end of the door-knob, while General McKibben, who was then a private in Co. C, obtained the short end. Mr. Murray has had the relic in his possession until his son departed with it for Washington.

Speaking of the incident today, Mr. Murray said that he did not know where the other end of the knob is at present. He saw General McKibben at the reunion of his regiment in New York in April but it did not occur to him at that time to inquire about the relic, although reference was made to the incident, which was fresh in the minds of both. Mr. Murray said that he prized the knob highly, but it occurred to him that doubtless the historical society would like to have it and when his son planned the trip to Washington, he decided to send it to the society. Mr. Murray stated that he had often thought what an insane act for the landlord at the hotel to have shot Col. Ellsworth, and he never could quite explain it. Col. Ellsworth, instead of sending an orderly after the flag, decided to get it himself, his intention being to present the emblem to President Lincoln.

T. R. Jewett Gets Yale Cup.

Thomas R. Jewett, one of the three graduates at John Leal's School for Boys, this year, is also the winner of the Yale cup, offered by the Plainfield-Yale Club, for the best all-round work in studies and athletics. The cup was presented to Mr. Jewett at th closing exercises yesterday and judging by the applause the decision was a popular one. Mr. Jewett will continue his studies at Princeton University next year.

Hightstown Church Destroyed.

Lightning struck the steeple of the Baptist church at Hightstown, last night, while the commencement exercises of Peddie Institute were in progress and the edifice was practically destroyed, resulting in a loss of $50,000. Shortly after the steeple was hit someone called out "fire," and this caused a panic, in which a number of persons were injured in trying to get out of the building.

S. P. C. A. Honors W. T. Kirk.

The final meeting until September was held yesterday afternoon by the Plainfield branch of the S. P. C. A. when W. T. Kirk was made a life member and Herbert E. Parker was made an honorary member. There were two candidates for membership, Rev. G. R. Maguire and Miss Flora Johnson. The agent, Mrs. S. H. Van Hoesen, who submitted her report, was highly complimented on her work.

Pass Direct Election Bill.

The Senate last night passed the resolution proposing a constitutional amendment for the direct election of Senators. The vote was 64 to 24, which is more than the two-thirds. The Bristow amendment, which retains Federal control over the question of "time, places and manner" of holding elections in the various States was added to the resolution.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., June 5, 1911.

AN ORDINANCE

Relating to the City Treasurer and Regulating the Receipt and Disbursement of City Moneys.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The City Treasurer shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, execute a bond in the sum of Twenty-five Thousand Dollars to the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, conditioned for the true and faithful performance of all the duties of his office, with such freehold security as the Common Council shall approve and direct, which bond shall be submitted to the Common Council for its approval, and, when so approved, shall be deposited with the City Clerk for safe keeping.

Sec. 2. The City Treasurer shall receive all moneys belonging to or in any way appertaining to the City, unless otherwise provided by law, and shall forthwith deposit the same in such bank or banks as the Common Council shall from time to time designate as the depositories of city moneys, in the name of "The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield."

Sec. 3. City moneys, except where otherwise provided by law, shall be disbursed only upon warrants drawn on the City Treasurer as follows:

1) Upon the "Library Fund" such warrants shall be signed by the President and countersigned by the Treasurer of the Board of Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room.

(2) Upon the appropriation for the Board of Health, such warrants shall be signed by the President and countersigned by the Secretary of said Board.

(3) In all other cases, such warrants shall be signed by the President of the Common Council and countersigned by the City Clerk, as Auditor.

Provision may be made by resolution for substitutionary signature and counter signature in case of absence of any or either of the officers named.

In all cases where claims must be submitted to the Mayor for approval or disapproval, the signatures and counter-signatures, original or substitutionary, herein provided for, shall afford plenary evidence that the claim embraced in the warrant has either been approved by the Mayor, or, if disapproved by him, has been ordered to be nevertheless paid. If a claim has been marked "disapproved" by the Mayor and the claim has been ordered to be nevertheless paid, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, that fact, and the date of such action, shall be noted on the claim.

Every warrant drawn on the "Library Fund" shall be accepted in writing by the City Treasurer, if there be sufficient to the credit of that fund in the designated depository in which by law it must be separately kept, and such warrant shall thereupon be honored as a draft or check on that fund.

Every warrant drawn on the appropriation for the Board of Health shall be accepted in writing by the City Treasurer, if there be sufficient funds to the credit of that appropriation, and the City Treasurer shall, in writing, on said warrant, direct payment thereof by a bank, being one of the designated depositories of city moneys; and such warrant shall thereupon be honored as a draft or check on that bank.

Upon every other warrant, if for a claim properly audited, the City Treasurer, if there be sufficient funds wherewith to pay the same, shall, in writing, on said warrant, direct payment thereof by a bank, being one of the designated depositories of city moneys; and such warrant shall thereupon be honored as a draft or check on that bank.

In each case, such direction of payment shall be considered an acceptance of such warrant as a draft on the City Treasurer.

Sec. 4. The City Treasurer shall keep in a suitable book or books in such manner as directed by the Common Council, or its appropriate committee, the separate accounts of the several funds for which moneys shall be received or paid out by him, each under its proper head and title, so that the account of each of these funds shall show at all times the exact amount to the credit or debit of such fund. The Treasurer shall also keep a detailed record of all assessments made or authorized to be made by the Common Council, setting forth the date and purpose of each assessment, the name of persons assessed, the amount assessed against each, and the date of the payment of the same.

Sec. 5. Whenever the Common Council shall authorize money to be borrowed on the credit and in the name of the City in anticipation of the collection of taxes, the City Treasurer shall prepare and sign a note for the amount so authorized to be borrowed, payable at such time as shall be fixed by the Common Council, which note shall likewise be signed by the Mayor, and unless otherwise directed by the Common Council the City Treasurer shall cause such note to be discounted at one of the designated depositories of city moneys; the net proceeds thereof shall be credited to the account of the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield in such bank, and credited by the City Treasurer to the fund for which the money was borrowed. At the maturity of the note so discounted, the amount thereof shall be chargeable against said account.

Sec. 6. The City Treasurer shall render to the Common Council at each of its regular meetings a statement of all moneys received and disbursed by him from the date of his last preceding statement; and at the last meeting in each year he shall render a statement of all moneys received and disbursed by him during the current year, and he shall submit for inspection his books to the Mayor or Common Council or its appropriate committee, or any city officer the Common Council shall designate, whenever requested to do so.

Sec. 7. No claim or demand of any kind against the City, except as by law or this ordinance otherwise provided, shall be paid or directed to be paid by the City Treasurer, unless first regularly allowed and ordered paid by the Common Council, and a statement in writing to that effect duly signed by the City Clerk be filed with the City Treasurer. Upon receiving from the City Clerk said written statement of claims or demands allowed and ordered paid by the Common Council, the City Treasurer shall forthwith prepare warrants for the payment thereof, and have them properly signed as herein provided, and direct payment thereof by a designated depository of city moneys, as herein provided.

Sec. 8. Upon the warrants provided for in the last section being returned to City Treasurer after payment, the same shall be attached to the original claim. All paid warrants shall be filed by the City Treasurer, regularly numbered, and a detailed record of each shall be kept by him. The City Treasurer shall also require proper receipts for all checks or drafts issued by him, and shall file the same in regular order, and safely preserve as vouchers all such receipts as well as the claims and paid warrants hereinbefore first referred to, subject to the orders of the Common Council.

Section 9. All ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith, and particularly the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance relating to the City Treasurer and the payment of City Moneys," approved February 8, 1893, and amended by ordinance approved July 12, 1897, are hereby repealed; but no ordinance or part of ordinance theretofore existing shall be revived by such repeal.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

For the week of June 19th, the management of the Fifth Avenue Theatre have arranged the banner variety bill of the year. The bill will be headed by the wonderful gowns, voice and figure of Truly Shattuck, late star of "A'ma Where Do You Live." Miss Shattuck has all the essentials for vaudeville popularity. In the first place she is decidedly good to look upon; in fact Miss Shattuck is an occular banquet, statuesque, sublimely tall, generous in proportions and graceful in equipoise. Upon her person there has been prodigalized all the art of the modern modiste. Her turn includes a parade of the most stunning gowns ever displayed in a single act. Miss Shattuck has a splendid voice, too, and sings her songs in a most delightful manner.

STATE DRUGGISTS TO MEET AT ASBURY PARK.

What is expected to be the "banner meet" of the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association will be held at the Hotel Brunswick, Asbury Park, June 13, 14, 15 and 16.

The convention will open this evening with a meeting of the executive committee, and this will be followed by the president's reception and an entertainment by the Women's Auxiliary.

On Wednesday the session will begin at 10 o'clock with an address of welcome by Mayor T. Frank Appleby, and the response by the president.

Thursday will be taken up with hearing reports from the legislative committee, from the historian, committee on memorials, committee on United States pharmacopia, committee on adulterations, and the committee on propaganda.

On Friday the order of business will be as follows: Report of committee on membership of the A. Ph. A., report of the committee on president's address, report of the committee for place of meeting of 1912, report of the executive committee, election of new members, miscellaneous business, report of nominating committee, election and installation of officers and the appointment of delegates and local committees by the newly elected president.

OFF TO POLICE CONFERENCE.

Bound for the annual convention of police chiefs at Rochester a party left on the 10:19 o'clock train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad yesterday from Newark.

The police executives had a private car and stops were made in New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Cranford and other New Jersey towns, where others were taken aboard. The entire party is composed of about twenty-five chiefs and former chiefs.

The Newark police commissioners and Secretary Cox of the board, left earlier yesterday morning on a Lackawanna train. Mayor Haussling, of Newark, left later in the day.

TAFT'S SILVER WEDDING TO BE NOTABLE EVENT.

Washington, June 13.—It became known yesterday that the President and Mrs. Taft are planning to make their silver anniversary celebration, on June 19, the greatest social event in the history of the national capital.

For weeks the social branch of the White House executive staff has been working out the details of the plans. The invitations, out yesterday, specify dancing in the East Room, but in connection with this there will be an al fresco reception. It is planned to transform the White House and the grounds into bowers of flowers. Elaborate refreshments will be served. Several thousand guests will be invited, many of them being expected from distant cities.

Many Washingtonians usually included in the White House lists were dismayed yesterday when they learned that, although the cards were out, they had received none. It was discovered later that an automobile used by messengers to carry the invitations broke down, delaying the distribution.

MENS' CLUB DINES

The speaker declared that the persons who attempted to adjust these railroad matters in a majority of cases know nothing of the real facts. They are not experts, he asserted, but "can be classed as 'Dr. Quack.'" If the provisions of the bill in question he said were carried out it would add about 33 1-3 to the expenses of the railroad companies, while the desired result would not be obtained. In conclusion Mr. Besler referred to the Public Utilities Act.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson made a few remarks in closing in which he took occasion to thank the members of the club for the excellent work during the past year and the way in which they had supported the rector in parish activities. He said that he felt proud of the club and of its attainments and wished it continued success in the years to come.

A short business meeting followed when these officers were elected for the coming year: President, W. H. P. Veysey; vice-president, George M. Holstein; secretary, J. Wesley Hegeman; treasurer, C. G. Monroe; executive committee, Dr. H. D. Corbusier, Howard Fleming, E. F. Feickert, J. H. Jewett, and George S. Clay. Henry S. Fullerton was elected a member of the club.

by this declaration of the Board, the company will therefore return to its practice under the act of 1910, of giving free transportation to policemen, firemen and inspectors of Boards of Health when in full uniform, upon the assumption that they are then engaged in performing their public duties."

PRINCETON CAN'T FIND WILSON'S SUCCESSOR.

The trustees of Princeton University met for the last time for that college year yestrday withoute lecting a president to succesor Governor Woodrow Wilson, who resigned at the meeting last October. As the next meeting of the trustees will not be held until October, John Aikman Stewart, of New York, will continue as president pro tempore. He signed yesterday the diplomas for the class of 1911. It is well known that the committee in charge of choosing a successor to Governor Wilson has not come to any agreement. Its report yesterday was simply "progress." No name was considered by the board.

The Poet's Retort.

Joaquin Miller was once overtaken by a countryman, who gave him a long ride. Tired, at length, of conversation, the poet took a novel from his pocket.

"What are you reading?" asked the countryman.

"A novel of Bret Harte's," said Mr. Miller.

"Well, now, I don't see how an immortal being wants to be wasting his time with such stuff."

"Are you quite sure," said the poet, "that I am an immortal being?"

"Of course you are."

"If that is the case," responded Miller, "I don't see why I need be so very economical of my time."—Christian Register.

Hotel's Private Liner.

Weary of listening to the complaints of his patrons touching the difficulty of securing adequate or even comfortable steamship accommodations during the rush season to Europe, the manager of one of New York's big hotels proposes to solve the difficulty by running his own private liner for the benefit of his customers.

The craft is a large luxurious, seagoing yacht, the ocean counterpart, as far as possible, of the land establishment on Fifth avenue, and each passenger will feel that he or she is crossing in a personally owned yacht. The cost is estimated at not more than 15 per cent. above usual rates.

A Model Hired Man.

"Missus, do you need a hired man?"

"Well, yes, I'm looking for a man who can do the chores, sweep, clean the rooms, be polite and never be impudent."

"Say, missus, youse is lookin' for a husband."—Succcess Magazine.

Not Impressed.

"My graduating gown will cost an even hundred."

"I know of a girl who graduated in a two-dollar gown and thus won a husband."

"I don't want a two-dollar husband."

That Being the Case—

"Nice little flat, all right."

"Yes, but we cannot take it. John, it is too small."

"Seems to me it's plenty large."

"Didn't I tell you this morning that hips were coming in fashion again?"

The Improvement.

"I say, wasn't that violin solo magnificent?"

"Rather. I was just thinking how lovely it would sound on the gramophone."—Fliegende Blatter.

Couldn't Be a Liar.

"You will never be able to make her believe that he is a liar."

"I wonder why?"

"I believe that he once told her she was beautiful."

Out to Be.

"I am in favor of a noiseless Fourth."

"Well, I'd be, too, if I had three kids as noisy as your three are."

KITCHELL RE-ELECTED AS CO. K'S CAPTAIN

Officers were elected and other business discussed at the annual meeting of Co. K at the armory last night. The members decided to hold a military camp, a hike and a night bivouac on July 8, the details for which will be announced later. The reports showed the company to be in fine condition financially and otherwise. Following the annual meeting there was the monthly school for the non-commissioned officers. These officers were chosen for the coming year:

Captain, Harry B. Kitchell; treasurer, Lieut. Nathaniel H. Hort; secretary, Sergeant J. B. Conklin; trustees, three years, Lieut. Charles A. Peterson; two years, Sergeant, George L. Apgar; one year, Sergeant LeRoy DeCamp; chairman of armory committee, Sergeant J. A. Dow; chairman of administrative committee, Corporal John Keppler.

ELOPE IN AUTO AND WED AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Atlantic City, June 13.—Speeding here from Washington, D. C., in an automobile to escape her parents' expected attempt to thwart her wedding plans, Miss Editha May Sellhausen, eighteen years old, daughter of Maximillian Sellhausen, late Saturday night, became the bride of Frank Glascox, head of a contracting firm at Washington.

The husband is but twenty-one, and the marriage was objected to on account of the youthfulness of the couple.

Young Mr. Glascox and his brother, Claude, accompanied Miss Sellhausen on the motor trip. Stops were made on the trip in Baltimore, Philadelphia and Camden to obtain a marriage license, but each was fruitless.

At 11 o'clock the ceremony was performed in the parlor of the Hotel Belmont by Magistrate J. S. Jagmetty. Then the bride called up her mother on the long distance telephone and said:

"I am married. Won't you congratulate me?"

But the mother hung up the receiver, refusing to reply.

MATCH ADDS DEATH TO FATAL AUTO COLLISION.

Washington, June 13.—Harry W. Mitchell, of Glencarlyn, Va., and Fred Kitchen, private in the Fifteenth Cavalry at Fort Myer, Va., lost their lives, and three others were severely injured Sunday night when Mitchell's automobile, in which they were riding, collided with a car on the Old Dominion electric line at Rosslyn, Va., across the Potomac River from Washington.

The automobile was turned over when struck by the car. Mitchell was pinned beneath the automobile. People hurried to the aid of the injured. Some one, to see under the overturned machine, struck a match. The wreckage took fire and Mitchell was burned to death.

Kitchen was taken to a hospital, where he died shortly after his arrival.

STATE AUTO CLUBS ARE 'SORE' ON SMITH

The Association Automobile clubs of New Jersey have locked horns with State Motor Vehicle Commissioner J. B. R. Smith, over the matter of reciprocity with other states in auto licenses, and Saturday, in Newark, passed resolutions calling upon Governor Wilson to condemn the step taken by Mr. Smith in calling attention to the fact that Philadelphians and other Pennsylvanians must be arrested as soon as caught in this State without tourists, privileges or annual automobile tags.

Mr. Smith says this is simply an attempt to coerce him, and points to the law and calls attention to the fact that both himself and the governor are sworn to enforce the law, have nothing to do with its making and pledged himself that as long as the law remains as it does on the statute books, he will enforce it, and nobody but the lawmakers can do aught with him.

HUNT HERE FOR GEMS STOLEN FROM CZARINA.

Washington, June 13.—Two Russian secret service men, on a world-wide search for jewels stolen from the Czarina of Russia two months ago, visited Washington yesterday, following a trail that leads through several southern cities. Alexander Rogoff and Ivan Arvak, the detectives, have been in America for two weeks, they say, searching in both Canada and the United States for a trace of the famous necklace known as the "Romanoff pearls," which was part of the loot stolen from the Czarina.

Another party of Russian secret service men are on their way to America to aid in the search, and an American detective agency has been engaged.

COLOMBIANS TO PRISON FOR STABBING AMERICAN.

Bogota, Colombia, June 13.—The two Colombians who, in the summer of 1909, seriously stabbed William B. MacMaster, the American Vice-Consul at Cartagena, were yesterday sentenced to imprisonment, one for fourteen years and the other for six years.

MacMaster is a Colombian by birth but was appointed to his post from New York. At the time of the assault there was some anti-American feeling in Colombia and MacMaster became involved in a dispute with Mario Lara Cordova, an editor, and Abelarde Barrera, resulting in the assault of which the two men were convicted.

JOHNSONS HOLD REUNION.

Morristown, June 13.—Near a spring, which has never been known to go dry in the last fifty years on the farm of the Johnson estate at Littleton, the fourth annual reunion of the Mahlon Johnson Association was held Saturday afternoon. Thirty-six of the members of the association were present. The association includes the descendants of Mahlon Johnson and Sarah Baker Johnson. Henry Vail Condict, of Essex Fells, was re-elected president of the association. The other officers chosen were: Miss Sarah Davis, of Morristown, secretary and treasurer, and Miss Pauline Johnson, of Summit, assistant treasurer.

Resolutions were passed authorizing the appointment of a committee of one to ascertain whether Mahlon Johnson built the first iron plow on the old farm in Littleton. Dr. D. Hunter McAlpin, who at present owns the house on the old Johnson estate, where the reunion was held, was present at the meeting and stated that in case it was ascertained that Mahlon Johnson was the man to build the first iron plow he would see that a tablet was erected in the place on which would be inscribed the fact. Alfred B. Johnson, of Newark, was appointed as the committee to investigate the records. Mrs. H. B. Corwin was appointed as a committee of one to ascertain the date of the erection of the old farmhouse at Littleton. A letter was read from Mrs. Angelina Beck, of Crawfordsville, Ind., who is one of the surviving grandchildren of Mahlon Johnson.

Mrs. Probasco Going Abroad.

Mrs. J. B. Probasco, who has been in this city for a few days since her return from the Pacific coast, will sail for Sweden next Thursday on the steamer "Tietjen," of the Scandinavian line. She expects to return next winter and reside permanently in New York.

LAKE BAIKAL A BIG PUZZLE

Varied and Peculiar Animal Life Found in Body of Water in Central Asia.

The riddle of Lake Baikal, in central Asia, is similar to that of Lake Tanganyika, in central Africa. In both cases a large body of fresh water remote from the ocean contains organisms apparently marine. Both lakes, again, contain a very large number of species not found elsewhere. Lake Baikal contains numerous salmon and seals, as well as three species of herring. It also contains a few mollusca of apparently marine forms.

One of the most remarkable features of the lake, perhaps, is that although it is frozen over for about five months in the year the animal life is extremely abundant and varied. This may be partly accounted for perhaps by the existence of hot springs.

One of the latest attempts to answer the riddle of Lake Baikal is that of the Russian investigator, M. Berg. Of the thirty-three species of fish found in the lake he finds that fourteen are peculiar to it, while nineteen have a wide distribution in Siberia and Europe. Many of these peculiar species are without near relations anywhere. Of the mollusca 90 per cent. are peculiar.

M. Berg does not think the facts demand the hypothesis that the lake was once marine. He believes that it has always been fresh and that the fauna peculiar to it has had a two-fold origin. A part has originated in the lake itself during the long ages of its existence, and the rest is a portion of the prehistoric fresh water fauna of Siberia which it has preserved.—Japan Advertiser.

DALMATIAN ANTS ARE COOKS

They Make Dough From Seeds, Form Cakes and Bake Them in the Sun.

The remarkable habits of the harvester ant have long been known to naturalists. Certain species not only harvest and store in granaries the seeds upon which they feed but actually plant and cultivate an annual crop of their food seeds.

But now a still more wonderful story is told of an ant which is common in Dalmatia, Messor barbarus. According to Professor Neger of the well known forestry school near Dresden, this ant not only cuts leaves and gathers seeds but actually makes bread or biscuit.

The seeds are first sprouted, then carried into the sun and dried, then taken back to the underground chambers, where they are chewed into a dough. The dough is then finally made into tiny cakes, which are baked in the sun, then carefully stored for future use.

From these observations it appears that the art of cookery is not wholly confined to the human race. All cooking is done by the sun, whether in the ripening of fruit or in the baking of bread in a stove. The heat obtained from fuel is simply stored up sunlight set free.

The Arab and the native Mexican speak of ripe fruit as fruit which has been cooked in the sun. The ant has somehow learned the art of sun cookery, the saliva with which it moistens the grain probably taking the place of yeast and sweetening through changes set up by its influence upon starch.—American Medicine.

The Scientific Butler.

Science in its more awful forms is not confined to schoolboy howlers. One of the witty Canon Ainger's stories—quoted in Mr. E. V. Lucas' delightful anthology of letters, entitled "The Second Post"—proves it.

At a country house party a maid was dressing a guest's hair.

"I hope, Parker," said the lady, "you are comfortable in your place?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am," the maid replied, with great warmth. "The society down stairs is so superior. The butler leads the conversation.

"He is a refined man," she continued, with rising enthusiasm. "Indeed, quite scientific. He has been telling us all about evolution, and we quite understand it now.

"He says," the maid concluded, earnestly, "that we are all descended from Darwin."—Youth's Companion.

Question Pertinent.

Doctor Scott, joint parent with Liddell of the well-known Greek Lexicon, was at one time master of Baliol college, Oxford university, and master at all times of quiet sarcasm. A noble lord who had rooms in the buildings which adjoined the master's house and who, contrary to regulations, kept a dog in college, went to complain of the noise made by cats. After he had expatiated for some little time on this grievance, Doctor Scott said, with the gentle, slow drawl which lent additional force to his sallies: "Is that a cat, Lord Donoughmore, that I hear barking on your staircase every night?"

What She Wanted.

Father (to his daughter)—I've brought you a zither for your birthday, my dear, and a book by which you can teach yourself to play on it in a month.

Daughter—But it was the zither teacher I wanted most.

Consolation of an Ex-Champion.

Samson sought consolation.

"At least she didn't ask me if I shaved myself," he mused.

However, he resolved to stick to regular barbers for the future.

JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS FOR WOMEN SUFFRAGE

Jesse Lynch Williams, one of the group of successful authors living at Princeton, is one of the vice-presidents of the New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage, and with him are associated railroad men, bankers, manufacturers, lawyers, artists, and a retired captain of the United States navy. The secretary of the League, to whom applications for membership should be sent, is Dr. Edward S. Krans of 920 Park avenue, Plainfield.

Mr. Williams was asked recently why he had gone into the movement.

"I am glad,' he said, "to serve as an officer of this league in New Jersey because men are quite as much concerned in woman suffrage as the other sex. It is not a woman's cause, but the cause of democracy and humanity. But as it happens, women cannot get the vote without men's consent. Naturally it will be to the advantage of both sexes for women to acquire this privilege and duty with the voluntary aid of the men, rather than despite their smiling indifference or misunderstanding opposition.

"To say that woman should not vote is simply to say that she should not be entrusted with what have always been her natural responsibilities. It is simply to say that we should not let her have the authority necessary to put through the work which we nevertheless turn over to her, and for which we nevertheless hold her accountable. In fine, that her sphere is no longer the home, but merely the house.

"This is not a matter of taste or of opinion; it is a matter of fact and logic. We may not fancy the notion of women voting—that is a matter of taste; and whether she is fitted for the vote is a matter of opinion. The present point is that if she is to do her old-fashioned share of the work of the world, merely as a homemaker and as a housekeeper, the ballot is becoming as necessary now as the broom was once. Even to have a clean house it is necessary to have clean streets. To have clean streets it is necessary to elect a clean mayor. The same may be applied to schools and school boards, health and health boards; in fact, all government is merely housekeeping on a large scale.

"For some departments of this housekeeping men may always remain better qualified than women. For other departments of it women may always remain better qualified than men. But it takes both man and woman to make a home. As Miss Jane Addams says: 'Most of the departments in a modern city can be traced to woman's traditional activities, but in spite of this, so soon as these affairs were turned over to the care of the city they slipped from woman's hands, apparently because they then became matters for collective action and implied the use of the franchise.'

"Now it may be that modern man is capable of attending properly to 'woman's traditional activities,' and his own besides—though thus far he has not proved it. It may be that modern woman is incapable of retaining her ancient share of life's responsibilities—though that has not been proved either. Meanwhile, what are you going to do about it you who believe in the 'old-fashioned wife' and in home as 'woman's sphere?'

"Now is was perfectly natural that there natural functions slipped out of her hands. The vote originally was given only to those who bore arms. Like education, it was not thought needful nor proper for those who bore children. Certain clergymen (who bear neither—but are educated) still urge this eloquently as an unanswerable objection to enfranchising the sex which must pay taxes it cannot regulate, and obey laws it cannot make.

"Such objections are valuable, for the reason that all jokes are valuable, but as arguments they are hardly worth answering. Besides, minds which still hold fast to such ideas are closed like horse-chestnuts—hard to open and hardly worth while.

"Theoretically, whether women want the vote or not has nothing to do with the matter, any more than whether they want children or homes to look after. Practically, however, that objection has everything to do with it; for until women want it badly enough to demand the vote they will not get it. It is silly, however, to look upon it as a mere privilege or added 'right;' it should be regarded as a duty, an obligation, a means to an end—and that end is a 'womanly' one if wifehood, motherhood, and housekeeping are womanly.

"Incidentally, they are demanding it in greater numbers every year. When John Stuart Mill presented his petition to Parliament, it was signed by only 1,499 women. That was in 1866. Thirty years later a similar appeal was made to Parliament by no less thn 257,000 women. The next year there were over 1,200 different petitions in favor of a woman suffrage bill, 800 more than those presented in favor of any other bill. Since that time 400 oue of 670 members of the House of Commons have given pledges to support woman suffrage.

"In America the movement, somewhat delayed, is spreading more quietly. The affair has not become acute. Let us hope that it can remain quiet, can avoid being acute."

KICKER'S WRATH DISARMED

Answer of the Man on the Floor Above With Musical Daughters Was Enough.

"Once," said the flat dweller with musical daughters, "our neighbors living in the flat under us complained; the man of the house down there came up to see me about it.

"'How do you suppose we can live down there,' he said, 'with your daughters forever pounding on the piano in minor, medium and major keys, but mostly in the major, and forever singing at all hours of the day and night songs that seem to be mostly in a high pitch? Your daughters are most estimable young ladies, both, I know, for I have seen them; but I wish you would come down into my flat some time and listen, listen, to that continuous pounding and singing. If it didn't drive you plumb out of your senses I miss my guess.'

"'My dear sir,' I said to him, 'I appreciate your situation, and I thank you for the candid but at the same time kindly courtesy with which you have stated your grievance, but consider.

"'You,' I said to him, 'have between the music and yourself a floor and a ceiling, which must deaden the sound somewhat; but I have to sit here and hear it right in the same apartment with it!'

"He understood; he knew that mine was the greater cross, and he looked at me sympathetically and went away quite mollified."

MOTHER-IN-LAW FOR HIRE

Real One Demanded Carriage, So Groom Rented Another and Got Himself Into Trouble.

In Marseilles the hire of a mother-in-law for a few hours is quoted at one shilling eight pence, which seems quite cheap. The parents of one of a future happy pair were separated. When asked to the wedding to give her consent, the future mother-in-law said: "I will go if a carriage is sent to fetch me; if not, I will stay at home." The carriage was promised, but the day and the hour came, and the carriage did not, and the future mother-in-law stayed at home. "Very well," said the bridegroom-to-be, when he saw that she was not turning up. "I will find another mother-in-law." So he went out into the street and found one for one shilling eight pence. She came to the wedding and duly gave away her "daughter," whom she had never in her life seen before, and the bridegroom and bride were made one.

But they let themselves in for more than they bargained for. A complaint has been lodged and the bride, bridegroom and witnesses are liable to severe penalties for procuring, aiding and abetting, impersonation, forgery in a public deed, and other crimes, while it seems likely that the marriage in French law is null and void, the consent of one of the parents having been given by a sham mother. The one shilling eight pence hired mother-in-law is being looked for by the police.—London Telegraph.

Mexican Rurales.

The corps of Mexican rurales was created in the time of President Benito Juarez. The law which created the rurales fixed the number of seven battalions of 125 men each and a company to be located at Matamoros. The pay of each of the rural police was fixed at $1.12 per day, each to furnish his horse and equipment with no classification as to the character of the mount or the arms which each man was to bear. As a result they were decidedly a body of irregulars with some five per cent. wearing the uniform of the cavalry of that day. Each battalion was divided into two companies, one of seventy and the other of sixty-five men. Their commanders and other officers held the same rating that they do today. Just as at the present time, the rurales were attached to the interior department, but at the same time they were at the disposition of the department of war for service in campaigns.

His Light Didn't Shine.

There was an accident at a railway crossing at night, in which a farmer's cart was struck and demolished and the farmer injured. Counsel for the railway won the case for the defense mainly on account of the testimony of an old colored man, who was stationed at the crossing. When asked if he had swung his lantern as a warning, the old man swore positively: "I surely did." After the trial the lawyer called on the old negro, and complimented him upon his testimony. He said: "Thankee, Marse Jawn, I got along all right; but I was awfully scared, 'cause I was 'fraid dat lawyer man was goin' ter ask me was my lantern lit. De oil done give out befo' de accident."

Speaking on Maxims.

The spender, with an ill-concealed sneer, handed this maxim to the saver: "Some people are so stingy that they are dishonest."

"And by the same token," responded the saver, with a raw laugh, "some people are so liberal that they are dishonest. Count them up, please, and see, in these days of liberal spending, which side has the majority."—Judge.

What a Guide's For.

"Come up to our winter camp for a few days. The shooting is excellent. Plenty of guides."

"Really, old chap, I couldn't shoot a guide."

KEITH OF THE BORDER

A TALE OF THE PLAINS

CHAPTER III

An Arrest

The Santa Fe trail was far too exposed to be safely traveled alone and in broad daylight, but Keith considered it better to put sufficient space between himself and those whom he felt confident were still watching his movements from across the river. How much they might already suspicion his discoveries he possessed no means of knowing, yet, conscious of their own guilt, they might easily feel safer if he were also put out of the way. He had no anticipation of open attack, but must guard against treachery. As he rode, his eyes never left those far-away sand dunes, although he perceived no movement, no black dot even which he could conceive to be a possible enemy. Now that he possessed ample time for thought, the situation became more puzzling. This tragedy which he had accidentally stumbled upon must have had a cause other than blind chance. It was the culmination of a plot, with some reason behind more important than ordinary robbery. Apparently the wagons contained nothing of value, merely the clothing, provisions, and ordinary utensils of an emigrant party. Nor had the victims' pockets been carefully searched. Only the mules had been taken by the raiders, and they would be small booty for such a crime.

The trail, continually skirting the high bluff and bearing farther away from the river, turned sharply into a narrow ravine. There was a considerable break in the rocky barrier here, leading back for perhaps a hundred yards, and the plainsman turned his horse that way, dismounting when out of sight among the boulders. He could rest here until night with little danger of discovery. He lay down on the rocks, pillowing his head on the saddle, but his brain was too active to permit sleeping. Finally he drew the letters from out his pocket, and began examining them. They yielded very little information, those taken from the older man having no envelopes to show to whom they had been addressed. The single document found in the pocket of the other was a memorandum of account at the Pioneer Store at Topeka, charged to John Sibley, and marked paid. This then must have been the younger man's name, as the letters to the other began occasionally "Dear Will." They were missives such as a wife might write to a husband long absent, yet upon a mission of deep interest to both. Keith could not fully determine what this mission might be, as the persons evidently understood each other so thoroughly that mere allusion took the place of detail. Twice the name Phyllis was mentioned, and once a "Fred" was also referred to, but in neither instance clearly enough to reveal the relationship, although the latter appeared to be pleaded for. Certain references caused the belief that these letters had been mailed from some small Missouri town, but no name was mentioned. They were invariably signed "Mary." The only other paper Keith discovered was a brief itinerary of the Santa Fe trail extending as far west as the Raton Mountains, giving the usual camping spots and places where water was accessible. He slipped the papers back into his pocket with a distinct feeling of disappointment, and lay back staring up at the little strip of blue sky. The silence was profound, even his horse standing motionless, and finally he fell asleep.

The sun had disappeared, and even the gray of twilight was fading out of the sky, when Keith returned again to consciousness, aroused by his horse rolling on the soft turf. He awoke thoroughly refreshed, and eager to get away on his long night's ride. A cold lunch, hastily eaten, for a fire would have been dangerous, and he saddled up and was off, trotting out of the narrow ravine and into the broad trail, which could be followed without difficulty under the dull gleam of the stars. Horse and rider were soon at their best, the animal swinging unurged into the long, easy lope of prairie travel, the fresh air fanning the man's face as he leaned forward. Once they halted to drink from a narrow stream, and then pushed on, hour after hour, through the deserted night. Keith had little fear of Indian raiders in that darkness, and every stride of his horse brought him closer to the settlements and further removed from danger. Yet eyes and ears were alert to every shadow and sound. Once, it must have been after midnight, he drew his pony sharply back into a rock shadow at the noise of something approaching from the east. The stage to Santa Fe rattled past, the four mules trotting swiftly, a squad of troopers riding hard behind. It was merely a lumping shadow sweeping swiftly past; he could perceive the dim outlines of driver and guard, the soldiers swaying in their saddles, heard the pounding of hoofs, the creak of axles, and then the apparition disappeared into the black void. He had not called out—what was the use? Those people would never pause to hunt down prairie outlaws, and their guard was sufficient to prevent attack. They acknowledged but one duty—to get the mail through on time.

"Are You Goin' to Raise a Row, or Come Along Quietly?"

The dust of their passing still in the air, Keith rode on, the noise dying away in his rear. As the hours passed, his horse wearied and had to be spurred into the swifter stride, but the man seemed tireless. The sun was an hour high when they climbed the long hill, and loped into Carson City. The cantonment was to the right, but Keith, having no report to make, rode directly ahead down the one long street to a livery corral, leaving his horse there, and sought the nearest restaurant.

Exhausted by a night of high play and deep drinking, the border town was sleeping off its debauch, saloons and gambling dens silent, the streets almost deserted. To Keith, whose former acquaintance with the place had been entirely after nightfall, the view of it now was almost a shock—the miserable shacks, the gaudy saloon fronts, the littered streets, the dingy, unpainted hotel, the dirty flap of canvas, the unoccupied road, the dull prairie sweeping away to the horizon, all composed a hideous picture beneath the sun glare. He could scarcely find a man to attend his horse, and at the restaurant a drowsy Chinaman had to be shaken awake, and frightened into serving him. He sat down to the miserable meal oppressed with disgust—never before had his life seemed so mean, useless, utterly without excuse.

He possessed the appetite of the open, of the normal man in perfect physical health, and he ate heartily, his eyes wandering out of the open window down the long, dismal street. A drunken man lay in front of the "Red Light" saloon sleeping undisturbed; two cur dogs were snarling at each other just beyond over a bone; a movers' wagon was slowly coming in across the open through a cloud of yellow dust. That was all within the radius of vision. For the first time in years the East called him—the old life of cleanliness and respectability. He swore to himself as he tossed the Chinaman pay for his breakfast, and strode out onto the steps. Two men were coming up the street together from the opposite direction—one lean, dark-skinned, with black goatee, the other heavily set with closely trimmed gray beard. Keith knew the latter, and waited, leaning against the door, one hand on his hip.

"Hullo, Bob," he said genially; "they must have routed you out pretty early today."

"They shore did, Jack," was the response. He came up the steps somewhat heavily, his companion stopping below. "The boys raise hell all night, an' then come ter me ter straighten it out in the mawnin'. When did ye git in?"

"An hour ago; had to wake the 'chink' up to get any chuck. Town looks dead."

"Tain't over lively at this time o' day," permitting his blue eyes to wander up the silent street, but instantly bringing them back to Keith's face, "but I reckon it'll wake up later on."

He stood squarely on both feet, and one hand rested on the butt of a revolver. Keith noticed this, wondering vaguely.

"I reckon yer know, Jack, as how I ginerally git what I goes after," said the slow, drawling voice, "an' that I draw 'bout as quick as any o' the boys. They tell me yo're a gun-fighter, but it won't do ye no good ter make a play yere, fer one o' us is sure to git yer—do yer sabe?"

"Get me?" Keith's voice and face expressed astonishment, but not a muscle of his body moved. "What do you mean, Bob—are you fellows after me?"

"Sure thing; got the warrant here," and he tapped the breast of his shirt with his left hand.

The color mounted into the cheeks of the other, his lips grew set and white, and his gray eyes darkened.

"Let it all out, Marshal," he said sternly, "you've got me roped and tied. Now what's the charge?"

Neither man moved, but the one below swung about so as to face them, one hand thrust out of sight beneath the tail of his long coat.

"Make him throw up his hands, Bob," he said sharply.

"Oh, I reckon thar ain't goin' ter be no trouble," returned the marshal genially, yet with no relaxation of attention. "Keith knows me, an' expects a fair deal. Still, maybe I better ask yer to unhitch yer belt, Jack."

A moment Keith seemed to hesitate, plainly puzzled by the situation and endeavoring to see some way of escape; then his lips smiled, and he silently unbooked the belt, handing it over.

"Sure, I know you're square, Hicks," he said, coolly. "And now I've unlimbered, kindly inform me what this is all about."

"I reckon yer don't know."

"No more than an unborn babe. I have been here but an hour."

"That's it: if yer had been longer thar wouldn't be no trouble. Yo're wanted for killin' a couple o' men out at Cimmaron Crossin' early yesterday mornin'."

Keith stared at him too completely astounded for the instant to even speak. Then he gasped.

"For God's sake, Hicks, do you believe that?"

"I'm damned if I know," returned the marshal, doubtfully. "Don't seem like ye'd do it, but the evidence is straight 'nough, an' thar ain't nothin' fer me ter do but take ye in. I ain't no jedge an' jury."

"No, but you ought to have ordinary sense, an' you've known me for three years."

"Sure I have, Jack, but if yee've gone wrong, you won't be the first good man I've seen do it. Anyhow, the evidence is dead agin you, an' I'd arrest my own grand-dad if they give me a warrant agin him."

"What evidence is there?"

"Five men swear they saw ye haulin' the bodies about, and lootin' the pockets."

Then Keith understood, his heart beating rapidly, his teeth clenched to keep back an outburst of passion. So that was their game, was it?—some act of his had awakened the cowardly suspicions of those watching him across the river. They were afraid that he knew them as white men. And they had found a way to safely muzzle him. They must have ridden hard over those sand dunes to have reached Carson City and sworn out this warrant. It was a good trick, likely enough to hang him, if the fellows only stuck to their story. All this flashed through his brain, yet somehow he could not clearly comprehend the full meaning, his mind confused and dazed by this sudden realization of danger. His eyes wandered from the steady gaze of the marshal, who had half drawn his gun fearing resistance, to the man at the bottom of the steps. Suddenly it dawned upon him where he had seen that dark-skinned face, with the black goatee, before—at the faro table of the "Red Light." He gripped his hands together, instantly connecting that sneering, sinister face with the plot.

"Who swore out that warrant?"

"I did, if you need to know," a sarcastic smile revealing a gleam of white teeth, "on the affidavit of others, friends of mine."

"Why are you?"

"I'm mostly called 'Black Bart.'"

That was it; he had the name now—"Black Bart." He straightened up so quickly, his eyes blazing, that the marshal jerked his gun clear.

"See here, Jack," shortly, "are yer goin' to raise a row, or come along quiet?"

As though the words had aroused him from a bad dream, Keith turned to front the stern, bearded face.

"There'll be no row, Bob," he said, quietly. "I'll go with you."

CHAPTER IV.

An Old Acquaintance.

The Carson City lock-up was an improvised affair, although a decidedly popular resort. It was originally a two-room cabin with gable to the street, the front apartment at one time a low groggery, the keeper sleeping in the rear room. Whether sudden death, or financial reverses, had been the cause, the community had in some manner become possessed of the property, and had at once dedicated it to the commonweal. For the purpose thus selected it was rather well adapted, being strongly built, easily guarded, and on the outskirts of the town. With iron grating over the windows, the back door heavily spiked, and the front secured by iron bars, any prisoner once locked within could probably be found when wanted. On the occasion of Keith's arrival, the portion abutting upon the street was occupied by a rather miscellaneous assembly—the drunk and disorderly elements conspicuous—who were awaiting their several calls to appear before a local justice and make answer for various misdeeds. Some were pacing the floor, others sat moodily on benches ranged against the wall, while a few were still peacefully slumbering upon the floor. It was a frowsy, disreputable crowd, evincing but mild curiosity at the arrival of a new prisoner. Keith had barely time to glance about, recognizing no familiarity of face amid the mass peering at him, as he was hustled briskly forward and thrust into the rear room, the heavy door closing behind him with the snap of a spring lock.

He was alone, with only the faintest murmur of voices coming to him through the thick partition. It was a room some twelve feet square, open to the roof, with bare walls, and containing no furniture except a rude bench. Still dazed by the suddenness of his arrest, he sank down upon the seat, leaned his head on his hands, and endeavored to think. It was difficult to get the facts marshalled into any order or to comprehend clearly the situation, yet little by little his brain grasped the main details, and he awoke to a full realization of his condition, of the forces he must war against. The actual murderers of those two men on the trail had had their suspicions aroused by his actions; they believed he guessed something of their foul deed, and had determined to clear themselves by charging the crime directly against him. It was a shrewd trick, and if they only stuck to their story, ought to succeed. He had no evidence, other than his own word, and the marshal had already taken from his pockets the papers belonging to the slain man. He had not found the locket hidden under his shirt, yet a more thorough search would doubtless reveal that also.

Even should the case come to trial, how would it be possible for him to establish innocence, and—would it ever come to trial? Keith knew the character of the frontier, and of Carson City. The inclination of its citizens in such cases was to act first, and reflect later. The law had but slender hold, being respected only when backed by the strong hand, and primitive instincts were always in the ascendency, requiring merely a leader to break forth in open violence. And in this case would there be any lack of leadership? Like a flash his mind reverted to "Black Bart." There was the man capable of inciting a mob. If, for some unknown reason, he had sufficient interest to swear out the warrant and assist in the arrest, he would have equal cause to serve those fellows behind him in other ways. Naturally, they would dread a trial, with its possibility of exposure, and eagerly grasp any opportunity for wiping the slate clean. Their real security from discovery undoubtedly lay in his death, and with the "Red Light" crowd behind them they would experience no trouble in getting a following desperate enough for any purpose.

The longer Keith thought the less he doubted the result. It was not then a problem of defence, but of escape, for he believed now that no opportunity to defend himself would ever be allowed. The arrest was merely part of the plot intended to leave him helpless in the hands of the mob. In this Hicks was in no way blamable—he had merely performed his sworn duty, and would still die, if need be, in defence of his prisoner. He was no tool, but only an instrument they had found means of using.

Keith was essentially a man of action, a fighter by instinct, and so long accustomed to danger that the excitement of it merely put new fire into his veins. Now that he understood exactly what threatened, all numbing feeling of hesitancy and doubt vanished, and he became instantly alive. He would not lie there in that hole waiting for the formation of a mob; nor would he trust in the ability of the marshal to defend him.

Big Sale of Most Up-to-Date Trunks, Bags and Suit Cases Now in Full Swing

If anything this is a better sale of trunks, bags and cases than the great sale of the Peddie Stock we held a year ago—primarily because, when we bought the Peddie stock, we had to take it as an entirety, and it included some styles that were not just what we would have liked to have presented to our patrons; whereas, in this sale, we have made our own choice of lots of trunks, bags and cases and have selected those styles and makes that we knew would appeal to the most particular people such as largely patronize this establishment.

We planned, too, to have these lots of traveling needs arrive just at a time when everybody, more or less, is preparing to take some sort of a vacation or a trip to somewhere, and the need of trunks, bags and suit cases is most keenly felt.

Despite forbidding weather the sale started off yesterday with a rush, and we expect to do a tremendous business thruout the week if the assortments are not too badly broken up early in the sale.

Make sure of getting the things you want by coming as early as possible.

BAIRD'S MEN OUT TO GET SHERIFF'S SCALP.

Atlantic City, June 13.—After an informal conference of politicians here yesterday, it was learned there is likely to be a hot fight in Camden county this fall, the object being to secure the scalp of Sheriff Cooper B. Hatch. He has long been a thorn in the side of the Camden County Republican organization, and his permanent retirement from political activity is sought. Rank and file Republicans are calling upon "Davy" Baird for once and all to have the fight out with Hatch. While Baird is said to be perfectly willing, as usual, he is not saying much.

Hatch, several years ago, gave Baird a good licking with his "Committee of 1002," the only time Baird tasted defeat since assuming the reins of leadership following the death of the late General Sewell.

Later, however, Hatch as Mayor, and his followers, worked hand in glove with the organization. Differences followed and a new break came when Hatch made a demand upon the Republican organization for election expenses, said to be about $20,000. This was refused and ever since then Hatch has been a flank enemy.

The nomination of Hatch for his present office, it is said, was made against the wishes of almost the entire organization of the county who rallied to the support of the then Under-Sheriff William D. Brown. The present trouble grows out of an attempt of the sheriff to name as his successor for the nomination, Under-Sheriff George Starns. Baird's lieutenants are hard against this proposition and the feeling has grown stronger since the sheriff drew the grand jury that indicted and the petit jury that convicted the crooked election officers, several of whom are now serving jail terms.

Those who know the sheriff know him as a fighter. As a club to force the nomination of Starn, it is said, he will very likely announce his candidacy for the State Senatorship to succeed State Senator William J. Bradley, whose term expires this fall.

Senator Bradley has not said he will be a candidate for re-election, but he is recognized as too valuable a man for the Legislature to lose, and friends will try to again induce him to accept the nomination.

At the same time Senator Bradley is said to be adverse to getting into any fight, and in order to pacify Hatch, Starn may be named for the shrievality nomination.

DRIVER MURDERED IN A DISPUTE OVER ROADWAY.

Perth Amboy, June 13—Two drivers had a dispute as to the right of way on a road in Sayreville, and in consequence one is dead and the other is being sought on a charge of murder. The dead man is Benjamin Miller, a peddler, and his alleged assailant is Michael Smith, employed by George Allgair, a liquor dealer of South River.

Miller was stabbed and died shortly after an altercation with Smith. Word of the crime reached Prosecutor Booraem at New Brunswick and he notified Detective Peltier of his staff, who resides here, to go to work on the case. Smith made his escape and from subsequent developments it is believed the detective passed him on his way to the scene of the crime.

Smith was reported as having fled in the direction of this city and from a brother of the man wanted it was learned the fugitive called there during the night to get the address of another brother at Canton, O. The saloon-keeper said his brother left saying he was going to the Western city. The police of Canton were asked to be on the lookout for the man.

GET AFTER TROLLEY CO. FOR A TORN-UP STREET

The action of the Public Service Corporation in blocking upper Somerset street while its track is being relaid and the indifference of the Borough Council in permitting the deplorable condition of affairs were openly criticised at a meeting of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Association, last night. Many of its members make daily use of the thoroughfare on their way to and from town and they asserted that they had been put to great inconvenience by the shutting off of a long stretch. Complaints had been made to the North Plainfield authorities, but they had no apparent effect.

President George Hughes was in the chair and he supplemented the remarks of the speakers by declaring something should be done. As a result a resolution was passed that the legal committee of the association be empowered to go directly before the Public Service official and demand an immediate change in the present state of affairs. This committee is composed of H. O. Hance, Charles F. Neier and F. R. Sterns.

The rebuke of the township association is only one of many that have been made since the trolley work was started. Citizens individually have protested repeatedly to no avail. One prominent boroughite appeared at a Council meeting recently and voiced his opinion of the street committee for its somnolient attitude relative to the matter. At the time Mayor Smalley gave instructions for the committee to have one side of the street kept in passable condition and added that "no" should not be taken for an answer. The citizens failed to notice any change on the part of the corporation.

The association at its meeting last night took up the matter of providing rooms and all accommodations for the Township Committee in the association building at Watchung. It was referred to the house committee for action. President Hughes congratulated the association for its part in the success of "The Indian Legend of Watchung."

HOPE TO END BALDWIN LOCO. WORKS STRIKE.

Philadelphia, June 13.—The attempt of the management of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, where a strike began last week, to resume work in all departments yesterday, met with only partial success. It is estimated that only about 2,000 men out of the 10,000 reported for work. The departments closed yesterday are the boiler, flange, paint and flue shops. The machine shop is working almost normally.

The union leaders directing the strike express hope that an amicable adjustment of differences will soon be reached. A committee of the strikers will seek a conference with the management today.

WEDNESDAY IS FLAG DAY IN NEW JERSEY

It was in the latter part of June, 1776, that Washington visited the little shop of Betsy Ross, in Philadelphia, and asked that patriotic woman to make a flag for the newly born nation, and she made one with thirteen stars and thirteen stripes. The flag was officially adopted by Congress a year afterward, on June 14, 1777, and the anniversary of that event will be Flag Day tomorrow.

The question has been discussed as to when the flag was first used. It was carried into action at the battle of Trenton and Princeton, December 26, 1776, and January 3, 1777, months before Congress adopted the emblem. But the flag was first officially raised over the army as the national flag when Washington lay encamped at Bound Brook. That was on the morning of June 15, 1777. On the previous day Congress had adopted the flag, which had been borne by the army, but had not yet been made the national emblem. It then represented nothing more than the desire of Washington and the handiwork of Betsy Ross. On June 15 it had become the Stars and Stripes.

Bound Brook will tomorrow raise the Betsy Ross flag of thirteen stars and thirteen stripes on the spot where Washington's headquarters stood. The legislature has appropriated $10,000 toward a fund for the erection of a shaft 100 feet high and the purchase of a tract of a square mile on the Watchung Mountains at Bound Brook for a site and public park, and Congress is asked for an appropriation of $100,000. On the shaft will be a 90-feet pole, which is to fly the Stars and Stripes every day in the year, and a beacon light will blaze at night to light it up and remind the traveler that it was there that the Stars and Stripes were first put to the breeze as the adopted emblem of the American republic.—Newark Star.

RECORD TALKS ON UTILITIES MEASURE.

Under the auspices of the West End Improvement Association, of Rutherford, George L. Record, of Jersey City addressed a large audience on progressive issue. He congratulated the local Progressives for their work and expressed the belief that the Bergen Progressives would be victorious at the approaching election.

Mr. Record declared that a united effort on the part of those who believed in independent Republicanism will bring victory. He referred to the spread of the Progressive spirit in politics.

The Jersey City man said it appeared to him that the chief question this year is whether the public utilities law is valid. Speaking of the Utilities Commission, Mr. Record said:

"One member has been appointed by Governor Wilson, and it is presumed that he will take the public view. The others may be expected to take the view of the special interests with which they have been identified for so many years.

"Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the New York case we cannot see how any charge of a dollar for gas can stand in any city of 100,00 population. The corporation will talk about its franchise value, and we have got to make it clear to the rank and file of the people that the alleged franchise value is really a value we, the people, have given to the corporations."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

William Dutcher's Work.

The work of one of the most useful of New Jersey's citizens is finished and his life is drawing to a close at his home in Plainfield. For many years William Dutcher has been the president of the Audubon Society of America and his zeal and great success in the work of protecting our native birds have won for him the esteem of thousands of men and women. Thoughtless boys and some men, chiefly recent immigrants, seek to destroy our feathered songsters, but the great mass of the people love the innocent creatures and love also the man who has devoted a good part of his life to saving them from slaughter. Last fall Mr. Dutcher suffered a stroke of paralysis and he has since been incapacable of any activity. The last issue of Bird Lore, the official organ of the Audubon Society, and which Mr. Dutcher assisted in editing, says of him: "Occasionally he is lifted to a chair, but most of the time he simply lies in bed, where, propped up on pillows, he often looks out over the beautiful garden of his Plainfield home and follows with keen interest the movements of the birds which gather about the nesting-boxes he built for them. His mind seems clear, and his face shows enjoyment when occasionally a letter is read, or some cherished friend is allowed to see him for a few minutes." When the successful fight against shooting pigeons from traps was made in New Jersey six or seven years ago Mr. Dutcher took part in it, as he had in a hundred other legislative battles for the protection of the bird life of America. He had the same vision that came to Henry Bergh and made his life a noble one and his memory ever blessed; and it cannot be doubted that in his consciousness that he obeyed it, and also the command to do it "unto one of the least of these," even to helpless birds and animals, tends to fill his closing days with serenity and satisfaction.—Newark Sunday Call.

Harboring Disorderly Ones.

For permitting disorderly persons in his store on Richmond street near East Third street, on Sundays, Jacob Paritz was fined $10 by Judge DeMeza in police court this morning. A scathing rebuke was administered him and a warning given that a second offense would mean sixty days in jail.

Mrs. A. B. Darby has returned to her home in Grove street, after a sojourn at Wernersville, Pa.

Mrs. E. A. Parse, of Grove street, has been spending a few days at Asbury Park, where she was registered at The Bristol.

I do not believe in straightback advertising for I know of no one who wants a straightback on a hot day. My object in writing the above is to tell you that I will be ready to offer $80,000 of good First Mortgage Bonds on the City Market to be erected in your city soon. The building will cost between $50,000 and $60,000. You know the land value. There will be no water for any one or for sale. Write me and I will cheerfully give you full particulars. Paul H. Burns Gives Instructive Talk on Magic of the Telephone.

FOR KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

The Local Manager of System Tells Some Startling Facts and Figures Regarding the Practical Workings of the Company.

Despite unfavorable weather conditions a large number of members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, and their friends gathered in the council rooms last night and listened to an instructive lecture on "The Wonderland of the Telephone," given by Paul H. Burns, local agent for the New York Telephone Company. Lectures of this kind, more or less technical, are sometimes apt to interest only men in that business, but Mr. Burns had no trouble in holding the close attention of his audience from first to last.

There were a great many interesting and valuable facts presented. The lecture was so prepared that the statistics, instead of being dry and meaningless, readily became a part of the word pictures which portrayed them in connection with other matters of human interest.

It was shown that the telephone business means more than merely the instruments that the public use; that the telephone system is worth $800,000,000 and that the telephone instruments themselves make up but a very small part of this enormous value; that the lead and copper used in the underground system of New York city alone cost more than $50,000,000; that the exchange switch boards and their appurtenances in New York city cost many millions of dollars; that the United States, while having only 5 per cent of the population of the people of the world, has 70 per cent of all the telephones in the world.

The lecture was illustrated by sixty stereopticon views which showed pictures of the men who originated the telephone system and of those responsible for its present and future destiny. There were other slides showing the "Central Offices' in various parts of the world and the valuable development on aerial and underground construction.

The lecture showed that the telephone service is more than putting a telephone in a man's house, and keeping it in repair, it means the maintenance of untold miles of wire, of millions of dollars worth of switchboards, the efficient handling of the business from and to subscribers, the extraordinary cost of storms, and the exigencies of rendering service in densely populated communities, and the great corps of highly skilled workers necessary to operate such an intricate and extensive service.

HENRY L. HALL TO WED MRS. JEAN B. HALLOCK.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Mrs. Jean Bertram Hallock daughter of Mrs. E. N. Erickson, of West Eighth street, and Henry Leslie Hall, also of this city. Only the members of the two families will be present. The couple will reside at 978 Woodland avenue.

Legend Performance Date.

Owing to the soggy condition of the grounds and also to the fact that many of the participants are to attend the closing exercises of the Watchung School, the final performance of "The Indian Legend of Watchung," has been postponed to Saturday night, if it is clear. It it is not clear it will take place on the next fair night.

EMPLOYER'S RISK

The Edge Compensation Law Makes Him Liable For Employes' Injuries.

EFFECTIVE JULY FOURTH.

Features of Important Statute, Copies of Which May Be Obtained Free of State Senator Ackerman.

On the Fourth of July the Edge act, known as the Employers' Liability Law, goes into effect. According to the title of the bill, it is "An Act prescribing the liability of an employer to make compensation for injuries received by an employe in the course of employment, establishing an elective schedule of compensation, and regulating procedure for the determination of liability and compensation thereunder."

Those desiring a copy of this important act may obtain one while they last by addressing Senator E. R. Ackerman, enclosing a two cent stamp to cover postage charges.

The first paragraph of the law says that when personal injury is caused to an employe by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, of which the actual or lawfully imputed negligence of the employer is the natural and proximate cause, he shall receive compensation therefore from his employer, provided the employe was himself not willfully negligent at the time of receiving such injury and the question of whether the employe was willfully negligent shall be one of fact to be submitted to the jury, subject to the usual superintending powers of a court to set aside a verdict rendered contrary to the evidence.

Fellow Employe May Play Part.

The right to compensation under this act shall not be defeated on the ground that the injury was caused in any degree by the negligence of a fellow-employe; or that the injured employe assumed the risk inherent in or incidental to or arising from the failure of the employer to provide and maintain safe premises and suitable appliances.

EARLY MORNING FIRE IN THE HETFIELD ROW

One of the apartments in what is known as the Hetfield row on Arlington avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, was badly damaged by a fire discovered at 4:10 this morning. An alarm was turned in from box 41 and the firemen extinguished the blaze after a half-hour's fight. The loss is about $200, covered by insurance.

The apartment is occupied by two tenants, Richard Harvey and Samuel Brown, colored. Brown occupies the top floor and was alone at the time, his wife being away. He was awakened shortly after 4 o'clock by choking smoke and hurriedly aroused Harvey. They discovered the fire to be in a finished off room in the attic part of the house. The prompt response of the department prevented a bad blaze.

Chief Doane conducted an investigation but could assign no cause for the fire beyond probably mice and matches. Brown carried $500 insurance on his belongings, which were somewhat damaged. There was no loss in Harvey's apartment. The property is owned by J. E. VanDuyne, of Paterson.

PARTY HOST ARRAIGNED ON DISORDERLY CHARGE.

Robert Pruden, of Manning avenue, gave a party at his home last night. The young folks were somewhat noisy in their enjoyment and the neighbors complained of the noise. Marshal Keller notified the host, but the sounds of revelry continued until at late hour. The officer returned at 12:30 and notified Mr. Pruden to appear in court this morning.

Before Recorder Dolliver, Mr. Pruden pleaded not guilty to a disorderly charge and the case was adjourned until tomorrow to allow Marshal Keller to have some of the complaining neighbors in court.

Dentists to Dine.

The Plainfield Dental Society will hold its last banquet and meeting for the season at The Homestead on Washington avenue, tonight. The members have been discussing the question of reviving the State Dental Association and some steps may be taken in that direction soon.

—A large and choice assortment of fresh vegetables, everything one could wish for, will be offered at Neuman Bros. tomorrow.

Miss Dixon left Boonton Monday morning to attend the class day exercises at Princeton University.

A nephew, Clifford G. Dixon, was one of the graduates. Miss Dixon was returning to Boonton, intent on catching the 8 o'clock train out of New York.

IT seems a waste of space to convince anyone that he ought to use Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint in place of the home-made kind. The time it takes to prepare paint in the shop, with imperfect measuring facilities, with possibly ingredients that are impure, to say nothing of time and labor, should be an argument in favor of the use of prepared paint that is unanswerable.

Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint is ready to use the moment the can is opened. It is made after a scientific formula, and is as near perfection as paint can be made. It is always uniform; it covers a given area with a less number of gallons than when inferior paint is used; it will not crack nor peel; it stands up no matter what the weather conditions are.

There are reasons why you should use Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint. We will gladly tell them to you.

Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint is "made up to a standard, not down to a price."

"Because He Was Handy"

a man who was "clearing away rubbish on the property" was called in some years ago to witness a will.

It recently became necessary to produce this witness to prove the will and the estate was subjected to great trouble, a delay of months and much expense before he could be located.

When

Fidelity Trust Co.

is to be named as Trustee or Executor of an estate, we supervise the drawing of the will and attend to all the legal requirements.

When the time comes to probate, this is apt to save much time and expense to an estate.

when the building collapsed. He aided in the rescue of men pinned in. Dr. E. Irving Cronk also assisted. Van Sickle was dead when taken out.

It was brought out that the rescuing party had been compelled to stand upon one body while getting the other out. Mrs. George Van Sickle sobbed as Dr. A. L. Smith told of her husband's death.

POSTAL NOW IN TELEPHONE FIELD

New York, June 14.—Announcement was made Monday at the executive offices of the Postal Telegraph Company that it is to enter the telephone field. As a result of experiments that have just been completed between Salt Lake City, Utah ,and Rno, Nev., and between Reno and San Francisco, its trunk telegraph lines are to be used for telephone messages between those cities.

The Postal has put into operation between Salt Lake City and San Francisco two new lines, which cost $2,000,000. The wires are thicker than a lead pencil and weigh 435 pounds to the mile, instead of 210 and 300 pounds, the standard weight heretofore. This new wire is eventually to supplant the lighter size on all trunk lines of the Postal system and as its mileage is increased the Postal's operation in the telephone field is to extend in pace.

When the telephone experiments were made the wires were being used for the transmission of telegraphic messages between Chicago and San Francisco. Four operators were at work, furthermore, two in each direction, but at the same time men in Salt Lake City and in San Francisco were in conversation with Reno "talking through" the telegraphic messages.

This venture of the postol interests is frankly directed against the Western Union, which is now owned by the American Telegraph and Telephone Company (the Bell system).

Within a fortnight the Bell system has acquired the last independent telephone concern in the intermountain West, the Independent Telephone Company of Utah. This went into bankruptcy in May, and at the sale of its establishment was bought in by the Bell Company.

It was this circumstance that led to the selection of Salt Lake City as the city where the postal should carry out its experiment of invading its rival's field. Stations will be opened throughout Salt Lake City this month. Before the summer is over it is expected that automatic instruments will be in place in stores and residences.

TRIAL, DUE TO DEATHS, BEGUN

New Brunswick, June. 14—William H. Van Sickle was placed on trial here yesterday, on the charge of manslaughter. He is the contractor in charge of the work at the Robert Turton building which collapsed several months ago, costing the lives of two men, George Van Sickle, the foreman, and Pasquale Locandia, a workman.

It is held that the building which had been raised was not properly supported and that this led to its collapse. Alan H. Strong represents the defendant and Prosecutor T. B. Booream the State. In selecting the jury care was exercised to eliminate all New Brunswick men.

Edward R. Carpenter testified to riding past the building in an auto,
